VALUABLES NOT TOUCHED

WOMEN HAD KEYS TO HOME

Joseph Bowne Elwell, 44 years old, a recognized authority on whist and bridge, owner of more than twenty race horses, a successful speculator in the financial district, was shot in the head yesterday morning in the drawing room of his home, 244 West Seventieth Street, and died three hours later in Bellevue Hospital, leaving no clue to the identity of the person who shot him.

That Mr. Elwell was murdered was evidenced by the fact that when found dying by his housekeeper, in an upholstered chair in the drawing room, no trace could be found of the pistol, although the shell from the bullet which was sent through his forehead was found on the floor beside the unconscious man.

Both friends and detectives are convinced the murderer was a close acquaintance and was conversing with Mr. Elwell when he shot him. They believe Mr. Elwell was shot as he sat in the chair, because other furniture in the room was undisturbed and a letter, received from a postman an hour and twenty minutes before he was shot, was found lying at his left side, indicating that he was reading when the bullet was fired.

The letter was from Lloyd Gentry, head trainer for Mr. Elwell at the Latonia race course in Kentucky. It was mailed on June 9, and contained a brief report of the condition of a few of Mr. Elwell's horses and the expenses entailed in maintaining the stable.

Robbery Not Motive for Crime.

Robbery evidently was not the motive for the crime, for $400 in currency and several articles of jewelry valued at upward of $7,000 were found on a bed in Mr. Elwell's room on the third floor of his residence. They lay as he evidently had thrown them when he returned to his home, four hours before, after attending Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic as one of three guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lewisohn of 967 Fifth Avenue.

The theatre party was formed while Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn were hosts to Mrs. Viola Kraus, Mrs. Lewisohn's sister; Mr. Elwell and a Mr. Figurey. Because of statements made by Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn and Mrs. Kraus to Inspector John Cray, the police are convinced that Mr. Elwell was not a suicide.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn and Mrs. Kraus for three hours reviewed the happenings of the night before, from a dinner on the Ritz-Carlton roof through the performance, which the party left between 1:30 and 2 o'clock in the morning. Then Inspector Cray and Captains Arthur Carey and Thomas F. Walsh, directing the detectives in the case, declared Mr. Elwell had not given even the slight hint of business or personal troubles that might lead him to self-destruction.

Chauffeur Supplies a Clue.

It was learned last night that the detectives were working on one clue, however, which may be productive of results. Edwin Rhodes of 122 West Sixty-first Street, who had been Mr. Elwell's chauffeur and was familiar with his habits, told the detectives that several women acquaintances of Mr. Elwell possessed keys to the Elwell house and that they entered the house at will.

Rhodes, it is understood, gave the police the names and addresses of the women, but up to 7 o'clock in the evening they had not found any of them.

Mr. Elwell's home is a four-story and basement granite front building on the south side of West Seventieth Street, between Broadway and West End Avenue. It is one of a row of eight houses of the kind, the windows of the drawing rooms on the ground floor being protected from intruders by curled iron bars about an inch square. The main entrance to Mr. Elwell's home has a vestibule about four feet long and leads to a glass panelled door openings on the Candidates Stayed in Rooms During Nominating Speeches

CHICAGO, June 11.—While the nominating speeches were being made at the Coliseum today the leading candidates were in their hotel rooms, but all were in constant touch by telephone with the convention hall.

Senator Johnson was closeted with several of his advisers at his headquarters. General Wood arrived in the city from Fort Sheridan and called about him the men who were to direct the fight on the floor of the convention. After they had gone to the convention the General held to his room. Governor Lowden used the early hours of the day for conferences with his chiefs and then also adjourned to his apartments.

So far as ascertained none of the announced candidates, with the exception of Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania, visited the Coliseum during the day. Governor Sproul appeared there before the convention opened, but returned to his hotel.

HARDING MEETS OHIO MEN

Supporters Talk Confidently —Sproul Says He Expects Gains.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—General Wood was hurriedly summoned to the Congress Hotel after the result of the fourth ballot was announced. He spent most of the night in a suite, reserved for him since convention activities began, pleading with delegates, pledged to him, to stand fast in the balloting tomorrow.

Among his campaign managers there was much speculation as to where Johnson would throw such of his strength as could be used in that way. Some lieutenants of Wood expressed hope that he might use his influence in favor of the General, to block the chances of Lowden to become the nominee.

Tonight, after the convention adjourned, the Michigan delegation, whose loyalty to Johnson had been a matter of doubt, met and decided to stick to the Californian for at least another ballot, and possibly two, at tomorrow's session. Wood expected to get the votes of the Michigan delegates after their deserting Johnson, but it was predicted tonight that after the break the thirty Michigan men would split up pretty evenly between Wood and Lowden.

Late tonight the lobbies of the Congress Hotel and the corridors along which the candidates' headquarters are strung were the scene of ceaseless activity, with delegates scurrying hither and thither in an effort to make converts for the candidates of their choice.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, who with the exception of Chauncey M. Depew and one other, is the oldest delegate here, was making the rounds of some of the State headquarters, doing missionary work for Lowden. He leaned on the arms of two fellow delegates from Illinois.

Dr. Butler does not think he is eliminated from the Presidential race. He believes that the New York delegation, hopelessly at odds over Wood and Lowden, must unite upon him as the compromise candidate. Dr. Butler's brother, Henry, who has been in charge of the campaign here, said:

"Dr. Butler is still very much in the race. When the leading candidates are eliminated the delegates will be willing to accept Dr. Butler as the one man who can lead the party to success in November. We look for a break to our candidate on the first or second ballot tomorrow."

Senator Poindexter said tonight:

"So far the balloting has followed exactly the lines we expected. Of course there are no certainties in such a situation but what we have predicted all along has been that the leading candidates in the beginning of the balloting would so divide the vote as to create a deadlock.

"I apprehend that both General Wood and Governor Lowden will somewhat increase their vote in the next two ballots, but I do not anticipate that at the utmost extreme either one of them will receive 400 votes. That is 38 votes short of a majority.

"Inevitably the delegates, seeing this situation, will, in the effort to make a nomination, go to other candidates. It is possible and indeed probable that combinations will be formed, creating new alignments, which in turn will lead to new deadlocks. In my opinion it will be some time before a nomination is reached.

"The object of the convention undoubtedly will be to agree upon such a

CHICAGO, Saturday, June 12, 2 A. M. (4 A. M. New York time).—After they had been conferring until after midnight without result, some of the Republican leaders expressed the opinion that the situation over the Presidential nomination was so confused that it might be necessary to continue the convention into next week. If the convention does not finish its work Saturday night, it probably will adjourn until Monday.

CHICAGO, Saturday, June 12 (Associated Press).—The leaders who took part in the all-night conferences were in accord that Wood and Lowden must further try out their strength today before efforts to concentrate on a dark horse could be successful.

The main difficulty has been the refusal of minor candidates to sacrifice their opportunities until they can receive reasonable assurances that their votes will furnish the necessary majority to some candidate who can win. Chief among those who look for success in case of a deadlock are Harding, Sproul and Coolidge.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The effort to make deals to swing the Republican nomination for the Presidency is under way tonight. Groups of leaders have been conferring all night, but no definite result has been reached.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah emerged from the conference at the Blackstone at 2 o'clock this (Saturday) morning in search of Senator Warren G. Harding, who had gone up in an elevator just before Mr. Smoot came down.

Mr. Smoot was asked if Governor Lowden had not about reached his maximum number of votes.

"Oh, no," replied Senator Smoot. "He will get a lot more votes. He will get more votes than General Wood."

"How about Senator Harding?" was asked.

"The speech nominating Senator Harding was well received," he replied.

"When will this reported accession of strength for Senator Harding develop?"

"If it develops at all," Senator Smoot replied, "it will be early, on the second or third ballot this morning."

Senator James E. Watson of Indiana appeared in the Blackstone lobby, fresh from the conference, just ahead of Senator Smoot. He said that nothing had been accomplished and continued:

"In my opinion the nomination lies between Wood, Lowden and Harding. If it should go beyond that group I do not know who will be the nominee."

The main conference of the Old Guard tonight at the Blackstone is attended by Senators Lodge, Watson, Wadsworth, New and Smoot. Senator McCormick, who is aligned with the Johnson-Borah group, was on hand for a few minutes, but he departed about midnight to join Mr. Borah, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Kenyon at the Congress Hotel. It is understood that Mr. McCormick is acting as an emissary between the two groups, Old Guard on the one hand and Progressives on the other.

Big Gain for Sproul Seen.

Tonight all the talk of a compromise candidate favored Governor Sproul. A tremendous impetus has been given to his candidacy by sentiment in his favor in the New York delegation, which, with its eighty-eight votes, will have great influence in determining the outcome.

There are indications that the Lowden and Wood men in the New York delegation are willing to unite on Sproul if neither of their candidates gets near the nomination in tomorrow's balloting. This block, with the heavy vote of Pennsylvania, would have an influence in Sproul's favor not hard to estimate.

Unless Sproul obtains the unquestioned approval of Senator Penrose he may advance no further. This he has not received. Half a dozen telephone requests have failed to persuade Penrose to in-

Leaders Seek Harding as Vice President; He Files Notice He Will Run for Senator

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 11.—Senator Harding filed his declaration as a candidate for re-election as United States Senator from Ohio at 11:58 o'clock tonight, two minutes before the expiration of the time limit.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11—At a late hour tonight an effort was being made to induce Senator Harding to take the nomination for Vice President.

It is the purpose of those behind this plan, and many of the national and State leaders are believed to be concerned in it, to put Harding on the ticket even if a Westerner is nominated for President. The leaders want Harding for the strength he will add to the ticket in Ohio, which the Democrats carried in 1916.

In reply to a direct question one of those having knowledge of the movement said that if Lowden were nominated Harding would still have the offer of the Vice Presidency, in suite of the fact that Lowden's state and Harding's are both Middle West.

When asked tonight whether he would be a candidate for Vice President, Mr. Harding said:

"I am the most likely candidate for President tonight."

Ex-Governor Herrick said tonight that the matter of supporting Harding for the Vice Presidential nomination was not mentioned in tonight's conference of Ohio delegates.

BORAH WILL BOLT LOWDEN OR WOOD

JOHNSON STILL HAS HOPE

Will Fight On, but Is Considering a "Dark Horse" If He Has to Yield.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Senator Borah sent men with megaphones into the hotel lobbies this evening to announce that a meeting would be held in the Assembly Room of the Auditorium Hotel at once to consider the danger of nominating a candidate who would not have a clean record. Delegates were asked specifically to attend. When Mr. Borah appeared to address those who had responded to the megaphone summons, he found the space crowded. Many in the audience were delegates.

Mr. Borah said the crowd that had come to the convention to prevent the United States from being sold to European Powers had been successful and it was now necessary for them to prevent the selling of the province of the United States to some one who would not have clean hands.

Speaking for himself, and presumably for Senator Johnson, he said he would not support a candidate for President who had been shown to have indulged in the lavish use of money in his effort to get the Presidential nomination. He said he might be under the necessity of going before the convention and asking such men what they did with the big funds used in their behalf.

He would support any man nominated by the convention who was clean, he continued, but any man who was not clean would not receive his support.

The remarks of the Idaho Senator were aimed at Wood and Lowden. They were interpreted as a last attempt to stop the nomination of one or the other of the leading candidates. Borah got plenty of applause.

After the meeting Mr. Borah said that he and Senator Johnson would begin immediately a series of conferences with others and expected them to last all night. He would not say with whom the conferences were to be held. Mr. Borah also indicated that he would go on the floor of the convention tomorrow morning and make a speech intended to prevent the nomination of any man who could not go before the public with clean hands.

The enmity of the Johnson-Borah faction to Governor Lowden's candidacy developed rapidly today as a result of reports carried to the two Senators that the old-time leaders were collecting their forces to nominate Lowden. Borah, it is said, took the stand that a candidate who had such influences behind him should not be named, especially after the revelations concerning the primary campaign expenditures and methods of selecting delegates.

The news of the direct fight which Johnson and Borah had staged on Lowden came as a blow to the Governor's forces as they had been trying to hope that the Senators would confine their real attack to General Wood.

In his speech in the Auditorium Assembly Room, Senator Borah said that the Republican National Convention was being debauched by the use of money to buy delegates for two leading candidates. He declared in specific terms that the Senate Investigating Committee on Presidential Primary Expenditures would probe into this condition just as it is continuing its probe into the entire situation.

He has been Republican all his life, continued Mr. Borah, and had even supported William Howard Taft in 1912, which "was going some."

"I am willing," said the Senator, "to support any man who is clean and may be nominated by this Republican Con-

NEW YORKERS MAY SWING TO SPROUL

Delegation, Deadlocked on Wood and Lowden, Would Take Him as Compromise.

BUT ONLY IF CHOICES FAIL

Lowden Forces Count On More New York Votes—Wood Men to Fight While There's Hope.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The New York delegation is deadlocked between Wood and Lowden. As the situation stands late tonight there is no possibility of a compromise. The next choice of both elements is Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania delegation will stand pat on Sproul, and the upshot of the whole situation, so far as these two States are concerned, is that they will combine and cast 104 votes for Sproul.

This will not be done, however, unless it has been clearly demonstrated that neither Wood nor Lowden has a chance to get the nomination. How many ballots will be needed to determine this is just a matter of speculation. The Wood men have shot their bolt so far as New York is concerned. At the outside they cannot get more than half a dozen more votes in the delegation. This will mean between twenty-five or thirty votes for Wood. The Lowden men can get ten or twelve more votes. This will mean possibly fifty votes for Lowden. The remainder will be divided among Hoover, Harding and Johnson.

But when the right time comes the Hoover, Harding and Johnson men will vote for Sproul, and the vote of the New York delegation will be unanimous for the Pennsylvania Governor. This decision was reached at a conference tonight of the New York leaders. At this conference it was clearly determined that certain delegates would not take Wood under any circumstance and it was equally clear that the Wood men would not go to Lowden. The compromise on Sproul was the only solution in sight.

The Wood men among the New York delegates were bitter in their condemnation of the action of several of the delegates who had promised to come over to their candidate. They had figured on making a much better showing, but the organization was firm for Lowden and whipped the Wood men into line. These Wood men had promised Norman Gould, the Eastern manager of the Wood campaign, and other Wood workers that they would go over to Wood when the break from Nicholas Murray Butler came.

Instead, these Wood delegates responded to the orders sent out by Senator James W. Wadsworth, Charles D. Hilles and others who want Lowden. This was the meaning of the gain which Lowden showed on the fourth ballot. But the organization leaders know tonight that they cannot obtain any more votes for Lowden, and that the only solution in sight is to swing to another candidate. They are satisfied with Sproul and so are the Wood men.

The switch to Sproul will not be made by either the Wood or the Lowden men until several more ballots have determined beyond all doubt that there is no chance of either of their own candidates being nominated. The Wood men will probably hold out the longer, for at the conferences the Wood leaders produced facts and figures to show that the full strength of the General had not yet been shown. These leaders declared that at least three States which had voted for other choices were behind Wood and would go to him when the word to do so was given. The Wood delegates in the New York delegation will wait until the Wood leaders make good on the proposition.

If it should be demonstrated that General Wood has still a chance to get the nomination, the New York Wood men will stick. But as soon as the Wood

BORAH ATTACK ALSO FEARED

TWO LEADERS MAKE GAINS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—After four ineffectual ballots on the nomination of a candidate for President of the United States, the Republican National Convention adjourned this evening until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

General Leonard Wood led all the contestants from first to last, receiving 314½ votes on the fourth ballot, a gain of 27 over the initial ballot.

Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois had 289 votes on the fourth ballot, a gain of 67½ over the first.

Senator Hiram Johnson made a gain of 7 and stood at 140½ votes on the final tally.

Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio made a poor showing, gaining only six votes over the first ballot, and ending with sixty-one and one-half votes to his credit. Various other prominent Republicans received votes.

Old Guard Manoeuvres for Lowden.

The four ballots showed that in this intense contest for the prize which the convention has to bestow it is Wood against the field. Leading Republicans who have always trained with the Old Guard are seeking Wood's defeat. Their candidate is Lowden, as today's balloting proved. Whether they can bring about his nomination is a matter that may be determined tonight at many conferences between chiefs of various delegations with the object of nominating Lowden or some man other than Wood.

It is the desire and intention of the party chiefs to bring about the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President tomorrow and adjourn the convention sine die by Saturday night.

Those who look upon Lowden as the candidate who would represent their aspirations are encouraged over what happened in the convention this afternoon. But there is an undercurrent of feeling that it might not be wise to take a man who will be accused of having sought to influence his nomination by a lavish use of his great private means and whose managers have been charged with paying considerable sums to convention delegates. Therein lies Lowden's danger.

Managers Shift Plans.

When the convention assembled at ten o'clock this morning, it was the plan of General Wood's managers to bring about balloting before the day was over and keep the convention at it until some definite result had been achieved. They were confident that Wood had an excellent chance. They believed that he would gain materially over Lowden as the balloting proceeded and they hoped that after several ballots had demonstrated this, delegates would begin to flock to the Wood side.

Everything went to show that Wood was assured of considerable reserve strength that would assert itself on each successive ballot and give impressive evidence that the General was fast gaining the support of delegates whose ultimate favorite for the nomination had not been disclosed.

But things turned out differently. The Lowden forces were understood to favor taking a couple of ballots and then bringing about an adjournment until tomorrow, hoping that arrangements could be reached over night that would result in the selection of their candidate.

The second ballot, which gave Lowden 289½ votes, a gain of 48, and Wood 314½, a gain of only 2, caused the Lowdenites to change their plan. They sought to prevent an adjournment, while the Wood management was anxious to have the convention adjourn without delay.

Refused to Quit After Two Ballots.

It was a Sproul supporter, however, who attempted to bring about an adjournment. Attorney General Shaeffer, of Pennsylvania, an ardent supporter of the Governor of his State, moved after the result of the second ballot had been announced that the convention adjourn until tomorrow.

The convention would have none of it.

Delegates wanted to finish up their work and go home. Many of them are feeling the high cost of living in Chicago during the convention period and each day that the convention is prolonged means considerable to them in a financial way. A great roar of "noes" went up when the question was put, and Chairman Lodge directed the balloting to proceed.

Two more ballots convinced the leading supporters of most of the candidates that no effective result could be reached tonight. Wood, the leader at the balloting, was nearly 100 votes short of the necessary majority. The votes for all the other candidates except Lowden and Johnson were of the scattering variety. Nicholas Murray Butler held only part of New York's delegation. Pennsylvania stuck to Governor Sproul. There was little disposition on the part of the State delegations to break away from favorite sons.

To end the convention with as little delay as possible conferences and deals were necessary and that was the reason the leaders finally decided to postpone the balloting until tomorrow.

Borah Threatened Jarring Speech.

There was another reason for the postponement. Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Hiram Johnson's chief advocate, had threatened openly to take the platform and make a sensational speech that would not tend to create party harmony. His topic was to be the expenditure of large sums of money in the Republican pre-convention campaign.

While the allegations that Lowden delegates had received money and the admission of Lowden's campaign managers that the Governor had spent nearly $400,000 of his private means to further his effort to get the Presidential nomination gave Borah his principal ammunition, it was well understood that his remarks would be aimed also at the large expenditures in General Wood's campaign.

Johnson and Borah are determined that neither Wood nor Lowden shall have the prize.

Borah thought of making his sensational address after the second ballot. He decided, however, that the delegates were then in no mood to hear anything that would interrupt the progress of the balloting and bided his time. Others decrying leading positions in the convention hoped, of course, that he would not furnish his sensation.

From all appearances it is a moderately conservative convention. It also seems to be stampede-proof. The changes between the first and fourth ballots were comparatively negligible as marking any material progress toward the necessary majority for any candidate. Pennsylvania stood almost solidly for Sproul throughout the balloting. New York's delegation was split asunder after, most of its members had cast a complimentary vote for Nicholas Murray Butler, and there was no solidification of the delegation in the interest of any one candidate. Those Ohio delegates who had been instructed in the preference primary to vote for Harding stuck to him.

Vote on Adjournment Doubted.

Conferences of Borah and other Senators with National Committeemen Hert of Kentucky and Warren of Michigan, leaders of the Lowden forces, resulted in a movement to have the convention adjourn, or, rather, to try out the delegates to see if they were in the mood for adjournment. Senator Reed Smoot of Utah made the motion. It was put by Chairman Lodge. A loud chorus of "Ayes" went up. What appeared to many listeners to be a still louder concerted shout of "No" followed.

"The convention stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock," said Senator Lodge.

It may have been a demonstration of steam roller methods, but if there was any dissatisfaction its vocal demonstration was drowned in the noise of delegates and spectators leaving the convention hall.

Balloting Follows Nominating Speeches.

As soon as the nominating speeches ended at 5 o'clock this afternoon Senator Lodge, permanent Chairman of the Republican National Convention, announced that balloting would begin. Relief was echoed in a great yell from the sweltering delegates and galleries. Nobody apparently wanted to take a recess, although the crowd had been in the Coliseum continuously for nearly eight hours.

When Alabama was called a great cheer went up, but the vote showed how the States were going to be split on the first ballot. The vote stood Wood 4, Johnson 3 and Harding 1. The first big cheer came when California announced twenty-six votes for Johnson. The calling of the other States came in rapid-fire order, but there were few surprises, it being generally known that the first ballot would show the States well divided.

Delaware gave its six votes to du Pont, but nobody seemed very much impressed and Georgia asked to be passed, but cries of "no, no" went up and the vote was given. It resulted in 9 for Lowden and 8 for Wood. Idaho gave Borah 8 votes, while Illinois showed its delegation to be widely split, 5 going to Johnson, 14 to Wood and 41 to Lowden, the announcement bringing a great cheer from the Lowden crowd.

The cheer was immediately followed by another from the Wood crowd when Indiana cast 23 votes for the General. Iowa gave its entire delegation of 26 to Lowden, while Kentucky showed a division, although the bulk, 20, went to Lowden. Maine gave Hoover his first vote. Michigan got a cheer by giving 30 of her votes to Johnson. Missouri was not ready, and asked to be passed temporarily. There were hisses from all over the house. "Count the cash," came a yell from the gallery, and laughter swept the building. The Missouri delegates did not seem to mind, however, and the Chairman of the delegation announced that Wood had 4½, Lowden 18, Johnson 3, Harding 8, Sproul 5½ and Sutherland 1. New Jersey gave Johnson 11 and Wood 17.

New York Delegation Splits Up.

A hush fell over the great crowd when New York was called. Senator James W. Wadsworth, the Chairman of the delegation, stood up and announced the division as follows: Poindexter 1, Harding 2, Coolidge 2, Lowden 2, Hoover 2, Wood 10 and Butler 68. Johnson got no votes in the New York delegation, and those for Harding and Coolidge caused some surprised. Three were expected to go to Hoover—those of Judge Miller, William L. Ward and James J. Wells of Westchester. All efforts made throughout the day to line up the New York delegation for any candidate proved a failure, and Senator Wadsworth gave up the job in despair. Dr. Butler expected at least 75 votes on the first ballot.

The Oregon vote was the first to be challenged by one of its delegates. The delegation was polled and showed one vote for Wood and five for Johnson.

Pennsylvania cast 76 votes for Sproul and there was a loud cheer.

When the result of the first ballot was announced something between a cheer and a groan went up from the floor. The sweltering delegates had hoped their troubles would be ended on the first ballot and that they would be able to get out of the killing heat and back home. The Wood crowd gave a tremendous cheer when it was announced that the General had received 287½ votes.

"No candidate having received enough votes on the first ballot to elect, the clerk will proceed to take a second ballot," droned the Chairman, and a second calling of the States began immediately.

Some Switches on Second Ballot.

On the second ballot there were a number of switches, each announcement of a change being greeted with cheers or yells of derision. Everyone seemed to want to see what New York would do on the second ballot and when it was announced it showed a gain for Wood, Lowden and Johnson and a big loss for Butler, who dropped from 68 votes to 49.

"Good-bye Butler, he's struck the chutes!" yelled a New York delegate. The crowd laughed.

Lowden gained 14 votes on the second New York ballot, Coolidge 1 vote, Wood 9 and Johnson 4. Lowden got all of Kentucky's votes on the second ballot.

The Lowden supporters soon discovered that their candidate was gaining on the second ballot and the cheering sposequently increased at each announcement. As on the first ballot, the announcement that Wisconsin cast a majority of its votes for La Follette brought jeers and hisses from the galleries.

Lowden made gains in Arkansas, Kentucky, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Texas.

While the balloting was going on the crowd increased despite the terrific heat, several hundred spectators standing in the already overcrowded galleries. At 5:30 o'clock Senator Lodge ordered the aisles cleared, and the Secretary, Lafe Pierson, read the result of the second ballot. Wood showed a gain of but 2 votes, while Lowden's gain amounted to 24. The Lowden men were correspondingly jubilant.

The announcement made, William L. Pfeiffer, a Pennsylvania delegate, moved that an adjournment be taken until 10 o'clock in the morning. There was a storm of "Noes," but a Lowden delegate in the New York contingent seconded the motion. William L. Ward of New York moved an amendment that the balloting be continued. Chairman Lodge put the question to the convention and those opposed to an adjournment were so unmistakably in the majority that Senator Lodge ordered the convention to proceed. The third ballot was immediately ordered to be taken.

Groups Try to Out-Yell Each Other.

On the third ballot there were changes all along the line, but it soon became evident that the switches would not be large enough to change the result. Interest hung upon the announcements of the Chairmen of the various delegations, the Lowden and Wood enthusiasts trying to out-yell each other at every gain.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania and ex-Senator Watson of Indiana got a vote or two on this ballot and Butler of New York continued to lose. When the roll call was finished Senator Wadsworth announced a correction in the vote of the delegation, Butler receiving 25 and not 26 votes. Butler got no votes outside the New York delegation.

The third ballot showed gains for Wood, Johnson and Lowden. Wood received 303, Lowden, 262½ and Johnson 148. Hoover got 5½.

As soon as the result of the ballot was announced a Johnson delegate from California was on his feet to demand an adjournment. Again there were cries of "No," but the Johnson man obtained a roll call. Two States, Pennsylvania and Washington, seconded the motion, and as this was all that was necessary to have the motion in order, Chairman Lodge ordered the roll call taken.

The strategy of the Wood and Lowden opponents was evident. As both candidates showed a gain of strength, the Johnson men wanted an adjournment so as to head off the evident swing to the two leading candidates and to have time to stiffen up their own forces.

The temper of the delegates, however, was against any adjournment. They wanted no more delay, and, to put it throughout with it. They had suffered all day in the heat, and wanted the thing ended if they had to stay all night. The feeling of the delegates was reflected in the vote. For adjournment there were 376½ votes and against 370½.

During the fourth ballot each slight change was followed by applause from the groups affected. The first big outburst came from the Lowden men when their candidate got 32 New York votes and Wood only 30, a gain of 4 in the delegation for Lowden and the loss of a like number for Wood. Gains and losses for the whole, however, on the fourth, his total rising to 314½ and Lowden's to 250. The count of the others did not change much.

Then came another motion to adjourn, this time from Senator Smoot, and it was lost by a viva voce vote.

Balloting will continue at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

HOURS OF SPEECHES HEARD AT SESSION

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Amid damp heat that kept 14,000 men and women fretting through the nine-hour continuous session of the Republican National Convention today, no occasional moment of thrill or picturesque sideplay kept the convention from becoming merely an endurance test for speechmakers and a monotony of machine-made demonstrations.

There was a feather shower, staged by the Wood contingent. As the name of the General was placed in nomination, there fluttered down from a dozen points under the roof myriads of the red, green and blue plumes which have become the favorite emblem of the Wood campaign. They fell thick as snow in the centre, the shower growing thinner toward the sides of the vast Coliseum.

A short speech by Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, sister of the late Theodore Roosevelt, seconding General Wood, really thrilled both delegates and galleries. Her clear voice could be heard to the far corners, and her aptness at phrasemaking served to stir the feelings of the many who were admirers of her illustrious brother.

Later came heckling of Charles S. Wheeler, when he nominated Hiram Johnson. It got to a point where he called his auditors prejudiced and demanded that they listen to his advocacy of the one man who, he declared, was able to get out the full vote of the Republican Party this year. After that he got a hearing, but it did not seem to do Johnson a vast amount of good, if one may judge from the subsequent balloting.

Hoover Outburst from Galleries.

To the galleries perhaps the best part of the show was the Hoover demonstration, following the nominating speech by Judge Nathan L. Miller of New York. It was a big noise that came from the spectators, or from such large groups of them as had gone to the Coliseum / use their lungs for the Presidential dark horse in whim the convention itself seemed to have least interest.

Cheer leaders, swaying like pirates at a college football game, directed the waves of applause. Senator Smoot, who was acting as Chairman while Senator Lodge rested, gave them plenty of time, but finally seemed to get tired of waiting, and introduced Hoover seconder, H. H. Brown of Nevada.

Mr. Brown made a speech. It was the one speech of which nobody heard even a syllable, for the demonstration lasted straight to the end of it. Then a woman seconder appeared, and the crowd decided to give her some attention.

Convention Late in Meeting.

When the convention began its session this morning the Coliseum was crowded to the last seat with an audience that after early breakfast had gossiped, listened to music and fanned itself expectantly for an hour, waiting for the stir to begin.

Half an hour behind the scheduled time Senator Lodge, the permanent Chairman, appeared on the rostrum. He was severely gashed in black, but looked cool. It was 10 o'clock to the dot when, with the official stenographer haunting his footsteps, pencil poised and note book in hand, Senator Lodge walked out on the "bridge" which brought him to the very edge of the body of delegates and alternates and let his gavel fall once or twice, several times as he called the convention to order. Two Assistant Sergeants at Arms a minute or so before had placed on the little table at the end of the bridge a big new pounding board, designed to lend more authority to the gavel.

The day of spellbinding in store for the audience was foreshadowed, as is customary at such conventions, by prayer. The Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers, a Chicago rabbi, invoked the divine assistance of the "God of Washington and Lincoln" safely to guide the present representatives of the party through a crucial day.

Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh, one of the orators at large from Pennsylvania and a staunch Progressive, was recognized by Senator Lodge. He offered a resolution recording "the inexpressible loss which the convention felt over the death of Theodore Roosevelt, loved unutterably now and to be loved as long as our nation cherishes the memory of its heroes."

If the resolution was intended to take the convention out of itself and into an atmosphere of party traditions and party fervor, the result appeared somewhat disappointing. The magic of Colonel Roosevelt's name seemed lost on it. There was applause and some vocal acclaim, but not much.

When the question was put the delegates and visitors rose swiftly and stood at attention out of respect to the memory of Roosevelt.

Governor Allen Nominates Wood.

"The convention will now proceed to the nomination of candidates," and nounced Chairman Lodge. A few delegates yelled with happiness and the galleries applauded.

The roll call of States was begun. Alabama passed. Arizona yielded to Kansas.

"Arizona has yielded to Kansas," Senator Lodge said. "Has Kansas a nomination to presently?"

Willis J. Bailey, head of the Kansas delegation, which occupies a space up in front near the rostrum, arose in his seat.

"Kansas will be represented by Governor Allen," he replied. "The Governor I think needs no palatation. I should be glad to present Henry J. Allen, a short, square shouldered man with a strong face that wore a ruddy glow of health, was ushered to the front and presented to the gathering.

"Governor Allen will place the name of General Wood before the convention," Senator Lodge explained.

There was a little applause at this, the first mention of General Wood's name in the convention. Few delegates, however, took part in the demonstration. They appeared plainly surprised and looked at each other and their presiding officer askance.

Mentioning the name of a candidate in an offhand fashion like that before eulogy and exhortation had paved the way for a demonstration, was a departure from all convention precedents and it had the delegates guessing. It has been a custom, if not a rule, that a speaker placing a candidate in nomination should go on showering praise on an unnamed person for a proper length of time, and then put his name at the delegates like a bombshell.

Of course, as a rule, everyone knows long in advance as was the case today, who is going to be named and by whom. It is one of the artificialities of politics and of conventions, honored through long practice, and when Senator Lodge ignored it his act gave the convention a shock.

Senator Lodge continued all through the session to disregard precedent and "put the convention wise" at the beginning of almost every nominating and seconding speech. Some observers suggested that it might have been in pursuance of a strategic purpose, for it enabled delegates generally to gauge their applause according to the degree of enthusiasm which they were expected or supposed to show for this or that candidate.

Governor Allen, too, showed scorn for time-honored artificialities. The name of General Wood was mentioned again and again in his speech, and he flung it at his audience without dramatic pause to afford an opportunity for plaudits. There was acclaim, nevertheless, over salient utterances in praise of the General.

Cheer Praise of General.

The first applause came when Governor Allan referred to the services of General Wood in Cuba as the American Governor following the Spanish war.

"He taught them that Government should be run like a business," said Governor Allen. "Unless someone teaches us that in America, business may come to be run like Government."

There was handclapping which compelled Governor Allen to stop. It lasted for a minute or so. Jeers greeted his subsequent reference, while telling the convention that General Wood had done for preparedness before America entered the war, to the utterance of William J. Bryan that preparedness was superfluous because in America "a million men would spring to arms over night."

"The Commoner," who is here as a reporter and occupied a seat in the press section very near the rostrum, bent a little lower over his notes and pulled his pencil a little more busily, but gave no other indication of interest in what Governor Allen had to say upon the subject.

"Some men pretend to object to the fact that General Wood wears the uniform of his country," said the Governor. "Since when has this uniform become a prohibition, disqualification or a badge of dishonor?"

A great deal has been said in and out of this convention of the alleged unavailability of General Wood because he is a military man. If the attitude of that part of the audience which occupied seats in the visitors' galleries is to be accepted as representative of the popular view, that could not be offered as a valid reason for the party refusing to make General Wood its standard bearer. The galleries broke loose for the first time and yelled. They repeated the performance when Governor Allen called attention to the conduct of General Wood when sent to quell labor disturbances at Gary, Ind.

He was told the situation was full of dynamite, said the Governor, and Wood being urged at the time as a candidate for President. He could have sent a subordinate. He could have passed the buck. He went there in person and carried to that district the guarantee of fairness and justice."

Wood Demonstration Begins.

The Governor's speech occupied about twenty minutes in delivery. It was 10:20 o'clock when he finished. As he offered the name of General Wood in his closing sentences, a strong wave of cheering and applause swept the huge audience.

Soon after this the expected demonstration got under way. Some men perched on the runways directly under the ceiling of the Coliseum began to shower down upon the audience bushels of red, green, pink and blue feathers bearing the name of General Wood. These emblems were familiar to those attending the convention who have seen them worn in the hotel lobbies and corridors by thousands of men and women.

But those who had seen them saw by one or two by two were not prepared for the colorful, fairylike spectacle when they fell in great showers. While a dozen big white searchlights diffused through the Coliseum, a soft light, not unlike sunshine.

In all parts of the Coliseum delegates pledged to General Wood were on their feet cheering. In the galleries men and women, diverted for a moment by the rain of bright feathers, stood up waving Wood pennants and giving vent to their enthusiasm.

In one of the galleries a tom-tom was beaten when the demonstration was at its highest. It resounded through the auditorium with the regularity of the ticking of a grandfather's clock, its dull booming clearly audible above the din.

Then, as if this had been a signal, the Wood supporters began to punctuate their cheers with the rhythmic cryy of "Wood, Wood, we want Wood," which resounded through the hall for twenty minutes or more.

A procession of Wood delegates was started through the aisles in the familiar way. It was noticeable, however, that of the delegates from the big Republican States hardly any joined in the demonstration. The delegates from New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Iowa, Connecticut, and even Indiana, where General Wood won in the preferential primaries, remained in their seats. Except South Dakota, which has adopted last-ditch resolutions in favor of General Wood, no State banner was carried in the procession to indicate its preferences for Wood.

The functionaries on the rostrum always form a little world which moves in its own orbit with an air of complete detachment from what is going on in the hall. Senator Lodge for a while sat chatting with Colonel Lafayette B. Glesson, Secretary of the convention, then he turned his weary gaze on the delegates below, as turbulent at the time as the rostrum was calm.

Lodge Fails to Quiet Crowd.

After the demonstration had been in progress for twenty minutes, Senator Lodge advanced and rapped for order. The convention looked hard at the Chairman, but did not stop cheering. Perhaps it was that Lodge looked cool and the convention got comfort out of regarding him from behind 10,000 busily waving fans.

Finding that General Wood's friends had not nearly got all the enthusiasm out of their systems, the Senator backed off the "bridge," sat down in his chair and poured out a glass of ice water.

At 11 o'clock sharp Senator Lodge, who seemed to work by the clock, tried his hand again at gaveling the convention into order. One bang of his gavel and he saw it was no use. He made a gesture of helplessness and retired to his seat to let the convention engage for nearly ten minutes more in the sort of disorder which had kept it occupied for the last hour that had elapsed since Governor Allen handed General Wood's case to the jury.

Outbreak Lasted Thirty-eight Minutes.

At 11:08 o'clock Mr. Lodge again advanced. As he turned his impassive face on the convention some one in the gallery tooted a big tin horn at him and the delegates set up a roar for Wood. It was clear, however, that the demonstration had practically spent itself. It took but little work on the gavel to silence the din. The demonstration had lasted thirty-eight minutes by the watch.

Frank Knox of Manchester, head of the delegation from New Hampshire, where General Wood was born, then ascended the rostrum to second the nomination.

"General Wood is a native son of New Hampshire, but he does not come before this convention as such, but as a citizen of all the United States," said Mr. Knox amid applause.

When Mr. Knox, who sometimes has been called the discoverer of General Wood in his present capacity as Presidential timber, finished his brief speech, the convention was due for its first real thrill.

Ovation to Roosevelt's Sister.

A woman in black was deferentially escorted out from the rostrum to the most advanced point of the "bridge." The convention apparently had recognized her, because there was a roar of welcome even before Senator Lodge presented her to the body of delegates.

"I want you to listen to Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, the sister of Theodore Roosevelt," said the Senator from Massachusetts, when the din had subsided.

This time there was magic in Roosevelt's name or perhaps it was the mourning that Col. Roosevelt's sister wears for her late husband, Douglas Robinson, that touched the heart of the convention. There was another ovation, the forerunner of many more, for time and time again she was compelled to pause in speaking while the delegates and visitors in the convention registered noisy approval.

Once the moment she began to speak any one who had heard Theodore Roosevelt on occasions like this must have realized that the woman in black was his sister. Her gestures, her mannerisms, the intonation of her voice—in fact, must have been all in the convention the man who might have been its unrivalled candidate for the Presidential nomination had he lived long enough.

Mrs. Robinson in the opening sentence of her speech gave to General Wood almost all the credit for the country's ability to send fighting machines "instead of cannon fodder" overseas to the World War.

Pleads for "My Brother's Friend."

"He was my brother's devoted friend," she said with feud and stirring appeal in the utterance of every word and syllable, "and my brother was his true friend. But I want Leonard Wood for President, not because he was my brother's friend, but because he is of my brother's type. He has my brother's characteristics, indomitable courage, coupled with that most uncommon thing in the world—common sense."

At this the waving fans in the hall and galleries stopped as if some one had touched a button. Men and women forgot the heat and applauded. The convention rose. Colonel Roosevelt's sister, who carried into the Coliseum the spirit of her brother, almost as it would have risen to the Colonel himself had he appeared before it in the flesh. Certainly it was a period, the story of which will go down in the history of Republican national conventions in red letters, the ten brief minutes which this woman in mourning spent, carrying, as it were, a message from the grave near Sagamore Hill.

She spoke about the desirability of realizable ideals in the White House in these times of grave portent. She spoke of patriotism and love of humanity from "America first, out, not from Europe in." She told the convention that the next occupant of the White House must have the mantles of Lincoln and Roosevelt on his shoulders. She ended by declaring that the convention should never accept a man who would "take the psychological moment" but should "select a man who makes it."

Then she stopped. The audience, which had risen in response every time she made a point, let loose its lungs in a lusty roar. There is no doubt what the convention would have done on the first ballot if Colonel Roosevelt's sister had been a candidate for the nomination, circumstances permitting, Mrs. Robinson said:

Text of Mrs. Robinson's Speech.

Mrs. Robinson's speech was as follows:

"Delegates and Fellow Republicans: As a woman of New York State I can say 'fellow Republicans.' As a woman of New York State I can voice the feelings of thousands of American mothers who feel that because of the foresight, the vision and the splendid work of Leonard Wood their sons went overseas fit fighting machines instead of cannon fodder.

"People often say to me in these last days you wish to have Leonard Wood as President because he was a friend of your brother, Theodore Roosevelt, but I wish every delegate in this great hall to understand that it is not the reason I wish Leonard Wood for President because he was my brother's friend, though he was my brother's devoted friend as was my brother his devoted friend. I want Leonard Wood for President not because he was his friend, but because he is his type. That is why I want Leonard Wood for President.

"Leonard Wood and Theodore Roosevelt have great characteristics in common, a great combination of unusual characteristics. Leonard Wood has, as Theodore Roosevelt had, courage combined with discretion, indomitable courage, coupled with that most uncommon thing in the world—common sense.

"At this the waving fans in the hall and galleries stopped as if some one had touched a button. Men and women forgot the heat and applauded. The convention rose. Colonel Roosevelt's sister, who carried into the Coliseum the spirit of her brother, almost as it would have risen to the Colonel himself had he appeared before it in the flesh. "Leonard Wood and Theodore Roosevelt have great characteristics in common, a great combination of unusual characteristics. Leonard Wood has, as Theodore Roosevelt had, courage combined with discretion, indomitable courage, coupled with that most uncommon thing in the world—common sense. (Applause.) Leonard Wood has combined with vision sense of proportion which makes him know how far to let that vision go.

"We do not want any more violence. We do not want a fleeting glance of fleeting disruption clouding the really realizable ideal, and we want to realize them. That is what we want. We want beyond almost anything else, a great self-sacrificing patience.

"The man who comes into the White House now must have the mantle of Lincoln as well as the mantle of Roosevelt, full upon his shoulders. He must not only have courage and order, he must have that great patience that carried Lincoln through those days of trial, for as days would be so grave with portent as the days of the upbuilding and rebuilding of this great country.

"I am not going to say that I am going more, but I want to say that not only do we want the characteristics of which I have spoken, but we must have the kind of man who looks from America out and not from Europe in. (Laughter and applause.) We must have a man who combines with being a great nationalist a great international reputation. He must be known not only in his State or in his country. He must be known throughout the great countries of the world. And so he is.

"No one need say to me that if Theodore Roosevelt or Leonard Wood had been in the White House they would not have been flogging words of protest as a tune for the Germans to march through Belgium. (Applause.) The admirers of Mr. Wilson say that he had to wait for the psychological moment to get the country behind him. Does American service to call upon a patriotic and unselfish fellow-citizen never again shall we accept the man who takes the psychological moment. We want the man who makes the psychological moment. There are three kinds of men, the man who sees only words, the man who sees the picture of Wood, and by saying 'Go,' and the man, the kind of man we want, who says 'Come.' (Applause asserting that Dr. Butler was a man of imagination and vision and a great executive; a man with ideals who yet was practical.

Miller Nominates Hoover.

At the conclusion of this address Senator Reed Smoot, who was then presiding, announced that Judge Nathan L. Miller would nominate "the Hon. Herbert Hoover."

The crowds had been in doubt as to whether Hoover's name would be placed in nomination. A ripple of applause started in the galleries, but the delegations remained silent. For about a minute cheering and applause continued.

Judge Miller's address was a trifle too long to suit the taste of the crowd and he was heckled a bit toward the end. Finally he shouted that in one minute more he would stop and he received a good cheer.

The only addition to the prepared speech was a statement by Judge Miller that Hoover as far back as 1919 had given expression to views which reflected the principles set forth by the Republican platform in regard to the League of Nations.

Galleries Shout for Hoover.

The real Hoover demonstration came when Judge Miller quit. It swept around the galleries and finally infected a few of the delegates, who at first had been timid about getting to their feet when the name of Hoover was mentioned.

Hoover supporters had been supplied with banners and pennants and waved them frantically. There were cheering sections in the galleries which went at the task as if the convention were a football game. Comment was made that while the Hoover demonstration was shorter it perhaps was the most spontaneous and enthusiastic that had been staged.

Few of the delegates joined in the demonstration—not more than a dozen. A woman seated with the Alabama delegation had armed herself with a Hoover pennant and moved it above her head. There was a delegate from Maine who whooped it up as loudly as he could, but the real cheering came from the galleries. It was noticed that women took a big part in the applauding.

After the cheering had continued for eight minutes H. H. Brown, of Nevada, stepped forward to second the nomination of Hoover. The cheering crowd paid no attention to him and only sheered the louder when Senator Smoot pounded mightily with his gavel in an attempt to restore order. This did not seem to worry Mr. Brown, however. He started to talk despite the din about him, his shoulders thrown back, his feet braced.

The crowd could see Brown's mouth moving, but could not hear a word he was saying. The galleries broke into more enthusiastic cheering, and it was evident that many hundreds of the Hoover followers did not like what Brown was doing and felt he might have permitted the demonstration to continue longer without interrupting it. There were "boos" and some hissing when Brown kept at it despite the warning roars.

The demonstration was kept up until Brown had struggled through the address and walked away from the speakers' platform. Not a word of his speech had been heard by either the delegates or those in the galleries. In fact, in the uproar nothing he said could be heard even in the press stands. There was a great outburst of applause, defiant and condemning, as Brown withdrew.

The demonstration had then been in progress for about fifteen minutes. Mrs. James W. Morrison, a daughter of William Dudley Foulke, stepped forward to second the Hoover nomination. There were cries, "She's a woman," and "Give her a chance," and finally order was restored. She talked about the millions of women voters and of the strong support which would, she said, be given Hoover by the women of the country.

Ten-Minute Din for Harding.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Morrison's address Senator Smoot announced that ex-Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio would nominate Senator Warren G. Harding. There was a roar from the Ohio section which swept about the hall.

Harding is held in affectionate regard by delegates in many State delegations. Ex-Governor Willis got a big hand when he said that no matter whom the convention nominated all delegates and Republicans should keep in mind that the Republican Party must face the country with a united front. Such a result, he said, could be brought about by Harding's nomination.

The crowd's greeting to Harding's name, after Willis's ornate presentation, was of considerable volume, but had no picturesque features comparable to the feather shower in honor of Wood, and lacked the vim of the Lowden and Johnson outbursts. It lasted about ten minutes.

Seconding the Harding nomination, R. L. Cousins of Texas got a round of cheers and a laugh for saying that the Ohio Senator could carry Texas and break the solid South.

Mayor Moore Presents Sprout.

At this point Senator Lodge resumed the Chairmanship and Senator Smoot withdrew. Next came Mayor J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia, presenting the name of Governor William Cameron Sproul.

As Mayor Moore read his prepared manuscript in a monotonous tone so low that he could not be heard more than a few feet away the crowd sizzled. If it had been not berore it was melting now. Everybody fanned. From the exits trickled hungry and thirsty streams, but comparatively few seemed to leave the buildings. All the thousands endured the oveplike temperature in their eagerness to hear everything through to the end of the nominating speeches.

William L. Schaffer, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, did not have a long wait before making the seconding speech. The demonstration for Sproul was short. It consisted merely of flag-waving by the Pennsylvania delegation and a few scattered cheers.

Name Poindexter and Sutherland.

When Washington State was reached George H. Walker did the nominating honors for Senator Miles Poindexter. He appreciated the condition of the helpless and suffering delegates and mercifully made his speech short, for which consideration he received the unstinted thanks of the delegates and spectators.

Jules S. Bache of New York seconded the Washington Senator's nomination. Mr. Bache said that he performed the duty on behalf of the business men of the country.

The next State in order was West Virginia, and J. M. Sanders of Bluefield made a fifteen-minute speech nominating Senator Howard Sutherland. A groan went up from the mass of people when Mr. Sanders took the speakers' stand. But little attention was paid to him, only those down front catching a word now and then.

The crowd was waiting but for one thing, to get to balloting as fast as possible, and they only bore the infliction of the oratory because there was no way to avoid it. Mr. Sanders was very serious and would not yield an inch, although time and again the galleries tried to howl him down. The seconding speeches for Sutherland were short and soon over. He was the last candidate put in nomination.

SECOND PLACE GROUP ON ANXIOUS SEAT

Seekers of Vice Presidency Watch the Big Race with Taut Nerves.

ANDERSON'S HOPES HIGH

Virginia's Favorite Son Expects to Get the Place if Lowden is Nominated.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—While the convention was discussing the virtues of various Presidential candidates, and the weakin around the Coliseum was ringing with the insatiate persistence of a telephone girl calling the wrong number, the various candidates for the Vice Presidency were sitting around chewing their mustaches and waiting for what to them was the real business of the convention. They were worried, and with reason. This convention has been compared to a county fair. Continuing the comparison, the balloting for President may be likened to the 2:15 trot and the nomination of a Vice President to the farmers' road race for a $2u prize that is added on the last day of the fair for a little comic relief.

The 2:15 trot draws the crowd, but for the farmers who have hitched up the old mare to the sidebar buggy the road race is the big event of the week.

But there is one big difference between the county fair and the National Convention. A horse that is beaten in the 2:15 trot can t enter in the farmers' road race. But here in the convention various dark horses that were carried and hurried to look their best in the big race were left at the post, as their jockeys knew they would be, and their grooms are already rubbing them down and getting them ready to start out as So the avowed candidates for the office candidates for Vice President.

Most formidable of them, perhaps, is Colonel Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, the favorite son of Virginia, a State which seems to be covetous of Indiana's distinction as mother of Vice Presidents. Colonel Anderson did brilliant work as Red Cross Commissioner in Rumania in the war, and, judging from the experience of Herbert Hoover, some have thought that this connection "abroad" alone was enough to disqualify him. The Virginia delegation, however, is optimistic, although admitting that a good deal of geographical calculation is involved.

If Lowden is nominated the Anderson people expect to win their race. Lowden has always had Virginia behind him and the Anderson supporters expect recognition of that fact, and also of the excellent geographical balance of Virginia and Illinois. The keynote of the Anderson movement is the necessity of re-establishing national unity by electing a Republican Vice President from the South. This plays a large part in their arguments. The Red Cross record, which might seem to the foreigner to be Colonel Anderson's best recommendation, is for the reason given above an argument which must be used with the greatest caution.

Virginia offers another son, but apparently not a favorite son—the Virginia headquarters say that he is only a stepson—and certain the mother of Presidents seems likely to treat him in the manner accredited to stepmothers. This is Samuel Adams, born in Massachusetts, but running as a Virginian. The Anderson supporters say that his real residence is Chicago, and that his farm at Greenwood, Virginia, is only one of his sidelines. However that may be, the apples that Mr. Adams has been handing out as campaign arguments come from this Virginia farm, and they have had some effect. One man—not a delegate, unfortunately—said that he had looked in at the Adams headquarters five times, had got five apples, and found them all good. "If I had a vote in that convention," he said, "I'd vote five times for Samuel Adams."

Mr. Adams talks hopefully and says that unless some of these dark horses enter the road race, he expects to win. He counts on 275 votes on the first ballot—though he admits that it may be more and it may be less—even if the Virginians still stick to the lessons of history and say that Adams means Massachusetts.

There was another Vice Presidential candidate for a few minutes last week. Marcus Pollasky of Alpena, Mich., a financier and promoter who has run for something in every election for the last twenty years, came to Chicago and had posters printed announcing himself as an aspirant to the Vice Presidency. This was nothing new to Michigan, for it wouldn't seem like an election without Marcus Pollasky running for something. He is famed in Michigan history as the man who once got up in a State convention and nominated himself for Governor in a speech that did full justice to the merits of his candidature.

Here in Chicago he looked over the field and told some of the early-comers to the convention that there had been offered to him the stained and bedraggled toga that adorned the shoulders of Truman H. Newberry, but he felt that he was meant for higher things. He seems to be a volatile person. His posters were scattered about the Congress Hotel for two or three days and then they disappeared. To Michigan politicians whom he met on the opening day of the convention Mr. Pollasky confided that he was through now—something had drawn from the Vice Presidential race, he was also thinking of running for Lieutenant Governor of Michigan.

LEAGUE PLANK WAS ROOT'S.

"One We Can All Stand On," Said Borah.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The League of Nations plank in the Republican platform, which has been represented as a victory for Senator Johnson's opposition to any sort of League, was in reality the handiwork of Elihu Root, and was accepted as a compromise by the Johnson leaders only in order to avert a ruinous split in the party.

The man who was responsible for the insertion of this particular formula on the League, embodying Mr. Root's idea on the international court and in its entirety representing his ideas, was W. Murray Crane, who had led the fight in the Resolutions Committee for indorsement of a League with reservations. Ex-Senator Crane fought as long as he could for explicit indorsement of the League, but when he saw it was impossible to obtain this he obtained the substitution of the Root formula in order to make agreement possible.

When the plank was reported in the full committee on Thursday morning, Edwin J. Gross of Wisconsin asked the other members of the committee, specifically Senator Borah, who had led the Johnson fight against the League in the sub-committee, just what it meant.

"It seems to me," he said, "that this is a very generous plank. It indorses everybody—the mild reservationists, the Lodge reservationists, and the group opposed to any League at all. I myself am against the League, but I think that whatever is done, the Republican Party ought to come out and say frankly what it means."

Senator Borah responded:

"Have you read that League plank? Any one who has can indorse it. I have spent a sleepless night, wondering whether I should have to bolt or insure the election of a Democratic administration. But now I find it will not be necessary to do either. This plank is one we can all stand on."

The authorship of the League plank in the platform was established as Mr. Root's by Ogden Mills in his speech in the convention today nominating Dr. Butler. Departing from the advance copy of his speech, Mr. Mills, referring to the declaration made by Mr. Wheeler in nominating Senator Johnson, to the effect that the California candidate was the only one who could stand on the League of Nations plank, said:

"I want to say that Nicholas Murray Butler can stand on the plank as written by Elihu Root and adopted by this convention without the crossing of a 't.'"

SUFFRAGISTS SHOW FIGHT AT CHICAGO

Miss Paul Asserts Leaders Fear Women Would oVte for the League and Peace.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The militant suffragists, whose picketing of the Republican National Convention had hitherto been marked with extreme decorum, showed fight today for the first time. An entirely new banner, borne by the long picket line outside the Coliseum, greeted delegates and spectators this morning. All other slogans were discarded and the new banner read:

"Vote against the Republican Party as long as it blocks suffrage."

This was said by the leaders of the National Womans' Party to be a first step in a movement to oppose the Republican nominee for President unless pressure is exerted by the party leaders to get the Governors of Vermont and Connecticut to call special sessions of their Legislatures to ratify the suffrage amendment.

If the thirty-sixth State does not ratify, it is the program of the leaders of the National Woman's Party to trail the Republican nominee for President on all his speaking trips, picket his meetings and ask questions intended to embarrass him at every opportunity. It is also proposed to conduct campaigns against all Republicans for the Senate and the House of Representatives, unless the suffrage amendment is ratified.

No Word From Hays Yet.

So far, neither Miss Alice Paul, the Chairman, nor any of the other leaders of the National Woman's Party has received any word from Will H. Hays, the Republican National Chairman, as to the result of efforts to induce Governor Clement of Vermont to call a special session. The militant suffragists have little hope of inducing Governor Holcomb of Connecticut to recede from his opposition to a special session, and charge the Republican party leaders with purposely blocking ratification in order, as they believe, to take chances on the election without bringing in nearly 10,000,000 women voters with only a few months for their organization.

Miss Paul said that some of the Republican leaders were opposed to suffrage at this time because of local considerations. In Connecticut, she said Senator Brandegee, Republican, and an opponent of Woman Suffrage, is likely to be opposed for re-election by Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and fears that the enfranchisement of women would cause his defeat. Miss Paul said she understood that Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, one of the Wood leaders in the convention, did not wish general woman suffrage now because it would hurt his chance in a primary fight for re-nomination.

Other Republican leaders, Miss Paul declared, were opposed to letting suffrage go through before the Presidential election because they believed that women generally were inclined to favor the League of Nations, because of a belief that it might promote the cause of peace, and would be likely to vote for the Democratic nominee because of the Republican platform attitude on that issue.

"The winning of the thirty-sixth State has not been accomplished," said Miss Paul. "More pressure from the Republican Party must be exerted to win it. We hold the Republican Party responsible for the delay in ratification. We are not concerned with the party's record during the past on the suffrage issue. It is now blocking suffrage in Vermont and Connecticut where Legislatures ready to ratify are not allowed to convene by their Republican Governors. In no Democratic State does a similar situation exist.

"We intend to continue to show to the Republican Party the effect of the obstruction of suffrage on its political future. When Republican leaders become convinced that party expediency is involved in suffrage ratification women will be enfranchised."

The suffrage banners, with their threat to vote against the Republican Party, caused considerable resentment among the delegates, a number of whom shook their fists at the pickets.

"You won't get anywhere with that stuff," one angry delegate shouted at Mrs. M. Toscan Bennett, of Hartford, Conn., who was carrying one of the banners. Other delegates made even more forcible expressions of disapproval.

A number of the Republican leaders visited the Woman's Party Headquarters opposite the Coliseum. Among them was Charles D. Hilles, the new national committeeman from New York. Senators Walter E. Edge and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and E. C. Stokes, Chairman of the State Committee of New Jersey and Governor John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire. These as well as a number of other Republican leaders told Miss Paul that Governor Clement of Vermont was "softening," but Miss Paul stated that she had received no tangible evidence that this was true.

Contributions of $1,000 were made today to the picket fund by Mrs. Verner Reed of Colorado, Vice Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Republican National Committee, Mrs. Charles Broughton Wood, of Simsbury, Connecticut and Mrs. Havemeyer of New York. Mrs. Havemeyer, who had previously contributed, has been on the picket line every day since the Convention started.

Name Woman Leader Today.

The woman leader of the National Republican organization will probably be selected at a meeting of the Republican Women's Advisory Council of One Hundred, composed of party leaders in all the States, tomorrow in the Auditorium. This conference is expected to recommend to the Republican National Committee a choice for vice-chairman of the executive committee of the National Committee, which place has been allotted to a woman by agreement, and the occupant of which will become ex-officio the woman leader of the party.

Names so far suggested include Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of the junior Senator from Illinois; Mrs. John P. Pratt of New York, Mrs. John G. South of Kentucky, the present head of the council; Mrs. Manley Fossem of Minnesota and Mrs. Walter McNab Miller of Missouri.

A strong sentiment is reported to have arisen among the Western women against the selection of a woman from the East, and this may prevent the selection of Mrs. Pratt. The Western women contend that three qualifications are necessary for the woman leader—that she must come from the Middle West, have been a suffrage leader, and have had training in politics.

Mayor Thompson Quits as Illinois Delegate, Denouncing Instructions to Vote for Lowden

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11. — William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago, bolted the Republican National Convention today. He sent a letter to the Chairman of the Illinois Delegation resigning as a delegate at large from that State. His stated reason for this action was that he could not abide by the instruction of the Illinois State Convention to vote for Governor Lowden because of the disclosures concerning the lavish use and alleged misuse of money in Govern Lowden's campaign for the Presidential nomination.

Thompson had already openly opposed Lowden. The only surprising thing about his action today was that he retired from the convention instead of remaining there to lead a fight against Lowden's nomination.

The Lowden-Thompson feud was born at the recent Illinois State Convention at Springfield. Thompson wanted to be re-elected as Illinois member of the Republican National Committee. His attitude during the war and his political methods caused opposition, and Governor Lowden, who had remained a neutral in the effort to down Thompson, was induced to use his influence against him. Thompson got only a place among the State delegates at large to the National Convention.

When the Illinois delegation met in Chicago this week Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman was elected National Committeeman in Thompson's place.

Thompson controls seventeen delegates from Chicago and is credited with controlling a few others out of the fifty-eight from the State. Those from Chicago are expected to vote for Wood, who carried their districts in the primary.

In his letter of resignation Mayor Thompson said: "My reason for taking this action is that the State Convention, which elected me as one of the delegates at large, also instructed me by resolution to vote for the nomination of Frank O. Lowden for President.

"It is my opinion that if the delegates to the Republican State Convention had known of the conditions which were later disclosed by the Senate Investigation Committee they would not have passed resolutions indorsing Governor Lowden for the nomination for President.

"It is also my opinion that if the Republicans of Illinois had on April 13 known of the conditions which were later disclosed by the testimony with regard to Presidential campaign expenditures before the United States Senate they would not have given Frank O. Lowden the preferential primary vote which he received.

"I will not knowingly make myself a party to placing the Republican nomination for President on the auction block."

BORAH WILL BOLT LOWDEN OR WOOD

vention, but I will support no man who is not clean."

Mr. Borah said the Senate investigation already had shown that a million and a half dollars had been spent in the interest of one man, that man being Wood. Before the investigation is concluded, he said, it would be shown that a million and a half more dollars had been spent. He said further that if either of the two leading candidates before the convention tonight were nominated the issue would be the corruption of the American electorate; there was no other way out.

"I have a right to demand of you the nomination of a clean man," Mr. Borah said. "We speak for the Republican Party. We must clean it out and relieve it from the grip of those that control it with money. Senator Johnson has demonstrated by his primary campaign that he is the one man who can secure the popular vote in November. No one has disputed the proposition that if he is nominated he can easily be elected. The support he has found, the phobia he has on public opinion and the confidence of the American people. If Senator Johnson has this popular support it must be brought home tomorrow that he is the candidate every one concedes can be elected.

"You delegates here must go forth tonight and tomorrow morning and impress upon those honest men in the Republican convention that Senator Johnson's tremendous success is in fields where he was not expected to win, insures not only his success in November, but the success of the Republican Senate in Congress."

JOHNSON STILL HOPES.

And Whatever the Result, He Will Not Bolt.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Senator Johnson was in conference with his managers tonight and got into touch with Senator William E. Borah of Idaho in regard to plans for tomorrow. It practically had been decided at a late hour tonight that Senator Borah would ask to be permitted to address the convention for five minutes or more tomorrow morning if the developments over night indicated that either General Wood or Governor Lowden had a chance of making a runaway victory.

Senator Johnson's campaign manager tonight gave definite assurance that the Senator has no intention of leaving the party and whatever the result might be he would stand by the declaration made some time ago that it was simply a family quarrel which would not end in a bolt.

But this does not mean that the Johnson forces, through Borah, are not prepared to put up a sturdy fight against the nomination of either Wood or Lowden. The report tonight is that if Borah obtains the ear of the convention tomorrow he will talk about the danger of sending before the people a candidate against whom the charges can be made that he spent huge sums in financing his primary campaign or was connected even indirectly with certain great financial interests.

Senator Johnson had made no plans up to a late hour tonight which looked to his personal appearance before the convention. The only thing definite on this is to be staged, it was said at Johnson headquarters, would probably be left to Senator Borah. It was predicted by the Johnson managers that Borah would appear before the convention, but they hesitated to say that Senator Johnson himself would keep out of the fight to that extent. There was a feeling tonight among the political observers that the Johnson camp had about given up the hope of obtaining the nomination for the California Senator as a result of the way the balloting went today.

Senator Johnson held the delegates from most of the States in which he won in the primaries, but there were breaks serious enough to indicate that there was little hope of victory. Among the significant features of the balloting was that Johnson after mounting to 148 votes on the third ballot tumbled back to 140 1-2 on the fourth.

As a result of the situation which developed the feeling was that Senator Johnson and his co-worker Borah would direct their efforts principally from this time on in an attempt to bring about the nomination of a "dark horse" who might be more acceptable to that group than is either Wood or Lowden. Of course, the Johnson camp in the meantime will insist that Johnson has more than an even chance to win, but such is not the opinion in most circles.

The gossip tonight is that either Senator Knox or Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania would be more acceptable to Johnson than Wood or Lowden, but no definite statement has come from Johnson or Borah. It is understood, however, that the subject has been talked over in private by representatives of the Johnson faction and the other leaders and that they know the situation.

The activities of the Johnson-Borah group have added to the complications and as a result the contest may be dragged out for several ballots today. Though Johnson followers say that General Wood has practically reached the top of his strength and that he will begin to fade into oblivion after a few more ballots, there is no sure sign about the chances of Lowden's nomination. Some of the Johnsonites hold that the old-time leaders have enough votes in their pockets to put Lowden across, but they will think for a long time before applying the acid test. Many are confronted by the danger of an assault by the Johnson-Borah faction on Governor Lowden's candidacy.

The other political leaders would not have so much concern over the situation if Borah alone appeared as their enemy, as they feel little harm by any opposition he might bring to bear. But Johnson and Borah are apparently still playing thir game together and that has given some of the others cause for hesitation.

Senator Johnson remained quiet on the subject of nominations tonight, preferring that the explosion, if any is to come, should be staged after the situation is made clear tomorrow morning.

CANDIDATES BUSY IN CONFERENCES

course of action as will unite the Republican Party in a harmonious, affirmative and aggressive campaign for a victory in November. If the Progressive element and the conservative element can unite upon a common ground and a common candidate it will bring about the support of the East and West and victory will be assured."

Harding Expresses Confidence.

After a long conference between delegates from Ohio and Senator Harding the delegates decided to stick to him until he released them. He declared himself the most likely candidate for President.

Ex-Governor Herrick said that there was a better feeling toward Harding among the delegates than there had been since the convention began. Senator Harding, Mr. Herrick said, would not seek to deliver his delegates if he released them. He would leave them free to support any candidate they preferred. Mr. Herrick said that assurance of more support for Harding had been received and that it would make itself appatent in tomorrow's balloting.

Governor Sproul said late tonight, after a meeting of the Pennsylvania delegation:

"I am greatly pleased with the result of the first day's balloting and with the prospects for tomorrow. The vote today bore out closely the prognostications that had been made and was quite satisfactory in its general significance.

"I have reason to expect strong support from New York on the early ballots tomorrow, and if New York and Pennsylvania stand together it will take a pretty strong combination to beat them. The outlook is very bright and we are all confident. The splendid way in which the whole delegation held together today was an excellent indication of the spirit in which we are getting on with the fight."

At the conference there was a heated discussion at the outset over the question of State leadership. Senator Penrose's friends asserted themselves. By a compromise between the Penrose and Sproul adherents it was decided by 67 of them to stick to Sproul no matter how it might happen. There is a conviction that with the expected accession of New York votes, a stampede to Sproul would begin.

The other nine of the 76 delegates are Wood admirers. They may vote for Sproul after a time, but they have been released temperarily to vote for Wood.

Predicts Gain for Wood Today.

CHICAGO, Saturday, June 12.—At 1 o'clock this morning, after a conference with State leaders, Frank H. Hitchcock, field marshal of the Wood forces, said:

"The Wood delegates will stick. On the first ballot today he will have a decided gain. I am greatly encouraged. We have been informed about the conferences of leaders opposed to Wood and that they have been trying to center upon a dark horse candidate."

LOWDEN MEN LOOK FOR WOOD VOTES

Say They Expect to Gain Many of General's Supporters in Today's Balloting.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The managers of Governor Frank O. Lowden appeared to be in a confident mood tonight as a result of the balloting today. It is the contention of the Lowden men that General Wood was practically put out of the race when he failed to obtain enough votes to nominate on the fourth ballot. They laugh at assertions that Wood can hope to pick up the 178½ more votes he needs for the nomination.

After adjournment today the Lowden leaders assembled in a conference which lasted well through the night. The Lowden camp was making confident claims and asserting that there would be a sharp break in the Wood support when balloting was resumed tomorrow, and that enough delegates were in sight to put Governor Lowden across. This confidence appeared to be founded chiefly on assurances that Wood's strength had been given of the delivery of a large part of the New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Indiana, Michigan and other large delegations to Governor Lowden on the early ballots tomorrow.

A switch of a large number of Wood and Johnson delegates to the Governor was being claimed by the Lowden managers late tonight.

The Lowden supporters said they were not worried at all by the action taken by Wood supporters in keeping the convention, rather than supporting Lowden, and held that every act the Mayor performed as an attack on the Governor was an aid to the Lowden candidacy rather than a detriment.

There were rumors going about the Convention hall all day that the Lowden forces had sufficient strength to put their candidate over if they saw fit to take the bull by the horns and go ahead with their program. It is probable that the first two or three ballots taken tomorrow will determine whether this is the case, and whether the Wood forces, as the Lowden supporters hold, had reached the point of collapse.

CHICAGO SIDELIGHTS ON DAY OF ORATORY

Mrs. Robinson Makes a Hit with Wood Speech — Mrs. Longworth Among Her Hearers.

PINCHOT LEADS LUNCH RAID

Suffragette "Puts a Lady Out"—Lodge Doesn't Use "Glasses"—A Hot Wave Song for Harding.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The American people love oratory, but oratory has its limits. It was demonstrated today that oratory has no chance in a contest with empty stomachs. The great crowd in the convention hall enjoyed itself immensely in the first few hours of nominating speeches. Then the pangs of hunger began to exert their influence.

Hundreds made their way from the auditorium to the lobby and anterooms in search of food. They found it in a narrow corridor a few hundred feet long. Sandwiches and soft drinks were obtainable, and a rushing business was done all afternoon.

Women of fashion, men of national prominence, politicians, newspaper men and employes of the convention, policemen, firemen, messenger boys and others not classified, struggled to get near the long counter from which the refreshments were served.

Gifford Pinchot, close friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt, escorted his wife, the daughter of General Lloyd Brice, into the centre of the hungry throng and emerged with a handful of sandwiches and bottles, and their heroic example was followed by many of their friends of wealth and fashion.

It was a literal demonstration of the democracy of politics.

While Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson was making her speech at the convention today—by the way, it was a great hit, that speech—one New York delegate observed to another:

"Not only a wonderful voice, but a phrase-making talent equal to ... brother's."

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Medill McCormick sat near each other on the convention platform. They showed interest in everything that went on today, and Mrs. Longworth was particularly enthusiastic over the manner in which the audience received the speech her cousin, Mrs. Robinson, was seconding the nomination of General Wood.

Mrs. Longworth's animation indicated that she inherited one of the most attractive personal traits of her father, Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. McCormick is the daughter of the late Marcus A. Hanna, friend and supporter of William McKinley. She has her father's interest in politics and his poise. People say of her that she "has personality."

"You can have her put out," suggested an usher.

"I'd like to but I don't like getting into a fight with a lady," said the ticket holder. He went out and gave his coupon to a suffragette who had not been able to get in. She made quick work getting rid of the intruder.

"Takes a woman to manage women," was the usher's comment.

The cause of the hot wave, which has boiled most of the enterprise out of the delegates and visitors in the last two days, was finally disclosed this morning, when the Republican Glee Club of Columbus, gave its daily concert on the mezzanine floor of the Congress Hotel.

"We sing with hearts on fire," the glee club shouted, "Harding, salute!"

Scientists have estimated that when you get hearts on fire for Harding you have generated enough heat to set Lake Michigan boiling and turn the Chicago River into a pot roast.

Veteran delegates refused to be impressed by the length of the demonstrations for General Wood, Governor Lowden and other candidates, which went over the half hour period in the first two instances.

"No human being could possibly get so enthusiastic over anybody or anything as this weather that he would cheer for twenty minutes spontaneously," said a politically hardened New York delegate.

Why," he added, "I wouldn't cheer twenty minutes for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, even if I knew I could get a stein of real beer at the end of the cheer."

A great improvement in the acoustic properties of the Coliseum has been effected since the first day's session. Through a telephone "magnifier" running up through a narrow tube that extends from the great bell-like arrangement over the presiding officer's rostrum, the voices of those who address the convention are transmitted into magnifying apparatus which throw the sounds forth in greater volume and increase their carrying capacity.

Since the experimental test of the first day's proceedings, the telephone company which provided the arrangement has been working to bring improvements. It has succeeded so well that the weaker voices become strong, while deep voices take on the volume of a near roar.

The result is that spectators in portions of the hall remote from the platform are able to hear distinctly the words of the orators.

Adolphe Danziger, a lawyer of Los Angeles, Cal., and a former United States Consul at Madrid, Spain, is not for either of California's favorite sons, Senator Hiram W. Johnson or Herbert Hoover. Mr. Danziger made a speech in the Harding headquarters in favor of the Ohio Senator.

"I have been in Republican politics for thirty years, and I worked for the election of the martyred President McKinley," he said. "I tell you that Senator Warren G. Harding, far more than any other candidate, represents the spirit of McKinley."

Senator Harding, obviously pleased, stepped forward and thanked Mr. Danziger.

Governor Frank O. Lowden told a group of friends a story of his early days in Chicago. At that time the election machinary of the city was in the hands of a group of Irish politicians, who ran things about their own way.

While he was waiting in line to get to the ballot box on election day, a burly Irishman approached and threateningly demanded Lowden's name.

"Frank O. Lowden," replied the future Governor of the State.

Supporters of General Wood expressed great resentment over the assertion, sent in by the hotel jobber that the "Old Guard" had let it all stand to nominate Governor Lowden, and the only question remaining was one of expediency.

They won't dare to name him in the face of Missouri disclosures," one Wood man declared heatedly in the lobby of the Blackstone. "It was 'Win with Wilson' for the Democrats in 1916. We Republicans don't want it to be 'Lose with Lowden' in 1920."

"Ashes to ashes, dust to dust—if Lowden don't get it, Johnson must," painted in large letters on a sign in the window of the plant of the Vim Motor Truck Company, diagonally opposite the Coliseum, caused considerable speculation among visitors and delegates.

Opinion was divided as to whether it was intended as a threat or a warning.

Prominent foreigners are fairly numerous among the visitors here for the convention. Among them are Mr. Peset, the Ambassador of Peru, and Mr. Bahkmetieff, the Ambassador of Russia. Both have lived in America for long periods and are familiar with the complicated system of American party politics.

Mr. Bahkmetieff was a college professor in this country before he was designated as Ambassador by the short-lived Kerensky Government.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is nearly 70 years old. Somebody who had noticed that the Senator did not use eyeglasses when he read his speech as Temporary Chairman of the convention, mentioned the fact to him today, the intimation being that it was remarkable that a man of Mr. Lodge's age had such clear eyesight.

Senator Lodge laughed when the remark was made.

"I didn't have to use them," he said. "I knew my speech."

But the conversation developed that Mr. Lodge does not use glasses for any purpose.

William Jennings Bryan sat in his place in the press section and listened attentively while Governor Henry Allen of Kansas was delivering his speech placing Wood in nomination. Mr. Bryan was turned sideways, and those behind him were struck by the profile resemblance between him and Governor Allen. The profile resemblance was strengthened by the prominent Roman nose that is the striking facial feature of each.

Mr. Bryan is not the most prolific of the reporters who are covering the convention sessions, but he is working under a handicap. He sits next to Arthur Brisbane, and in Brisbane's stories he appears as the interlocutor who does the "I don't know, Mr. Bones, why is alcohol necessary to the human system?" answers that lead up to Brisbane's end man lines.

If Bryan does all the talking and listening that is ascribed to him in Brisbane's columns, he doesn't have time for much work.

A stern, old-looking dowager stepped into an elevator at the Hotel La Salle, her ample bosom placarded with a variety of Lowden emblems. She spied a shrinking little man from whose hatband protruded a sheaf of vari-colored Wood feathers. Turning to her companion, she said with a loud snort:

"I hate feathers."

The little man got off at the next stop.

It is regarded as altogether bad form to lock the door of your hotel room during convention week. At least, it isn't being done; perhaps people are too busy to stop for this last touch. But at any rate, a walk down any hotel corridor shows open doors all along the line, and of those that are closed, a good many are unlocked.

As yet no robberies of any consequence have been reported, even though some men have left their doors open, their lights burning and watches and pocketbooks lying about in full view of passersby.

An industrious thief could assure his wife and children against want without much effort, but Chicago robbers seem to be too busy holding up the natives to waste any time on the visitors.

Speaking of robbers, some, though not all, of the hotels have inflated the price of food for the conventioneers; but even after the price has been raised, "seen," and raised again, it is usually somewhat below the price ordinarily charged in New York restaurants of the same class.

In ordinary times, it must be possible to eat in Chicago and still pay your income tax in one instalment.

Two convention visitors were breakfasting at a Chicago club, whose privileges they were enjoying on guest cards. They asked the waiter, one of the silver-haired, old family retainer type, if it was against the rules to tip.

"It is a very long time since I've read the rules, sir," the waiter answered gravely, "and I've a very poor memory, sir."

He got his tip.

"We don't want any soap in ours."

"You may not want it, my friends," the man in the window promptly called back, "but I'm quite sure you need it."

Easterners accustomed to turning a switch and creating a cool breeze are talking of starting a syndicate to promote the electric fan habit in Chicago.

Clubs, hotels and other gathering places here usually don't have them, it seems, and while suffering visitors have no intent to decry the lake breezes, they do think Chicagoans might admit the wind doesn't always blow from that direction.

Some of Chicago's hotels which are housing hundreds of delegates and visitors were built before the days when a bath with every room was standard equipment for all good hostelries. As a result, men who possess bathrooms are very popular, and there has sprung up the new social custom of inviting one's friends to a morning shower.

"Oh, sir, I like politics a little," said the woman in the taxi on the way to the Coliseum. "But the real reason I came to Chicago was to do some shopping, and we've been treated outrageously. The shop windows have not been redressed for four days—think of it."

The "back townships," where the Democrats are still voting for Andrew Jackson, is an integral part of American political tradition.

Whether the victor of New Orleans will get any votes at San Francisco remains to be seen, but here it is a matter of record that Delaware is still voting for T. Coleman du Pont,

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Following are the speeches made in presenting to the delegates the claims of the principal aspirants for the Presidential nomination:

Wood.

By Governor Allen of Kansas.

We meet in a grave hour, and what we do here will affect the generations. It is more important than it was four years ago—more important than it was eight years ago—more important than it has been at any time since this city saw the nomination of Abraham Lincoln.

An unexpected period of confusion has come upon us in the aftermath of the great war. In a few months we seem to have forgotten its lessons and its heartbreak, and we stand wavering and uncertain in the confusion of stirring forces that are strange and new. Old ways are lost and leadership, hesitant and indecisive, drifts upon an uncharted sea.

Under the weak hands of a timorous government the social disorders and class-minded lusts caught from the world struggle have grown to alarming proportions.

The unchecked encroachment of sinister greed, the appalling waste of public money, the immoral pandering to class interest and class prejudices have brought us to a point where the nation remains and the world expects from this council of the people a plan out of the great need and not through the cunning of political expediency.

In seeking for the initiative and the prophetic wisdom to guide us in an hour that must be wholly constructive we are fortunate in a candidate whose record reveals qualities needed for the task. It is needed now to ask for assurance from General Wood. There is the witness of his service.

Wood's Work in Cuba.

The spirit of practical devotion which took him to Cuba in company with his great friend, Roosevelt, led him at the conclusion of a successful campaign to volunteer for the undesirable position of Military Governor of Santiago, then a pest hole on the face of the earth. It was a task new to American effort, but he cleaned the stricken city, buried its dead, cured it of its corruption and raised it from its pestilence.

All the more of a year, in which he had wrought the miracle of American common sense and common decency, he was chosen for the Governorship of Cuba, which the most responsible position America had to offer. All Santiago came to say good-bye, presenting him their proof of gratitude in these revealing words:

"The greatest of your many successes is to have won the confidence and esteem of a people in trouble."

This tribute of a troubled people comes to us in this day of uncertainty to touch our faith and hope with the confidence based on deeds.

You have had a business man. We present to you a record of four years as Governor of Cuba, a record which gained him international fame as the most successful civil administrator the century had known. Leonard Wood's mastery in these problems constitutes a page in history which records the cleanest and most unselfish thing one man ever did for a needy people. It is the one monument of our foreign policy involving high intelligence without self-interest.

He went to work out the benevolent policy of McKinley toward the people of the island for whom we had sacrificed our sons. He was given a free hand. His task was to build in that island an expression of government from the ground up and to restore peace with prosperity. Cuba was a pest ridden, unfed, misery, injustice and corruption from the exhausted system of Spanish control. The resources of the island were dissipated, its industries ruined, its energies demoralized. Its people were about to lose all those things which make the difference between a civilized community and a starving population.

Formed a Model Government.

He reorganized the island and framed a model of government which stands today as proof of his sanity and constructive genius. His wisdom encompassed all the activities of the people. He touched with his vital interest its dead agriculture, developed its railways, taught the Cubans how to make just laws relating to everything from municipal administration to general taxation. He builded American ideals into a school system, reorganized the struggling forces of civil life into orderly government, made roads, introduced sanitation and hygiene, stamped out yellow fever and pestilential malaria, and fashioned it all with humaneness and a stability that has withstood the strain of the changing years.

Possessing the highest degree of executive capacity, he was something more than the work of a business man. It was the work of a statesman who had not narrowed his vision to the purely business life. It was the accomplishment of a great national organizer. A President must be a business man, and he must be a statesman. He must have a broad view of the internal situation. He must know politics, for politics is what gives us our government, be it good or bad. Government is no better than its politics and it behooves the one you must improve the other.

The vague longing for a business man for President will not be satisfied by one who knows only business. The President must understand world affairs and the crossing and recrossing currents of social and economic influences. He must have the profound comprehending capacity that brought Leonard Wood at the conclusion of his work in Cuba the commendation of the leaders of the period. Elihu Root, then Secretary of War, said:

"I felt under a debt of the greatest gratitude to General Wood for what I think is one of the most conspicuous and meritorious pieces of work ever done by any American."

Lord Cromer, the greatest colonial administrator that England has produced, said: "General Wood's work in Cuba was the best colonial work of the century."

Gen Roosevelt's Tribute.

Theodore Roosevelt said: "Leonard Wood four years ago went down to Cuba and has rendered services to that country of the kind which, if performed 2,000 years ago, would have made him a hero mixed up with the sun-god in various ways; a man who devoted his whole life through these four years to who thought of nothing else, did nothing else, save to bring up the standard of political and social life in that island, to teach the people after four centuries of misrule that there were such things as governmental righteousness and honesty and fair play for all men on their merits as men."

General Wood accomplished his results in Cuba by making himself accessible to the Cuban people. He constantly increased the number of Cuban officials until soon 90 per cent. of his associates were Cubans. He taught them that government should be run like a business. Unless some one teaches us that in America business may come to be run like the Government.

The proof of his business ability which he wrote into the Cuban record he repeated through five years of distinguished service in the Philippines.

He repeated it in his constructive work as Chief of Staff of the War Department, in his management of the great cantonments and training camps of the war and in all the widespread activities of his conspicuously useful life. A President must be able to interpret the shadow of coming events. We do not need to speak concerning Leonard Wood's foresight.

When the great war broke upon the consciousness of the American people with a terrific shock, it found that Leonard Wood had been preparing. We heard from him no platitudes about a million men springing to arms overnight. In his own initiative he established the Plattsburgh training camps, created the first line of the national defense and gave to the thousands of magnificent young American men who volunteered a new definition of loyalty, a new opportunity for service, a new vision of their national obligation.

While other men were preaching the need of keeping out of war he sounded the reveille that awoke a slumbering nation, and made victory possible. He insisted; he demanded. "We must prepare."

Submerges Self in Service.

We saw him accept whatever task was given into his hands with the cheerful obedience of those who submerge self in service. In our State, where he trained many of our splendid young men, inspiring them with his spirit, fashioning them into the 89th Division, the people witnessed his work with such pride that when the Governor of our State, my honored predecessor, made him by proclamation a citizen of Kansas, every other citizen applauded. We saw him ride with his boys by the point of embarkation and there at the last moment, we read with consternation that his great desire to take his division to the field was not to be granted, and with a new appreciation we read the honest words of farewell to his division:

"I have worked hard with you and you have done excellent work. I had hoped very much to take you over to the other side. The orders have been changed and I am to go back to Funston. I leave for there tomorrow morning. I wish you the best of luck and ask you to keep up the high standard of conduct and work of excellent work. I had the best division in the army.

"There isn't anything to be said. These orders stand and the only thing to do is to do the best we can—all of us—to win the war. That's what we are here for; that's what you have been trained for. I shall follow your career with the deepest interest—with just as much interest as I have in you here with you. Good luck and God bless you."

This man was no weakling. Not an hour was lost in sulking. Not a word was wasted in criticism. Not an instant spent in mourning over his personal disappointment. We see him coming back to duty in another division. "If we can," he said, "we'll make it even better than the one with which I had hoped to serve in France."

Right to Wear His Uniform.

Some men pretend to object to the fact that he wears the uniform of his country. Since when has this uniform become an emblem of disqualification? Washington wore this uniform; so did Jackson and Harrison. Lincoln, as a young man in the stirring early days of this great State, did not hesitate to put it on. Grant wore it; so did Garfield and McKinley and Roosevelt. Six generations of brave soldiers of the Republic have worn it, and no man today, passing the altars upon which have been sacrificed the lives of the brave, can say that it has ever brought menace to the American liberties.

No man today may contemplate the 60,000 graves we left in France, or the 250,000 men who have come home to bear the scars of war throughout their lives, or the 4,000,000 who have taken off their uniforms and gone back to their work, without any hatefulness in the fearsome forebodings of the specimen who would associate with the American uniform any thought that does not hallow it with gratitude.

The American soldier is a citizen soldier. Leonard Wood holds fast to the traditions of the great citizen soldiers of the Republic. His model of voluntary training camps, expressed in the Plattsburgh program and his valuable educational work at Funston, his well known belief in a small but well trained army; his constant declaration that he believes in the training of citizens for better citizenship, in sound minds for sound bodies, cannot be twisted before an intelligent people into a false phase with which to frighten the timid. A plain, blunt man, with blunt belief in facts, he is today the best known American. In the frank expression of his belief there is no hidden motive. To candidate for high office has ever given the people of this nation with soul and mind so frankly revealed as Leonard Wood.

No man in America has been given so many constructive things to do in this generation, and no one today declares the fact that whatever he has undertaken he has done superlatively well.

No endeavor of his has grown in truer colors his calm and steady strength better than the work at Gary. It was the old quarrel that took him there—the struggle between those who hire and those who toil, the only form of civil strife which the government still allows to menace a helpless public. He was carried to the task the guarantee of fair play. He could have passed the buck. He had been advised not to go to Gary. He was told the situation was full of dynamite. He could have sent a subordinate, but he went in person and dominated the situation by the force of absolute justice. He talked freely to all classes, and the fair minded element among the strikers met his fairness with obedience and co-operation.

Not a shot was fired nor a bayonet used. Here, as twenty years before in Cuba, he gained the confidence of a people in trouble.

Wood's Work at Gary.

To the strike leaders he said: "I want to make one thing clear to you and to the workers you represent. We are here to maintain order, to see that the citizens of Gary are protected in their peaceful pursuits—that rights under law of the striking employes of the steel mills are protected, as well as the rights of other citizens."

He spoke not as a soldier, but as a man charged with the protection of the public. He spoke as Washington might have spoken. His calm decision at that hour not only brought quiet to Gary, but assurance and confidence to the waiting country. The success of his sane and just endeavor brought back to men their faith in government.

Again at Omaha, in the racial riots in West Virginia, in the labor troubles of the steel strike, in the railroad tangle, the quality of determination which should be always the American pledge to protect the rights of all by firm and righteous government.

No man can know him without recognizing the liberality of his mind, his openness to conviction and his generous appreciation of others. "He is hospitable to advice."

As President he will not seek to create for himself a neutral background out of mediocre men. The nation will have that to which the people are entitled in the executive—the intellect, force and moral leaders. He has submitted his candidacy to the American people with complete frankness, and the expression of confidence which has come to him from every section of the United States cannot be ignored. The sum total of preferential expressions marks him as the outstanding candidate in the minds of the whole people.

All his qualities fit him pre-eminently for the office of the President of the United States. His magnificent physical strength, his stability of character, his clear vision of international relations, his wonderful capacity for organizing civil activities, his administrative and executive ability, his sober realization of the tremendous tasks of the future—these attributes should appeal to us in this convention.

Not Testing.

We are still testing; we are besieged by a confusion of counselors. We hear the clamor of the Asmanogue. Opportunists and shortsighted timeservers and men with honeyed sophistries beguile our attention. Meanwhile the clouds of doubt and unrest drift sullenly, as vapor from the ground. Far above the tumult and the shouting is the flag, emblematic of that stalwart, virile Americanism whose self-evident truths have lived through the generations.

Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt sleep, but their spirits brood over this convention, trying this gathering, if it be in tune with the ideals of the Republic. The choice that is made now may mold the character of the nation for fifty years and perhaps longer, for resolve minds are plastic and the leadership that comes now will go far to determine the character of our Government henceforth.

What we do here cannot be recalled for new consideration.

The moving finger writes, and having writ, Moves on; nor all your piety nor wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a line Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

If we make a mistake today the great party may lose its major importance to the Republic. There isn't an American worthy to be here who does not believe in the future leadership of his country. We'll have that leadership when we're worthy, and that leadership will not depend upon any international society we may join. It will depend upon the success which we make of the experiment of human government here, and to that call the instinct of every man must arise.

With full appreciation of the challenge of the hour I present the name of the man who fits the hour—Leonard Wood.

Lowden.

By William A. Rodenberg, of Illinois.

At no time since the birth of the Republican Party has there been greater need for the exercise of calm, deliberate and dispassionate judgment in the selection of a standard bearer than there is today. A spirit of rebellious unrest is abroad in the land. On all sides are heard murmurings of discontent. The times are pregnant with the prophecy of gloom and despair. Confidence has disappeared, and the splendid optimism of former days, once our proudest national asset, has given way to an ever-present fear of impending disaster.

For seven years the ship of state, straining every timber, has been drifting in a sea of uncertainty, its pilot confused and bewildered by strange voices in the air and lured on its vacillating course by false lights along the shore. Nine anxious months still lie before us, and, if, perchance, it should be that our good fortune to avoid the rocks of destruction it will be due solely to the mysterious workings of a merciful Providence that guides and protects the destiny of a chosen people in their time of trial and tribulation.

I know that I voice the sentiment of every patriotic American when I express the hope that God will speed the day when a better and a braver pilot shall be placed at the helm—one who is ready and willing in times of stress and storm to read the chart and compass of experience, one who can restore discipline among officers and crew and bring safe a mutinous, that is born of confidence, one who will steer a straight and steady course through the troubled waters of national disorder and again find refuge in the harbor of national safety and security. To find such a pilot is the imperative duty of the Republicans assembled in convention today.

My friends, three score years ago, at a time when the passions of men were stirred to the depths, when the horizon of the Republic's future was darkened by the clouds of approaching conflict, when the very perpetuity of a government of the people, by the people, and for the people was trembling in the balance, the nation turned for leadership to the State of Illinois. Here on the broad and fertile prairies of this great State, so open that truth could find no hiding place, was found a man of the people, a leader, a tender, the apotheosis of freedom's holy fight—our Lincoln. The world's Lincoln. Grandly, nobly, sublimely, he met the test patiently, and passionately he pressed forward in the great task that lay before him, and today he stands acclaimed as America's grandest contribution to the world's heritage of great and noble men.

Ready to Give Another President.

Illinois, the State whose soil has been sanctified by the blood of the immortal Lovejoy, our first great martyr to the cause of free press and speech, gave Abraham Lincoln to the nation in 1860. And Illinois, the State that is still the wellspring of Republican hope and inspiration, stands ready in 1920 to consecrate to the service of the Republic another of her great sons—one whose brilliant record of public and private achievement is the very best and surest guarantee that under his leadership our beloved country will be raised from the obloquy into which it has fallen and again placed on the road that leads to national honor and national glory.

We present him to you because we believe in his Americanism, an Americanism that comes from close contact with the plain people. Born of humble parentage in the State of Minnesota, his early youth and young manhood were spent on a farm in the State of Iowa. It was there, close to nature and nature's God, in the great school of human experience, the school that has given to the nation its best and truest men, that he formed those sterling traits of character that have ruled his life and have left their impress upon his every act.

We present him to you because we know him to be a manly man of courage and conviction, endowed with the genius of common sense, faithful and fearless, whose every heartbeat is full of sympathy with the noblest aspirations of his fellow men.

We present him to you because he stands for law and order and Constitutional Government. Of fine legal mind and training, with both legislative and executive experience, he believes in re-establishing the powers and prerogatives of every branch of the Federal Government as set forth by the fathers in the Constitution itself, and he is unalterably opposed to executive usurpation of any legislative or judicial function.

Stands on His Record.

We present him to you because his record demonstrates that he has a clear and comprehensive conception of the proper relation of capital and labor to each other. His work as member of Congress and as Governor of a great industrial State, with all its complex and diversified interests, stamps him as the living embodiment of the doctrine of the "square deal." He believes in the interdependence of employe and employer, and in all of his official acts he has endeavored to each exactly the same measure of protection under the law.

We present him to you because he typifies more than any one of the distinguished gentlemen who will be placed in nomination before this convention the great vital issue of economy in the administration of public affairs. He believes in the application of sound and practical business principles to the conduct of Government, and as proof of that belief we point to the decreased tax rate and the increased administrative efficiency of the State over whose destinies he presides today.

We present him to you because he is in full accord with the true principles of America, which still preserve the teachings of Theodore Roosevelt in the international affairs of Woodrow Wilson. He believes that the sovereignty of the United States must be kept free and inviolate from European influence or dictation, and that while maintaining a friendly attitude toward all nations we owe it to those who have gone before and to those who are to follow us to enter into partnership with none.

We present him to you because to him the American flag, whose stars and stripes have been baptized in the best blood of American patriotism, symbolizes the strength and the power and the majesty of a mighty nation, and he believes that that flag should command respect at home and abroad and give full and ample protection to the humblest American citizen, wherever it may be unfurled to the breeze.

Delegates, a solemn responsibility rests upon this Republican Party today. Abset difficult and perplexing problems, social, economic and industrial, growing out of the World War are pressing for solution. The best constructive ability of our great constructive party must be utilized in the solution of these problems in the crucial and critical period upon which we have now entered. The nation demands as its Chief Executive a man of clear brain and steady nerve, a man of vision, but not a visionary; a man of ideals, but not an idealist; a man of works, and not of words.

Illinois has such a man.

We present him to you as our candidate for President. We present the patriotic Governor of a patriotic State—Frank Orren Lowden.

Johnson.

By Charles S. Wheeler of California.

You have called the name of California, and without hesitation, without a single mental reservation, California makes answer that now, after seventy years of loyal and devoted Statehood, she at last has brought forth upon her own soil a son fitted in every quality that becomes a man to carry forward the triumphant standard of the Republican Party and to fill worthily the exalted office of President of the United States.

The people of California to a degree not duplicated by the population of any other State in the Union are a composite of the whole American people. In the golden days of '49 and '50 California was dedicated to the nation at an assemblage of 100,000 American men and women, completely representative, not only of every other State, but of every city and of every hamlet and of every township in the nation.

There was thus infused into her very lifeblood an intense national feeling. California knows no East, she knows no West, she knows no North and she knows no South. She but knows that we are one great people under one flag. Today, with her millions of population, just as on the day when she first took her place in the American galaxy, she is really but a vast convocation of the people, rejoicing under the protection of the Constitution of our fathers, in the blessings that are theirs and chanting the immortal music of American liberty.

We hold that it should be no matter of surprise that from such an environment there should now step forth a personality so essentially American, so thoroughly representative of the whole nation—a defender of the Constitution, a devoted worshipper of American traditions, a natural leader of men, a leader destined through the grace of a united and triumphant Republican Party to be the first President of the United States to come out of the great West.

The California delegation claims the right to speak authoritatively for the rank and file of the Republican Party. It bases that claim upon the fact that after a hotly contested battle, fought honorably in the light of day against well organized and amply munitioned forces, it was sent to this convention by the stupendous majority of 160,000 American citizens, who in literal truth hailed from every nook and cranny, corner to corner in the land. We, therefore, without arrogance hold ourselves authorized to present to you in language that shall be unmistakable the situation as the rank and file of the Republican Party see it.

Every sign of the Zodiac, this should be a Republican year. The disgust for the party in power is universal. But notwithstanding all this, there never has been a time in the history of the Republican Party when a failure to name the right candidate would so surely spell party defeat.

Man—Not the Party—This Year.

This proposition may be laid down with axiomatic certainty: The November election will not be won by the platform of either political party. The personality of the candidate, and not party affiliation, is going to elect the next President of the United States. The man who will enter the White House on the fourth of March, 1921, will be that Republican or that Democrat in whom the average American voter places the most faith.

These voters have learned within the past few years that the most powerful ruler in the world is the United States.

United States. They are smarting under a sense of personal oppression. No man can make them believe that they are not the victims of the profiteers. They believe that the remedy for their economic wrong will be found when there is again in the White House a man of vital forces and full sympathies and they are grimly determined that never again with their consent shall there be elevated to that all-powerful place any man who has not convinced them by his record that he is in touch with the needs of the average man.

A "yellow dog" is impossible and a "dark horse" cannot win. If you expect their vote do not offer to them a bold, capable, progressive, unsympathetic business administration. They are in no mood to take it on. What they want and what they demand of this convention is a candidate whose red-blooded, forthright Americanism transfuses its warmth to the cockles of their hearts and whose words of raging righteousness bring new hope to their troubled souls.

Is it not the truth that the most important duty that confronts this convention is to see to it that the Republican Party is once again returned to power?

These men and women everywhere have learned to know California's son, and they have taken his just measure. They see in him a man of action, a great constructive executive, a leader to whom a platform promise is a solemn obligation; a man who keeps the faith, who enacts his promised word into the law of the land as executive who gave to his own native State a government so clean, so efficient and so uplifting that it challenges comparison; a leader who knows how so to wield the cudgel of political power that even party knaves are forced to play the game squarely with the people.

Not only have the people seen and marked these things, but their confidence in the man has been emphatically confirmed by campaign disclosures of very recent date.

Put to the Acid Test.

In the last few weeks the American people have seen this son of California brought face to face with the highest ambition that can possess the hope of mortal man. They have seen him put to the acid test. And they have seen him return from his great campaign with head erect, with no blot on his escutcheon, and with eyes that can still look straight into the eyes of his fellow countrymen, with head so erect and with eyes so proud that, as was said of Sumner, so men must say of him:

"He placed the standard of life upon a pedestal so high that scandal standing on tiptoe could not touch the soles of his shoes."

This convention cannot afford to turn its back upon the banner of certainty to follow the dubious fortunes of a candidate for whom it must apologize.

The time has come when a doubting nation is asking if the Republican Party, whether or not it has the highest office in the whole world is to be treated as the bauble of rich men. You can answer that question by nominating the man whom the people want.

If you shall select this son of California, remember that in the conduct of his campaign he has placed no dependence upon the back of the Republican Party. He has saddled it with no old man of the sea to gall the withers of the party throughout the campaign. With him as a candidate, the party will have nothing to explain, no pulliatives to offer, no excuse for a single mistake. The people will know that in the White House sits a friendly attitude toward all nations, we own

Bewilderment and Pathos Around Headquarters---Irish Move

CONVENTION DRAWS THE HOTEL CROWDS

REST FOR MANY WORKERS

But Wood Forces Find Plenty to Do After the Balloting Begins.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Chicago, or the political portion of it, was all but drained dry of its population during the long session of the convention today. In the hotels along Michigan Avenue, where the campaign centres, few persons were to be seen—few, that is, in comparison with the stifling crowds that had swarmed the lobbies in the evenings earlier in the convention week, and those few were mostly women.

All of them, men and women both, were of that class of unfortunate citizens unable to get tickets for the great event in the Coliseum, but apparently most of the masculine camp followers of the convention felt that if they hadn't been able to get seats for the big day their dignity required them to conceal the fact.

So the average man strolled out of his hotel with the crowd early this morning on the pretense that he was going to the convention, and if he did not hang about the outside of the Coliseum, as many did, hoping to get early information of the result, he disappeared into a movie theatre or sought that famous oasis where those who are lucky enough to beat their way through the crowd blow the foam off of 5 per cent. stuff.

At the headquarters of each candidate there were a few workers assigned to the kitchen police duty of politics—looking after the offices, answering the telephone and eventually, when the afternoon drew toward its close and the balloting had begun, receiving bulletins and passing them on to the knots of curious hangers-on who gradually gathered.

As the afternoon passed more persons gathered in the headquarters. The men who didn't go to the Coliseum began to realize that at least they had escaped a lot of physical discomfort, and they delighted in making ostentatious pretenses of coolness for the benefit of the discouraged stragglers who presently drifted back from the hall.

Holiday for Workers.

After all, it was something of a holiday for the weary office workers and buttonehole badgers, who had done their best for about eighteen hours a day all the week. Those who stayed behind took their ease, and the unfortunate victims who gave up the struggle against suffocation in the Coliseum and went back to the hotels before the balloting was over were glad to join them. They had been wounded in the good cause, and they wanted nothing but rest.

The Wood headquarters is a good place to rest, from one point of view, for the soft couches which adorn the little booths of the various divisional heads of organization offer an allurement to the weary such as can hardly be found anywhere else in the Congress Hotel. But there was too much excitement around the Wood establishment to allow much repose for anybody.

Rumors of some of the minor booms, boomlets and boomerangs were relieved from much anxiety about the result after the second ballot. Thereafter the matter had for them not much more than an academic interest, but the Wood supporters were full of excitement from the moment the telephone brought the news that the balloting had begun until the convention adjourned.

After the session, when the crowds returned from the Coliseum, the Wood headquarters was the first to fill up, and the rank and file of the Wood people were jubilant. They thought victory was sure on the first ballot tomorrow morning and did not conceal their satisfaction.

For that matter, everybody talked optimistically. Even at the Harding headquarters certain stubborn followers of the Senator still asserted they were going to win tomorrow, though more moderate supporters contented themselves with the assertion that he had made a good enough showing to deserve the Vice Presidency.

Hoover Men Jubilant.

The Hoover supporters were jubilant. The great popular demonstration by the galleries had convinced them that, however the convention might be, the public were for their man, and they felt sure that this would have its effect on the delegates over night. One of the executives of the Hoover boom added:

"If anybody says that we packed the galleries and planted the applause, you can tell them that the Hoover organization had exactly twenty tickets to the Coliseum, and we paid the National Committee a hundred dollars a piece for them."

But there were scenes of real pathos around the Johnson headquarters. There was nothing particularly pathetic about the henchmen of Mayor William Hale Thompson, who circulated among the Johnson crowd. But the native sons and daughters of the Golden State who had come all the way from the coast to see their hero carried to victory were dazed and dumfounded.

Those whom Senator Johnson would call "us common folks" couldn't understand it. They had been told that Johnson had a great victory in the platform fight and had killed the British League of Nations for good and all. Only one thing remained—the triumphant nomination of their hero—and at this point something had gone wrong. The nomination hadn't happened. There was still hope, but a hope based on faith.

Women Supporters Puzzled.

Middle-aged women stood in groups and talked in evident perplexity. They couldn't understand it. "Do you think he really is beaten?" they asked each other; and some of them began to fear that there was something about politics that puzzled them.

While at the Johnson headquarters on the mezzanine floor of the Auditorium Hotel they were wondering whether the battle could yet be won, down in the lobby, at the foot of the grand stairs, the Republican Glee Club from Columbus, Ohio, was chanting jovially the praises of "Harding will, you all know how to spell," and asserting despite the figures on the tally sheets that "we'll send him to the White House."

But that was an echo from Ohio, where politics are a matter of course, like the weather, and something the vicissitudes of which must be endured in good humor. The Californians listened gloomily to this untimely levity, and asked each other once more: "Do you suppose he's really through?"

HOOVER CHEERS STIFLE SECONDER'S SPEECH

Brown of Nevada Delivers Eulogy to a Crowd That Can't Hear It.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—A speech that was born to die unheard was delivered in the convention this afternoon. This was not one of those leave-to-print affairs such as The Congressional Record features. It was an oratorical effort actually undertaken and completed, but not a sentence of it was clear to any of the spectators.

H. H. Brown of Nevada was the hero or the victim of the occasion. It all depends on how one looks upon such things. Judge Nathan L. Miller of New York had made an eloquent speech placing Herbert Hoover in nomination before the convention, and Mr. Brown was to follow him in a short address seconding the nomination. The galleries were cheering and shouting Hoover's name when Mr. Brown of Nevada appeared on the platform.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, temporary presiding officer, rapped loudly for order. The harder he rapped the louder cheered the crowd. Mr. Smoot registered indignation. There was Mr. Brown wanting to say something nice about Mr. Hoover, and Mr. Hoover's friends wouldn't let him be heard. Finally Senator Smoot retired to the background, leaving Brown of Nevada standing there, alone and unsupported, dashed hither and thither on a sea of cheers.

Brown of Nevada is good looking. He is tall and spare and has a boyish appearance that is pleasing. He stood there, like the Golden Gate, calm, imperturbable to fate. The cheers kept on. Brown of Nevada stood it as long as he could. Then he drew a deep breath and went to it.

It was a minute or two before the shouting spectators realised that Brown of Nevada was delivering his speech. Faint snatches of it, bits of tattered phrases, filtered through the voice-magnifier over the head of Brown of Nevada. They said nobody knew, perhaps few cared. Brown of Nevada seemed to care least of all. He went through it to the end, bowed and retired. His exit was marked by an increase in the cheering for Brown's friend Hoover.

Senator Smoot tried again to still the galleries. The few delegates who shouted for Hoover had already been chilled, for it was cold—figuratively, of course—down there on the floor. The cheers continued. Suddenly their volume grew to a howl before the balloting was over were glad to join them. They had been wounded in the good cause, and they wanted nothing but rest.

The Wood headquarters is a good place to rest, from one point of view, for the soft couches which adorn the little booths of the various divisional heads of organization offer an allurement to the weary such as can hardly be found anywhere else in the Congress Hotel. NEW YORKERS MAY SWING TO SPROUL forces have shot their bolt and it becomes evident that the General can obtain no more votes the switch to Sproul will be made. The Lowden men will practically follow the same line of action. Meantime the Lowden men are using Nicholas Murray Butler as a smoke screen.

Manhattan Men for Lowden.

Practically all Manhattan delegates will continue to vote for Butler, but nomination the New York Wood men the organization leaders to go to Lowden and will give the word at the they are merely awaiting the word of county to get behind Lowden. Senator Wadsworth will give the signal to Samuel S. Koenig, chairman of the New York Republican County Committee, to do the same. Then the full strength of Lowden will be shown. If both Lowden and Wood fall short of the necessary number of votes both sides will swing to Sproul.

In the meantime the Pennsylvania delegates will continue as they did today, seventy-five voting for Sproul and one for Knox. At the final showdown the lone Knox delegate will cast in his lot with the Sproul men.

Scattering votes in the New York delegation will have no effect on the result. William L. Ward and Otis H. Cutler of Westchester voted for Hoover. The other Hoover vote was cast by ex-Judge Nathan L. Miller of Syracuse. All three will probably go to Lowden finally. Jules S. Bache, who held out on all ballots for Poindexter, will probably go to General Wood. The two Harding votes were cast by George W. Aldridge and James L. Hotchkiss of Rochester.

They are not Harding men at heart and are confidentially counted on for Lowden. The five Johnson men are divided between Wood and Lowden. The five delegates who voted for Coolidge are looked upon as Lowden men.

	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.
Wood	10	19	22	20
Lowden	3	14	26	32
Hoover	2	2	2	2
Harding	2	1	2	2
Coolidge	1	1	1	1
Poindexter	1	1	1	1
Johnson	0	4	5	5

The whole delegation will hold a caucus at 9:15 o'clock in the morning, just before the convention meets. But it is not expected that the decision arrived at in tonight's conference will be changed.

LEADERS UNABLE TO AGREE

form the convention leaders that he is behind Sproul.

J. Leonard Replogle, head of the Sproul Advisory Committee, appealed to the absent chief in vain. General William Wallace Atterbury also was unsuccessful in reaching Penrose through channels that had hitherto been successful in influencing Pennsylvania's political autocrat.

Johnson, it is held by many, has been eliminated as a Presidential factor, although he remains with a good-sized vote, a source of disturbance and perhaps a potential dictator of the nomination, or he dictated the platform plank on the League of Nations.

Less Objections to Knox.

As far as the Senate group is concerned, the nomination of Knox would suit them. The main objections that they see to Knox as a candidate are his age, the charge that would be made that he was a corporation lawyer and the fact that he voted against the Woman suffrage amendment.

In the moves that are now going on behind the scenes Knox is bound to figur prominently. He got only two votes in today's balloting, one from Pennsylvania and the other from Missouri. Sproul received 359½ votes on the first ballot, including all but Pennsylvania's 76, but dropped to 79½ on the last ballot, losing one vote to Knox out of the Pennsylvania delegation.

The Sproul boom took a decidedly upward swing prior to the balloting. Many of the leading men in the convention who desire a conservative to head the national ticket, and whose preference is Lowden, were of the opinion that they would be unable to bring about Lowden's nomination. Others affiliated with this group felt that it might be unwise to nominate Lowden because of the disclosures about his pre-convention campaign fund.

Just how much opinion in this contingent has been influenced by the strength shown by Lowden on the first four ballots is not clear. The balloting cleared the way for the manoeuvring that is going on tonight.

Ballots Leave Uncertainty.

Prior to the assembling of the convention on Tuesday it was the unanimous opinion of those most prominent in the party that it would be necessary to take several ballots before any inkling could be gained as to how the convention stood as between the various candidates. Now that four ballots have been taken there is still great uncertainty as to the outcome of the fight for the Presidential nomination.

Some of the delegations most important in numbers stood firm for favorite sons or major candidates throughout the voting. Other delegations scattered their votes, to show that they had no real preference and were aiming to see which way the cat would jump. This was particularly true of delegations from Southern States. The shifting made by Lowden on the first ballot influenced them, and the Illinois candidate showed the effect of this upon those who want to be with the winner.

One thing was demonstrated strikingly today, and that is that radicalism is not popular with the personality of the delegates. When on the first ballot most of the members of the Wisconsin delegation cast their votes for Senator Robert M. La Follette, the convention hissed and booed. On each of the three subsequent ballots there were hisses and boos as La Follette's score was announced.

TIMES AIR DELIVERY PLEASES OFFICIALS

SHOWS AIR MAIL EFFICIENCY

Plans in Making for Opening New York-to-San Francisco Route in August.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Delivery of the special airplane editions of The New York Times in Chicago on the same day as issued in New York City, as a result of the issue of the airplane mail service between New York City and Chicago, is pleasing to postal officials, who regard it as a demonstration that the use of the airplane for mail purposes is capable of infinite possibilities and development.

If Congress had heeded earlier the appeals of Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General, in charge of the development of the air mail service, and who, prior to entering public service, was a well-known Washington newspaper correspondent, it would also be possible for The New York Times to be delivered to delegates at the San Francisco Convention the third morning out. Congress at its recent session made available $1,250,000 for the establishment of a transcontinental air mail service. The Post Office Department is making plans as rapidly as possible for the operation of the New York to San Francisco air mail service. Mr. Praeger expects to have these plans ready in time to start the service some time in August.

Under the schedule contemplated, air mail leaving New York at daybreak will be in Omaha the same day before sunset. Mail leaving New York on a Monday morning, for example, will arrive in San Francisco not later than 9 o'clock the following Wednesday morning. The best schedule that could be made by train would be by using the mail train leaving New York at 8:40 P. M., which is scheduled to deliver its mail at San Francisco the fourth day out at 10:30 P. M.

This can be done only if the train is able to make the transcontinental connection at Chicago, and the connection is missed whenever the mail train is as much as one hour late. On the average, this New York mail train misses the transcontinental connection 40 per cent. of the time, and the mail then takes twenty-four hours longer to reach San Francisco. In January, 1920, the train missed connection 100 per cent. of the time.

Mr. Praeger asserts that the air mail can be twelve hours behind time from New York to San Francisco and still beat the mail train into the Golden Gate City by twenty hours if the connection is made at Chicago, and by forty-four hours if the connection is missed. The distance by the fastest train mail route between New York and San Francisco, according to Mr. Praeger, is 3,237 miles, while the air mail distance will be about 2,560 miles. The time by mail train, over the fastest routes, has been from eighty-nine to ninety-one hours. It is the expectation that the time by air mail will be about fifty-three hours and thirty minutes, without reserve to night flying, while the actual flying time will be about thirty-three hours. The schedule prepared by Mr. Praeger will call for an average speed of eighty miles an hour.

The route will follow the present route from New York to Chicago, over which the airplane edition of The New York Times is being sent, and thence over the new air mail route from Chicago to Omaha, which was opened in May. There will be eight landing fields. Five of these will be the air mail fields at New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha and San Francisco. The three intermediate routes will be fixed when the route between Omaha and San Francisco is definitely determined.

The air mail service was established when the New York-Washington route was opened on May 15, 1918. During the period of a month and two years in which the air mail service has been in existence its operations have demonstrated that it is possible to maintain a daily operating schedule and that for certain limited classes of commercial operations involving great speed the airplane can operate dollar for dollar as cheaply and at a speed some 100 per cent. greater than any other medium of transportation.

The air mail has been in continuous operation since May 15, 1918. It has covered more than 473,210 miles and its performance has been 92.49 per cent. It has carried 22,254,400 letters during its daily operations between Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia and Washington at better than twice the speed of the Congressional Limited or the Twentieth Century and it has maintained this record of more than 91 per cent. efficiency Summer and Winter, across mountains and up and down the east coast. On the route between Cleveland and Chicago the air mail achieved a world's record of 206 consecutive 435-mile nonstop trips without a forced landing of any kind. At a cost to the Government of $397,220 up to last January the air mail in nineteen and one-half months covered an aggregate of 473,210 miles at a cost of 84 cents a mile.

FORECASTS HIT FAIRLY NEAR.

But Neither of the "Big Three" Reached the Total Predicted.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Forecasts of the first ballot proved reasonably accurate, although none of the three leading candidates, Wood, Lowden or Johnson, developed quite the strength that was claimed by the campaign managers. The prophecies of the leaders of the combination opposed to Wood proved most accurate.

The Wood headquarters figured 310 votes for him on the first ballot. He actually received 287½. The expectation of the Wood men was that the General would have more than 300 votes on the first ballot, would increase this on each succeeding ballot and would finally be chosen on the fourth or fifth ballot. The Wood vote increased, but slowly, so that his strength on the fourth ballot was only about what was expected on the first.

Opponents of Wood asserted before balloting began that he would at no time get more than 320 votes and that there were 729 to 735 votes in sight for Lowden if it was decided at a conference after the convention that he could be nominated without risking defeat at the election.

The claim of 350 votes for Lowden on the first ballot was not fulfilled. He fell short of this vote by nearly 40. Lowden gained, however, more than General Wood on the succeeding ballots and the end of the fourth, on which it was said a break to Lowden might be expected, the ballot left the two in the relative positions that had been expected by the Lowden leaders after the third ballot.

Dr. Butler failed to meet the expectation of his campaign managers and did not even hold the New York delegation after the first ballot. He received only 68 votes from New York and one from Kentucky on the first ballot. His strength kept dwindling until it fell to twenty votes, all from New York, on the fourth ballot.

The New York delegation divided its vote on the first ballot as follows: Butler, 68; Wood, 10; Lowden, 3; Harding, 2; Coolidge, 2; Poindexter, 1, and Hoover, 2.

On the fourth ballot the votes stood, Lowden, 32; Butler, 20; Wood, 20; Harding, 3; Johnson, 5; Coolidge, 4; Poindexter, 1, and Hoover, 1.

Although there were shifts in some of the Southern States, most of the delegates from that section stayed pretty well with the candidate with whom they started. It is doubtful if a decision upon at conferences tonight the first tangible evidence of an agreement may be found in the shifts in the first Southern States called in roll tomorrow.

PENROSE KEEPS SILENCE ON BALLOTING RESULTS

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—The results of the fourth ballot at the Republican Convention in Chicago, showing General Wood in the lead with 314½ votes, and Governor Sproul polling 79½, elicited not a word from Senator Penrose at "party headquarters," here tonight.

Neither would he make any comment on the platform. General opinion made the prediction that the continued silence on the part of the Senator since the convention opened was indicative that he is planning to bring his broadsides to bear suddenly to swing the final vote for Senator Knox.

Mr. Penrose has refused to make any comment on any political subject, other than the statement through his Secretary, Leighton Taylor, last Wednesday that "he was entirely friendly toward Sproul aspirations."

Samuel Dunbar, the second Secretary, arrived this morning from Chicago and went immediately to see the Senator. He left the Penrose house after a short period and hid himself so effectually that even his wife could not locate him. Mr. Taylor declared, however, that he had not sent for Dunbar and that his return and visit to the Senator had no significance. Other than Mr. Dunbar the Senator received no visitors today though he was constantly at the telephone talking with party leaders in Chicago.

Keep Them Happy

Dixon's is a regular gear tonic. It keeps 'em fit. It's awfully greasy stuff, but once your gears sink their teeth into it, you'll notice a big improvement right away.

DIXON'S Gear LUBRICANT

Dixon's puts a smooth slippery film of lubricant between your gears that keeps out friction and noise. It's a lasting film too, because Dixon's doesn't "squeeze out" under a load. It can't crawl back in a corner and let your gears run free and dry. Nor is it affected by heat or cold like ordinary lubricants.

In short, Dixon's will do this for you. Gives you more miles per gallon of gas—less expense.

Ask for Dixon's Oil for your transmission and differential. Also Dixon's Cup Grease and other famous lubricants.

BOOSTS RAISINS AT CHICAGO.

California Prize Beauty Gets Delegates to Eat One a Day.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Miss Violet Oliver, elected "Queen of the Vineyard Domain of the San Joaquin Valley" in a California beauty contest, arrived at the Blackstone Hotel today to boost the raisin as an article of daily diet. Miss Oliver approached those in the lobby for signatures to a pledge to eat at least one raisin a day, and one of the first she asked to sign was the Rev. Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, one of the principal officials of the Anti-Saloon League.

"We have already caused a large increase in the sale of your product," said Mr. Dinwiddie, referring to the practice of using a raisin or two to impart more "kick" to cider or home brews.

"We don't ask you to pledge yourself to drink raisins, but to eat them," replied Miss Oliver, who prevailed upon Dr. Dinwiddie to sign and to accept an invitation to attend the raisin growers' carnival which will be held during the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco.

Miss Oliver had less success with Senator Kellogg of Minnesota. With characteristic caution Senator Kellogg declined to sign the pledge, on the ground that there might come a day when he would not wish to eat a raisin.

PERSHING INVITED TO SAN FRANCISCO

Goltra's Action Starts Rumor That General Will Be a Dark Horse.

SANCTION FOR RETIREMENT

Baker Says He Is Sure It Will Be Forthcoming from Wilson at Pershing's Request.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—General John J. Pershing was today invited by Edward F. Goltra, National Democratic Committeeman from Missouri, to accompany the Democratic delegation from that State on its special train to San Francisco. This gave rise to a rumor that Mr. Goltra was grooming General Pershing as a dark horse for the Democratic nomination. But it was rather hard to reconcile this rumor with the fact that General Pershing has always been credited with being a Republican in sympathy. Of course, he has never voted and has had small opportunity to show his political preference, as he has been in the army ever since he was a boy.

The General was unable to accept the invitation because he has engagements at Harvard and Yale at the time of the San Francisco Convention. Mr. Goltra said that General Pershing was invited to go as a Missourian, and that the General regretted very much that he could not attend, especially as he had never seen a national political convention.

"Well, do you understand that General Pershing is a Republican, or a Democrat?" Mr. Goltra was asked.

"I assume he is a Democrat," replied the National Committeeman.

"Is there any possibility that General Pershing would be the Democratic nominee?"

"You are asking me to nominate the candidate of the convention," answered Mr. Goltra. "Let's get through with the Chicago auction first."

However, in the course of this conversation Mr. Goltra disclaimed any intention of nominating General Pershing at San Francisco or of stimulating a boom in his behalf.

A possible dark horse among the Democratic possibilities will accompany the Missouri delegation at the invitation of Mr. Goltra. This is Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, who has been spoken of several times lately as favored in certain Administration circles. Joshua W. Alexander, Secretary of Commerce, David R. Francis, former Ambassador to Russia, and Frederick D. Gardner, Governor of Missouri, all natives of that State, will also be in the party.

General Pershing was informed today by Secretary Baker that the Secretary "felt quite sure" that President Wilson would allow the ranking officer of the army to retire to private life whenever the General wished. The letter, which was written in reply to General Pershing's communication of a few days ago, follows:

Office of Secretary of War,
War Department.
June 10, 1920

My dear General Pershing:

"I have received your letter of June 7, with regard to the possibility of your relinquishing military duty within the next few months. I am happy to note that you are planning to aid us in the reorganization contemplated by the recent act of Congress, the importance of which, of course, is very great. In this work your knowledge of the qualification of officers will be indispensable, and, as the single list for promotion is a project which you earnestly recommended to Congress, it will help us all to have your aid in instituting it.

"Your military life has been active and exacting; your services to the country entitle you to choose, with the utmost freedom the activities and interests to which you should devote your time, and should you adhere to your present wish to retire I feel quite sure the President will meet your wishes whenever expressed. Both the country and the President will know that, should any emergency arise after you have retired, your country's call will find you ready to respond.

"Cordially yours,
"NEWTON D. BAKER."

WANTS IRISH IMMIGRANTS.

State Industrial Offical Says They Would Help Solve Farm Problems.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 11.—The immigrant is not the solution of New York State's farm labor shortage, according to Edward P. Boyle, Chairman of the State Industrial Commission. In an address to farmers, chamber of commerce representatives and State officials conferring here this afternoon on ways and means of giving the farmer adequate help and preventing a food shortage, he said that 98 per cent. of the immigrants arriving in this country, totalling 153,827 since Jan. 1, were returning to old jobs and prewar residences, while statistics showed that not even 5 per cent. of arrivals would consider agricultural work.

The mining and wheat field of the Far West and the greater compensation there attracted them, he said. Mr. Boyle declared that Irish immigration, if permitted by the English authorities, would aid in the solution of the help shortage problems because "Irish immigration has always been a dependable group of labor."

Many of the conferees agreed that cooperation with the farmer in the harvesting season was the only definite help that could be offered this year.

Warner C. Bates of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce urged a two weeks' campaign through State agencies for the establishment of home gardens as one means of warding off the predicted food shortage.

Lieutenant Governor Harry C. Walker, in the absence from the State of Governor Smith, presided. He will appoint a committee to consider the plan of cooperation with the farmers.

FOR A GALILEO MUSEUM.

Italians Plan to Establish It in the Scientist's Home at Arcetri.

ROME, May 23.—A movement has been started to make the house at Arcetri, called "Jewel," where Galileo lived from 1631 to 1642, a national monument, and to collect there all Galileo relics. While Galileo lived at Arcetri he was called to Rome to answer a charge of heresy before the Inquisition. On his return he witnessed the death of his daughter, who was a nun. In this particular house he dictated "Dialogues of New Sciences," which he considered his masterpiece. It was there also that he received the post Milton, and was the recipient from Holland of a gold chain in acknowledgment of his services to science.

VERMONT TOWN GAINS 470.

St. Johnsbury Increases Only 7 Per Cent. in Population.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The following population figures were given out today by the Census Bureau:

St. Johnsbury, Vt., 7,103, an increase of 470, or 7 per cent.

Appleton, Wis., 10,561, an increase of 2,762, or 34.8 per cent.

The population of Chicago, Ill., will be announced tomorrow.

Other populations to be announced tomorrow include Wheeling, W. Va.; San Antonio, Texas, and Allentown, Pa.

PICK COX AND NIXON FOR NEW YORK SLATE

Tentative Program Prepared to Guide Democratic Delegation at San Francisco.

A tentative program for the guidance of the Democratic delegation from this State at the San Francisco convention has been prepared. It will form the basis of conferences to be held at French Lick Springs during the coming week. This program, as briefly described yesterday by a Democrat who assisted in drafting it, provides for the nomination of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon as Vice President on a ticket headed by Governor James M. Cox.

It also provides for the casting of the solid vote of the delegation for Governor Smith on the first ballot, then for a shift of the vote to Nixon, and finally another shift to Cox, where the delegation will stick as long as there is a chance of winning. The tentative program goes no further than this and it probably will go no further until the delegation reaches the convention city. It will be subject then to revision according to the exigencies of the situation.

The conferees who will discuss the matter next week, so far as known yesterday in this city, are Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany; Thomas Taggart, Democratic leader of Indiana; Mr. Nixon, Governor Smith and possibly several influential supporters of Governor Cox from Ohio and elsewhere.

It has been arranged to have Mr. Nixon's name placed in nomination by a delegate from Alabama, which State comes first on the roll call. Word that this arrangement had been perfected reached this city soon after Mr. Nixon's recent trip through the South, where he made a number of speeches and where, as a son of Virginia, he was warmly received.

The Democrat who revealed the situation as it exists to date said:

"The delegation from this State is solidly for Cox and as solidly against William G. McAdoo, who appears to lead the list of candidates. It is unalterably opposed to any candidate allied in any way to the present Administration. The organization received no favors at the hands of the Administration, and this evasion of the rightful claims of New York for recognition was particularly marked during the time that Mr. McAdoo was at the head of the Treasury Department and in close touch with all branches of the Government.

"Mr. Nixon received recognition from two Republican Presidents and it was left to a Democratic President to ignore him. President Taft appointed him to represent the United States as a special commissioner to the Pan-American Congress in Buenos Aires in 1910 and made him an envoy extraordinary during the Chilean Centenary in the same year. President Roosevelt appointed him a member of the Board of Visitors to the United States Naval Academy. He has been a delegate to four National Conventions of his party and he was Chairman of the Democratic State Committee during the Buffalo Convention in 1906."

Mr. Nixon expects to arrive at French Lick early in the week and to journey from there with the other conferees in time to reach San Francisco several days, before the opening of the convention.

Appeal for Cabrera Supporters.

SAN SALVADOR, Republic of Salvador, June 10.—Appeals have been sent to the Guatemalan Government to commute the sentence of death passed upon seven supporters of former President Cabrera of that country, the Association of University Students having taken action in the matter. The men were sentenced to death after a trial on a charge of having participated in the bombardment of the capital during the April revolution.

MACK SEES VICTORY ON BEER-WINE ISSUE

OUTWEIGHS LEAGUE, HE SAYS

Would Carry New York, New Jersey and Other States — Delegates Combine Against McAdoo.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Adoption of a beer and light wines plank by the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco will bring a Democratic victory in November, Norman E. Mack, Democratic National Committeeman from New York, said today.

Mr. Mack, who is on his way to San Francisco, attended the session of the Republican National Convention. He expressed the belief that the League of Nations would not figure as an important issue in the campaign, if the Democrats should adopt a plank declaring for liberal enforcement of the prohibition amendment.

"The Democratic National Convention will indorse the League of Nations," said Mr. Mack. "I believe the sentiment of the country favors the League, but the question uppermost in the minds of the most of the voters is that of prohibition.

"I believe the Democratic Party should go on record in favor of light wines and beers. That is what the majority of the people of the country want. The Democratic Party should declare for amendment of the Volstead law so as to permit each State to pass its own prohibition enforcement legislation, as provided by the prohibition amendment."

Mr. Mack was asked if Mr. Bryan would not be able to oppose such a plank successfully, and admitted that its adoption could not be expected without a bitter fight. He expressed belief that with such a plank the Democrats could carry New York, New Jersey and many other Eastern States embracing large centres of population.

Mr. Mack indicated that he was friendly to the nomination of Governor James M. Cox of Ohio and opposed to William G. McAdoo. Although he would not admit the existence of any formal alliance, there is excellent reason to believe that the great majority of such States as New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky, comprising more than a third of the Democratic delegates, have agreed to stick together against Mr. McAdoo. Under the two-thirds rule, which will exist in the Democratic National Convention, this would prevent his nomination.

Mr. Mack went West without going to French Lick Springs, where Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, Governor Alfred E. Smith and Representative Thomas F. Smith of New York and others prominent in Tammany will gather before starting for San Francisco on June 20. He said he doubted that any conference of the Democratic "wet" forces would be held there, although Thomas Taggart, Democratic "boss" of Indiana, is there in daily contact with Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Murphy and his party will arrive in San Francisco on June 25, according to present arrangements. The Tammany special train, carrying the rank and file of that organization and many of the New York State delegates, will reach San Francisco the same day.

DEATH RECALLS DELEGATE.

Year-Old Son of Mr. Medalie of New York City Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Members of the New York State delegation are sympathizing with George Z. Medalie, delegate from the Twenty-second Congressional District of New York, who was called home suddenly by a telegram announcing the death of his only child, a year old.

Mr. Medalie, who formerly was an Assistant District Attorney of New York County, had aspired to become a delegate to the National Convention of his party for the last seven or eight years. So strong was this ambition that he refused a nomination for Justice of the Municipal Court in his district, on the understanding that he should be elected a delegate. Delegates who know him well said that his only stronger ambition was to become a father, a desire that was realized about a year ago.

A dispute developed as to whether George Henry Payne or Joseph H. Emery, both alternates from the Twenty-second District, should replace Mr. Medalie. Mr. Payne, who is an ardent supporter of General Wood, appeared in the unofficial list as Mr. Medalie's alternate. It was contended that this was a mistake and that the name of Mr. Emery, who is a Bronx organization man, was opposite Mr. Medalie's on the ballot at the primary election. Mr. Emery finally was seated.

BULGARIA OFFERS AN ALIBI.

Tells Bolsheviki She Couldn't Have Furnished Arms to Their Foes.

SOFIA, May 19.—The Bulgarian Government has received a telegram from the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Bolshevist Government in Russia protesting against the alleged delivery to the forces opposing the Bolshevist troops of arms and munitions by the Bulgarians.

The Bulgarian Foreign Minister replied that all its arms and munitions had been confiscated by the French, and that therefore it was not in a position to furnish arms to any one. He added that the Bulgarian Government had no knowledge of the present disposition of these arms, and that it would not be responsible if they were in use.

AMERICANS UNDER FIRE.

Red Cross Party at Kiev Shelled, but Escapes.

WARSAW, June 11.—Word has been received here that American Red Cross workers who strayed into the Bolshevist lines near the Kiev bridgehead recently were subjected to shell fire. All in the party, which consisted of Major Bruce Mohler of Fremont, Ohio; Major Alfred Flanker, St. Paul, Minn.; Captain Charles Phillips, New Richmond, Wis., and Sergeant Bennette Tyree, Lynchburg, Va., as chauffeur, escaped injury.

Medical supplies were being taken to the dressing stations when the shelling occurred.

The party had made the trip the previous day, but during the night, unknown to the Americans, the outposts were withdrawn a few kilometres. They did not realize their position until the Bolsheviki began firing.

Union Plays Rutgers Today.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 11.—Union closes its sports season tomorrow, when the baseball nine plays its commencement day game with Rutgers here. Union is looking forward to a victory in this clash, to complete a splendid season, as it has already defeated its old rivals, Hamilton and Williams.

INSPECTOR HENRY GUILTY OF PERJURY

Jury Takes Case Early in Evening and Returns Verdict at 12:22 This Morning.

MERCY IS RECOMMENDED

Convicted Police Officer Taken to Tombs—Juror's Mother Dies.

Police Inspector Dominick Henry was found guilty of perjury, with a recommendation of mercy, at 12:22 o'clock this morning in the Supreme Court before Justice Bartow S. Weeks, by a jury which had deliberated a little less than four hours. The crime is punishable by imprisonment up to ten years.

The verdict came after the jury had twice returned to the court for instructions. On their second return at midnight, the jury obtained a reading on Inspector Henry's testimony at his first appearance before the Extraordinary Grand Jury, which showed that he had said then that he knew of no illegal acts by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, thus contradicting his affidavits and his later testimony before the Extraordinary Grand Jury when he repeated the substance of his affidavits attacking Mr. Smith.

After the jury had retired, W. Bourke Cockran, counsel for the defendant, asked the court to add to the testimony which had been read to the jury another passage of Inspector Henry's testimony, when he had complained to the Extraordinary Grand Jury of Mr. Smith's raids in his Inspection District and had questioned his motives. With the consent of the prosecution, the court agreed to give this to the jury.

Inspector Smiles Faintly.

But before the testimony could be sent to the jury, the twelve men came back with their verdict. Inspector Henry watched them critically as they filed into court, and stood up and faced them when the verdict was announced. He continued to stand erect, facing the jury with a faint smile and with no evidence that he had received a shock, as they filed out of the courtroom.

His pedigree was then taken. He said that he was born in Ireland fifty-two years ago, became a citizen in 1888, lived at 325 Central Park West and was of the Roman Catholic faith.

Justice Weeks announced that he would pronounce sentence on Tuesday. Inspector Henry refused to make any statement for publication. He was led by Prison Guard Bertram Levy to a cell in the Tombs, where he will remain at least until Tuesday, when sentence is pronounced. An application will then be made for his release under bail on a certificate of reasonable doubt pending an appeal. Mr. Cockran said that the appeal would be taken at once.

Inspector Henry joined the police force in 1890. He was promoted grade by grade until he was made a Captain by Commissioner Bingham and an Inspector by Commissioner Enright.

Inspector Henry was tried a few weeks ago on the charge of neglect of duty undty an indictment found by the March Grand Jury before which Assistant District Attorney Smith had placed evidence concerning alleged wide-open conditions in his district. At that trial the jury received instructions to acquit from Judge Malone, who complimented Inspector Henry and said that, far from showing neglect of duty, the evidence indicated that he had done his full duty in the district. About a week later the indictment for perjury was returned.

Indictments Follow Long Quarrel.

The two indictments followed a long and bitter quarrel between Inspector Henry and Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith. Inspector Henry laid the basis for the charge against himself by going before the Extraordinary Grand Jury and repeating the accusations which he had made public in his affidavits, to the general effect that Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith was a grafter and had tried to engage him in a graft-sharing deal. The Extraordinary Grand Jury found the indictment after investigating the story of Inspector Henry and finding it denied by all persons involved in it by the police official.

Mr. Rand put his emphasis on the theory that the Henry charges against Mr. Smith consisted of perjury, manufactured and held in readiness for the purpose of damaging Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith if he should ever attack the Police Department.

Justice Weeks finished his charge at 1:10 P. M. and the jury thereupon went to dinner before attempting to reach a verdict. Justice Weeks called the attention of the jury to the fact that the Henry affidavits had been in existence two years, but that no effort was made during that time by Inspector Henry to have the charges against Mr. Smith investigated. He told the jury that no evidence had been presented which reflected on the good character of Mr. Smith, and that the hearsay testimony against him, which had been brought in indirectly at the trial, was not to be considered against him. He said that it was entirely with the jury to decide whether to believe Inspector Henry or the totally contradictory story of Mr. Smith. Justice Weeks referred to Mr. Smith and Inspector Henry as two public officials in positions of trust, one of whom had sworn falsely. At the request of Mr. Rand, who has prosecuted the case, he charged:

"If you are satisfied that any one of those meetings did not take place, you must find the defendant guilty."

"If Henry's testimony is true," Mr. Rand said in his summing up, "the Police Commissioner, one of the Chief Inspectors and the Mayor of the city knew that an Assistant District Attorney was a corrupt grafter and never lifted a finger to expose that villainy."

Quotes Henry "Bill of Health."

Mr. Rand argued that if the affidavits had been made in good faith an honest attempt would have followed at once to expose and punish Smith, and would not have been held back to be used for defensive purposes. Referring to the fact that about two years after the affidavits had been made, Inspector Henry had gone before the Extraordinary Grand Jury and said that he knew of no illegal act ever committed by Mr. Smith, Mr. Rand said:

"In answering 'No' to that question, Henry himself has given Mr. Smith a clean bill of health and stamps as false all that is contained in his affidavits."

After describing the meeting of Inspector Henry, Commissioner Enright and Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield, when Inspector Henry was ordered to publish the affidavits, Mr. Rand said:

"Smith was coming too close on their trail, so they gave out those affidavits which spread far and wide the news that a Police Inspector had declared that one of the Chief Assistants of the District Attorney was a corrupt official. Henry was mistaken in thinking he could get away with it and, if he thought I would stand for any such dirty piece of blackguardism, he was making the mistake of his life."

W. Bourke Cockran, who summed up for Inspector Henry, laid great stress on the character witnesses for Inspector Henry and pointed out that the witnesses for the State were largely men who would condemn themselves if they admitted the truth of the statements made by Inspector Henry concerning them. He said that Henry was fit for a lunatic asylum, unless he had told the exact truth in the affidavits. No sane man, with Inspector Henry's good record and reputation, Mr. Cockran contended, could find any object for the making of the affidavits, except that they recorded facts.

It was learned after the verdict had been found that Juror 7, Howard S. Beidleman, an electrician of 507 West 138th Street, had been notified yesterday afternoon of the death of his mother, Mrs. S. Beidleman of Washington, N. J.

RUMANIA WANTS STEEL.

Would Like Americans to Develop Her Rich Deposits of Iron Ore.

JASSY, Rumania, May 10.—Rumania is badly in need of iron and steel. For nearly seven years steel and iron imports have been far below normal. All reserve stocks were used up during the war. For reconstruction purposes hundreds of thousands of tons are needed. Hitherto the German and Transylvanian furnaces have furnished most of Rumania's steel. However, all of Rumania's needs could be met if Americans developed her iron mines. There are rich undeveloped deposits both in old Rumania and in Transylvania, especially along the Carpathians. Other iron ore deposits of an exploitable importance are in Dobrudja.

PARIS-WARSAW FLIGHT.

Frenchman's Next Stage Will Be Warsaw-Bucharest.

PARIS, June 11.—Lieutenant Henri Roget, the French aviator, who left Paris Thursday morning on an "around Europe" flight, arrived at Warsaw late yesterday, according to advices from the Polish capital.

The next leg of Lieutenant Roget's flight is to Bucharest, after which he will attempt to fly to Constantinople, Athens, Rome and then back to Paris.

Guard Your Health With Disinfection

Contagious disease can attack you just as quickly as anyone else—unless you are constantly on your guard against it.

Lysol Disinfectant

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Used regularly, Lysol Disinfectant kills disease germs or prevents the breeding of germ life.

Sprinkle a solution of Lysol Disinfectant frequently in all such places.

Have a few drops of Lysol Disinfectant added to all scrubbing water, too.

Remember, there is but one genuine Lysol Disinfectant—made, bottled, signed, and sealed by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

Lysol Toilet Soap 25c a Cake

Contains the necessary properties of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to protect the health of the skin. It is also refreshingly soothing, healing, and helpful for improving the skin. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it, ask him to order it for you.

Lysol Shaving Cream in Tubes

Contains the necessary properties of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to render the razor, strop, cup, and shaving brush sweetly clean, guard tiny cuts from infection, and give an antiseptic shave. If your dealer hasn't it, ask him to order a supply for you.

J. B. ELWELL, WHIST EXPERT, SLAIN

main hallway. Right feet from the inner door and on the right is a door to the drawing room. There are no portieres on the door and a person entering the hallway could see the whole interior of the drawing room through a long mirror over an open fireplace.

Elwell Kept No Servants.

Mr. Elwell kept no servants, but every morning Mrs. Marie Larson of 324 East Fifty-second Street called to put the house in shape. Mr. Elwell never dined at home except when women friends called on him before breakfast, it was said. Then Mrs. Larson cooked the meal.

Mrs. Larson reached the Elwell home at 8:55 o'clock yesterday morning and walked past the drawing room to the dining room, in the rear. Mr. Elwell usually was asleep at that hour, and Mrs. Larson, after removing her wraps, returned to the drawing room to begin her housework. As she entered the dining room she saw Mr. Elwell, wearing his pajamas and seated in the chair. She apologized for intruding, and, receiving no reply, ventured into the room again and peered into his face.

Mr. Elwell was bleeding from a wound in his forehead.

Mrs. Larson told Captain Walsh that the back of Mr. Elwell's chair was against the wall, and that his chin was resting on his chest, while the back of his head lay against the top of the chair and the wall. About three inches above Mr. Elwell's head, she said, the plaster had been scattered and a bullet protruded from it.

Both of Mr. Elwell's arms rested on the side of the chair, and near his left hand she saw a letter partly open and covered with blood.

Mrs. Larson Gets Policeman.

The man was breathing very faintly. Mrs. Larson hurried into the street and at Broadway and Seventieth Street found Policeman Harry Singer of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. She told him she thought her employer had been shot by burglars, because about a year ago three men were arrested while trying to force their way into the house at night.

When Singer saw the body he decided Elwell had shot himself. He asked Mrs. Larson if she had seen a pistol. She had not, nor had she disturbed a thing in the room. The policeman summoned an ambulance from Flower Hospital and began an investigation. Mrs. Larson called his attention to the open letter on the floor beside Mr. Elwell's chair, and as he started across the room to get it, his foot struck the shell of a .45-calibre cartridge. Then he found the bullet imbedded in the plaster above the dying man's head.

The presence of the shell and the absence of the pistol caused the policeman to change his mind on the suicide theory, and he immediately telephoned to Captain Walsh at the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. Captain Walsh and half a dozen detectives arrived at the Elwell home a few minutes before the ambulance.

Elwell was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he died about 11 o'clock. The ambulance surgeon gave it as his opinion before he left the Elwell home that the man had been shot less than an hour before the arrival of the ambulance.

Money and Jewelry on Bed.

When the detective reached Mr. Elwell's room, they found his evening clothes and jewelry and money on the bed, but the bed clothing was not disturbed, indicating that Mr. Elwell had not retired. The detectives then examined all the windows and doors, which, Mrs. Larson said, were as she had left them the evening before. A steel door leading to the kitchen from the yard of the Elwell home had not been tampered with, nor had the bars on the rear windows of the basement and ground floors. The scuttle on the roof then was examined, and found to be locked inside.

Captain Walsh, deciding the case to be a murder, and baffled by the mystery, called up Inspector Cray.

The Inspector and Captain Arthur Carey, in charge of the Homicide Squad, hurried to the Elwell home and immediately began sending detectives in quest of personal friends of the victim of the shooting. Mrs. Larson informed them that William Barnes of 140 East Fifty-fifth Street acted as Mr. Elwell's secretary and valet, and Inspector Cray telephoned to Barnes to come to the Elwell home right away.

Barnes told the detectives his employer was one of twenty members of the exclusive Studio Club at 334 Park Avenue, and a leading member of the New York Whist Club at 13 West Thirty-sixth Street. Mr. Elwell, he said, left this city in his automobile on Jan. 1 last, for Palm Beach, Fla., returning a week ago. He said Rhodes, the chauffeur, accompanied Mr. Elwell to Florida, but that he returned with the car alone two weeks ago.

Lewisohns Are Questioned.

Barnes then told Inspector Cray of the Lewisohn dinner and theatre party and the Inspector called in Mr. Lewisohn, his wife and Mrs. Kraus.

Lyttleton Fox, a lawyer, called at the Elwell home while Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn were talking to the detectives. Later he explained that he was called to the house by Mr. Lewisohn, a client of his firm, O'Brien, Boardman, Parker & Fox. He said that when Mr. Elwell left the New Amsterdam Theatre he started on foot through West Forty-second Street, in the direction of Eighth Avenue, while Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn, Mrs. Kraus and Mr. Figuroa got into the Lewisohn automobile and started for Mr. Lewisohn's home, in Fifth Avenue. That was the last any of the party saw of Mr. Elwell, Mr. Fox said.

A few hours later William M. K. Olcott, former District Attorney, called at the Elwell home and was closeted with the father of the slain man, E. L. Elwell, who had been summoned from his home at Ridgewood, N. J. When Mr. Olcott was asked later if he thought Mr. Elwell had shot himself, he declared:

"Joe Elwell was not the type of man to shoot himself, and you can be sure of that."

Mr. Olcott spoke affectionately of Mr. Elwell, and declared he was a delightful personage, polished in his manners and possessed a keen wit. He said that Mr. Elwell was the life of the Studio Club, and a favorite of all the members.

Elwell, he said, was in the "heyday of his prosperity."

Elwell Separated from Wife.

Mr. Elwell, father of the slain man, refused to be interviewed. It was learned, however, that some time ago the son bought for his parents a large house and considerable property in Ridgewood, and that his will, which is in a safe deposit box in the Columbia Trust Company, made his father the sole executor of his estate.

Mr. Elwell was married, but was separated from his wife in 1916. Mrs. Elwell, who resides with their 19-year-old son at 1,187 Lexington Avenue, called on Captain Walsh in the West Sixty-eighth Street Station last night and was closeted with him and several detectives for half an hour. She also refused to discuss the death of her husband.

Mrs. Elwell it was said last night, also is the author of several books on auction bridge, under the pseudonym "Florence Irwin."

In her action for a separation Mrs. Elwell declared that they were married in Brooklyn in 1900, and they lived together until 1911. She demanded alimony of $5,000 a year, and asserted that her husband made from $1,000 to $10,000 a night playing auction bridge. She also asserted that on one occasion her husband made $60,000 through his skill in playing the game.

She alleged at the time that he owned $500,000 worth of real estate and had personal property valued at $400,000. Mrs. Elwell also asserted her husband receive fom $5,000 to $8,000 a year in royalties from books on whist and that he also earned $15,000 instructing young society folk how to play auction whist.

Physicians Say Recovery from Nervous Breakdown Will Be Slow.

Physicians of George W. Perkins, who was brought from the Catskills last Saturday to the Stamford Hall Sanitarium, Stamford, Conn., suffering from a nervous breakdown, issued the following statement yesterday afternoon from Mr. Perkins's office at 71 Broadway:

"George W. Perkins has recently suffered a nervous breakdown as the result of overwork. Successful treatment for this condition requires complete rest and seclusion. He is now at Stamford Hall, where these can be secured to better advantage than at his home. Progress in these cases is apt to be slow, but his early improvement and ultimate recovery may reasonably be expected.

Dr. Moffat has been the Perkins family physician, and Dr. Fischer was called in consultation when Mr. Perkins left in May to recuperate in the Catskills.

REPORTS KOREAN PLOT.

Japanese Say Lives of Prince Li and Bride Were Threatened.

HONOLULU, T. H., June 11.—The Japanese Secret Service has uncovered a plot by Koreans against the lives of Prince Li of Korea and Princess Masako, who recently were married, and Baron Saito, according to a Tokio cablegram to Nippu Jiji, Japanese language newspaper here.

The alleged plot, which is said to have included bombing the Foreign and Interior offices and Tokio Police Bureau, was intended as a protest against the marriage of Prince Li, the dispatch stated. Two Japanese, believed to be implicated, have been arrested.

LABOR PLANS OFFER TO JOIN DEMOCRATS

GOMPERS HITS STRIKE STAND

MONTREAL, June 10.—The American Federation of Labor, in convention here, made preparations tonight to offer the support of organized labor to the Democratic Party for its acceptance of labor's platform demands which leaders declare the Republican Party has ignored.

Labor leaders announced that the subject would be placed before the Federation's convention tomorrow. The first step, they said, would be a condemnation of the Republican Party to be followed by an appeal to the Democratic Party for incorporation of labor's policy in its platform.

Samuel Gompers and other labor leaders were in session late today preparing a plan of action. They declined to divulge their decision, but indicated that drastic action against the Republican Party would be proposed.

The platform adopted by the Republican National Convention was termed "an outrage and an affront to working people" in a statement by Mr. Woll. He declared it is "a document with which Wall Street and the Steel Trust ought to be highly pleased."

Matthew J. Woll said the platform gives "what I take to be a pledge that the United States will police Mexico for the benefit of organized oil, mineral and mining appetites."

"No Relief from Profiteers."

"The platform promises no relief from the profiteers and has the effrontery to propose continued submission to heartless exploitation," the statement added. "The American people are determined to find relief from profiteering. Nothing so intimately affects them in their daily lives. On this point the platform is disdainful of the welfare of the people. We are forced to the conclusion that the Republican Party proposes to protect it."

Delegates and labor officials showed considerable sentiment for the formation of a labor party. Those close to Mr. Gompers, however, asserted that the action of the Republican Convention would have no effect on the non-partisan political program, and there was not the slightest possibility of labor putting a third party in the field this year.

Pacific Coast delegates, advocates of a labor party, made use of the situation and pressed their plan to have the convention authorize a committee to investigate during the next year the feasibility of organizing a labor party, and report at the 1921 convention. If they get sufficient support for this proposal they are prepared to place it before the convention early next week.

The only resolution adopted by the convention today provided that "every effort be made by the organized labor movement to the end that schools, hospitals, asylums and other similar public or private institutions, factories, as well as other forms of buildings requiring proper care against the dangers of fire, shall be provided with approved appliances for the prevention of fire." Organized labor was also urged to aid in enforcing legislation tending to "safeguard life, limb and property."

Despite the fact that the convention is being held on British soil, Matthew Woll, Vice President of the Federation, declared that no Irish resolution would be taken up for discussion and adopted by the delegates.

James Simpson of Toronto, Vice President of the Canadian Congress and Labor Congress, said that if the Federation wants to discuss Ireland that is their privilege. "A convention is being held in Montreal," he added, "and there can be no restrictions placed on that convention. Besides, I doubt very much if this convention will go further on the Irish question than did the British Trades Congress in St. Andrew's Hall, Glasgow."

Several of the Canadian delegates announced that they would not participate in any debate of the Irish question, but would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the American delegates.

Gompers Condemns Labor Plank.

Mr. Gompers in condemning the Republican labor plank referred especially to the section providing for the settlement of public utilities strikes by tribunals similar to the Esch-Cummins Transportation act of 1920. The plank, he asserted, is directly contrary to what labor had demanded of the party.

"We had asked the convention to go on record in favor of the repeal of the compulsory arbitration sections of the Transportation act," he added, "but the Republicans appear to have not only refused our suggestion, but would extend it to all utilities."

When asked what would be the result of the rejection of labor's demand by the Republican Party, Mr. Gompers's only comment was:

"You may draw your own inference."

He declined to comment on the possibility of labor abandoning its non-partisan political policy by putting a labor party in the field.

Mr. Gompers arrived here today from Chicago, where he had presented labor's demand to the national Republican Platform Committee.

Charges that managements of American railroads are dishonest were made by Glenn E. Plumb of Washington, originator of the Plumb plan for public ownership of the railroads, in addressing the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. They cannot be otherwise, he said, under the present system in the United States, which "surrounds them with temptation."

"There is every inducement to be dishonest at the present time," he added. "They cannot be condemned. I would not trust my own integrity as a leader of a great railroad."

The Plumb plan, the speaker asserted, was the solution of the problem, as it would relieve the managements of railroads of "the damaging temptation and give them an opportunity to be honest," as they would be under the democratic control of the public.

Cites Pennsylvania's Officials.

The speaker cited the management of the Pennsylvania Railroad in support of his charges, asserting that the Interstate Commerce Commission reports showed that officials of that company were stockholders in from four to twenty-nine corporations selling supplies to the railroad.

"Were they interested in the railroad because they were interested in these concerns?" asked Mr. Plumb. "Or were they interested in these concerns because they were Directors of the Pennsylvania?"

The convention gave Mr. Plumb a tremendous ovation, voted to have his address printed in the proceedings and suggested that it be distributed throughout the country to workers.

Declaring that the Merchants' Association and other business interests in New York City were raising a fund of $5,000,000 to carry on an "open shop" war, James F. Costello of the Brooklyn Central Labor Council, asked the convention to support the striking transportation workers. He received unanimous consent to introduce a resolution to this effect. The resolution was referred to committee.

"The recent developments in New York," said Mr. Costello, "makes it imperative that this federation take emphatic action."

The Colorado State Association of Journeymen Barbers notified the convention by telegram that it indorsed the federation's non-partisan political policy and was opposed to any third party proposal.

The progressive element, including the Pacific Coast delegates and those of the garment workers' organizations, planned today to fight for radical recommendations for the relief of the workers. They also seek the release of political prisoners, lifting of the Russian blockade, recognition of the Russian Soviet Government and a declaration against the League of Nations. They will, however, support the Irish resolutions.

After the San Francisco Labor Council had been permitted to introduce a resolution calling for investigation of the salmon canning industry on the Pacific Coast the convention adjourned until tomorrow.

BOY SCOUTS' FUND $42,291.

G. D. Pratt, M. L. Schiff and Sigmund Eisner Give $5,000 Each.

Receipts at the end of the third day of the $500,000 campaign for the Boy Scouts of America total $42,291, it was announced yesterday at national headquarters of the organization.

FROG HUNTERS WARNED.

Extension of Close Season to June to be Enforced.

Conservation Commissioner George D. Pratt has issued a warning to all frog hunters and others calling attention to the change in the law made during the last session of the Legislature by which the close season for bull frogs, green frogs and Spring frogs was extended to include June. Shipments of frogs and frogs' legs, which have within the last few days been reaching city markets from rural districts, indicate that the change in the law is not fully realized.

Commissioner Pratt insists that the new law must be observed and that ignorance of the law cannot be regarded as an excuse. The measure, he said, was passed in the interests of the frog market, those familiar with conditions stating that the supply of edible frogs was gradually becoming less, largely as a result of the killing of the animals during their spawning season, which extends through June. Formerly frogs were protected only during April and May. The only exception to the new law is in relation to the use of frogs as bait, which is permissible at any time of the year.

Book on Queens Borough Issued.

"Queens Borough, New York City, 1910-1920," a 240-page publication by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, came from the printers for distribution yesterday. The book was edited and compiled by Walter I. Why Pity Chinese Women's Feet — when the pointed-toed, high heeled shoes that American women wear are scarcely less barbarous?

They bend the toes into an unnatural shape, they throw foot bones and leg muscles out of place. And corns, bunions, callouses, weak arches, ingrowing nails and other foot miseries are the inevitable results.

Put your feet into shoes shaped to fit feet — good looking, conservative Educators, that "let the feet grow as they should," shapely and healthy. Then you can forget foot ills.

For your protection remember, when buying, that unless the shoe is branded EDUCATOR on the sole, it is not an Educator.

All shoes in our Stores were made from leathers and materials purchased long before the high peak was reached in leather prices.

MANY years ago I decided that the best way to protect my customers against excessive profits was to stamp a fair and square retail price on the soles of my store shoes, based on the actual factory cost of labor and materials.

By enlarging my production from year to year I have been able to keep this selling price remarkably low in spite of the greatly increased cost of all materials and labor.

I have always felt that it was better policy to make many shoes at a low profit than a few shoes at a larger profit.

Emerson Shoes are not marked up at one season of the year just to hold so-called "Marked Down Sales" at another season. I never ask you to pay more for a shoe than it is actually worth.

The fact that I have increased my sales TEN TIMES in the past six years is proof positive that the general public appreciates this policy.

Come into our stores and put this to the test. Inspect our styles and prices, and if you aren't convinced that you are getting more for your money in Emerson Shoes than in any others, I will not expect or want you to buy.

The Students Themselves prepared the advertisements

THE advertisements you have seen in this campaign were prepared by the students of New York University.

They offer an excellent illustration of the practical training New York University gives. Those who receive it can apply it in the actual work of some business house —perhaps yours.

The advertising course is only one instance of practical education at New York University. Other courses at the School of Commerce train men for industrial organization, management, accounting, journalism, finance, selling, foreign trade. In the other eight schools, New York University trains men for engineering, chemical and electrical research, medicine, law, veterinary science, teaching.

More than a thousand of these trained men and women are being graduated from New York University this week. They are going out into lives of useful service as producers and staunch American citizens.

New York needs these trained graduates. New York University will continue to supply them. But she must have help. Her present endowment is inadequate. She urgently needs $9,150,000 more.

DEAD MAY REACH FIFTEEN

Forty-two Are Saved After Daring Work by Two Steamers—Cut Man Out with Chisels.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11. — Eagle Boat Number 25, United States Navy, capsized in the Delaware River just below New Castle, Del., at 2:20 this afternoon, and three lives are known to have been lost.

Late advices from Lieutenant Commander M. P. Pierce, captain of the vessel, at New Castle, state that seven are still missing. However, officers of the Navy Yard said at a late hour tonight the toll might be as high as fifteen.

Those believed to have been lost are:

Chief Yeoman Hancock.

Chief Machinist John Lamb.

John D. Brand of Philadelphia, a fireman of the vessel, died at Hog Island following a thrilling rescue.

About ten sailors are being treated at the League Island Navy Yard Hospital for severe burns and other injuries sustained when the ship went over.

All the officers on the boat at the time of the calamity were saved. Those not accounted for were men who were in the hold of the ship at the time of the disaster, and it is thought that they were drowned in the trap.

Uncertainty as to the number of casualties is caused by the fact that some of those rescued were brought to Philadelphia on passing steamers, while others were taken to riverside towns in Delaware.

Number Aboard Is Not Known.

Another contributing factor to the uncertainty is the fact that the exact size and personnel of the crew is unknown. The E-25 was a "mother ship" for a flock of submarines and members of the crew were continually passing from the vessel to the surrounding underwater ships.

Of a crew estimated at from 53 to 70 members, at least 42 are known to have been saved. They were picked up by the river steamer Thomas Clyde and taken to the League Island Navy Yard.

The catastrophe occurred during one of the worst summer storms known in the history of lower Delaware. For three hours in the afternoon the river was lashed with hail and rain, while overhead the lightning swooped across the heavens.

The Eagle boat was inbound from the Atlantic Ocean and was caught by the terrific northeast wind while opposite the New Jersey shore at a jetty near Fort Mott.

Just as she approached the jetty the gale struck with full force, rolling the Pierce attempted to ride the storm and boat from side to side. Lieutenant ordered the men to rush from one side of the boat to the other in an attempt to steady it. As if infuriated at the attempt to save the life of the boat, the wind came back with renewed strength and with the boat opposite Spike Buoy, a tremendous gust swept it completely over.

The men on deck were hurled into the seething waters and most of them are believed to have been saved. Several, including the enginemen and firemen, were trapped below. Some of these managed to escape but most of the casualties are believed to have occurred there.

Besides the Thomas Clyde, the United States Shipping Board vessel, Independence Hall, was nearby, riding the storm, and with thrilling rescues most of those in the water were saved by those two boats. A lighthouse also sent out a boat which picked up some of the sailors struggling in the water.

Cut Through Steel in Vain.

The most sensational rescue was accomplished in vain. John D. Brand of Philadelphia a fireman on the ill-fated vessel, was in the engine room when the boat overturned. With a supreme effort he worked his way through the water to a spot near the keel, and tapped with all his might on the pressed steel.

A passing lifeboat heard the faint tappings, and so reported to Captain L. H. Porter of the Independence Hall. Chief Officer Husband with Chief Engineer Banner and the ship's doctor, were detailed with a small crew to attempt the rescue. A plea to a nearby tramp steamer failed to obtain an acetylene torch, and cold chisels and hammers were the only tools available for the work.

The rescuers drew alongside the overturned boat and, directed by the feeble taps, began the slow work of chiseling through the steel plates. The work was greatly hindered by the fury of the storm, which dashed the small skiff from the side of the Eagle boat time and again. Inside Brand's tappings grew fainter and fainter, and finally ceased altogether.

After two hours of heartrending work, with the wind whistling over the keel of the upturned vessel, the rescuers finally managed to cut a large enough hole to admit a man. Brand was found unconscious in the swirling water. He was rushed to the Independence Hall and worked over by the doctor while the ship sped to Hog Island shipyard. There he was immediately put under the pulmotor in an attempt to bring him back to life, but the effort was useless. At ten p.m. the doctors pronounced him dead.

Another thrilling escape was that of Robert Geraway of Marlborough, Mass., who was also caught in the engine room when the boat swept over. Geraway managed to crawl through a ventilator and dive under the wreckage until he came clear.

Chief Machinist Mate Robert Meyers of 2506 Chadwick Street, Philadelphia, is believed to be one of those missing. T. E. Monahan of 2712 North Judson Street, Philadelphia, another machinist's mate, also was rescued after a thrilling effort, as was Paul Davis of Springfield, Mass.

Captain Saves Several Men.

Lieut. Commander Pierce, captain of the boat, rescued several of the men in the water and made a vain attempt to save one of those drowned. He caught the hand of the man but was not able to keep him above the water. Lieutenant Pierce stayed in Newcastle to oversee the salvaging of the vessel and to see that those men put ashore were cared for.

Unsettled static conditions, due to the storm, interfered with wireless transmission of the story of the disaster to Philadelphia, and it was not until 4:30 that the League Island Navy Yard learned of the tragedy. Captain Sterling was immediately rushed to the scene on a submarine chaser.

The forty-two men rescued by the Thomas Clyde seemed to be in the best of spirits. They were fed and loaded with gifts of tobacco by the scores of excursionists on board. As the Thomas Clyde was unable to dock at the navy yard, Tugboat 85 met the steamer in midstream and transferred the rescued men to land.

At the navy yard they joked and laughed with each other, and gave the impression that they had thoroughly enjoyed the affair. Several of them, including most of the officers, who had suffered severe burns from steam pipes, were rushed to the navy yard hospital for treatment. The rest were marched to the submarine barracks, where they were fed and given quarters for the night.

The Eagle 25 was one of the boats built by Henry Ford during the war. It was a cross between a submarine chaser and a destroyer, very long and narrow, and exceptionally fast. It was just finishing an ocean cruise.

STONINGTON PHYSICIAN IS KILLED BY WOMAN

Mrs. Alfred Kenyon Admits Shooting Dr. Herbert Tetlow—Father of Her Child, She Says.

PROVIDENCE, June 11.—Dr. Herbert Tetlow, 50 years old, of 141 West Broad Street, Stonington, Conn., just over the Rhode Island line from Westerly, was shot and killed in his room, on the second floor of the house, today.

Mrs. Alfred Kenyon of Westerly was arrested, charged with his murder, and later Prosecuting Attorney Hewitt announced that she had admitted holding the revolver when the fatal shot was fired, but said she did not remember whether or not she had pulled the trigger.

Mr. Hewitt said that Mrs. Kenyon told him that she quarreled with Dr. Tetlow at his apartment last night. She returned there this morning, she said, and after a talk with him went to her home and obtained a pistol. Returning to his apartment, she said she threatened to kill herself, but the doctor prevailed upon her to let him have the weapon so he could commit suicide. It was discharged as she was handing it to him, she said.

In a statement to the police, they say, Mrs. Kenyon declared she loved Dr. Tetlow and that he was the father of her seven months' old son.

Just before noon Mrs. Kenyon visited Dr. Tetlow's room, and had been there but a short time when the family of Lloyd Taylor, on the third floor of the house, heard a shot. No attention was paid to it, and a few moments later Mrs. Kenyon went downstairs and told Mrs. James Thurston, who occupies the first floor, that Dr. Tetlow had shot himself. Mrs. Kenyon then left the house and went to her own home, where she is alleged to have left the revolver, a .38 calibre Colt.

SPORTSMEN'S HEADQUARTERS

For the Whole Family

JUNIOR trapshooting is a new and fascinating game for the whole family, with lots of wholesome outdoor enjoyment in it. The Winchester Junior Trapshooting Outfit, which makes this pastime possible, also makes it both easy and inexpensive. Take it on picnics, boating trips, week-end parties, and you insure no end of sport.

The handsome little .410 caliber family shotgun is a typical Winchester. It is just as accurate and reliable a specimen of gun-making as the Winchester Rifle which was Theodore Roosevelt's favorite weapon in the African jungle.

Besides the gun, the Winchester Junior Trapshooting Outfit includes a sturdy, efficient Winchester hand trap for throwing the targets, a box of Winchester targets, and a box of .410-bore Winchester Shot Shells. For proper care of the gun, there is a jointed cleaning rod, gun oil and cleaning grease, all Winchester made. The whole outfit is neatly packed in a handsome black carrying case, easily carried under the seat of your automobile or motor boat.

Experienced shooters all approve the Winchester Junior Trapshooting Outfit. You will get lots of pleasure out of it, and like every Winchester product, it will give you excellent service.

CARUSO CHAUFFEUR ONCE UNDER ARREST

SEARCHING SUMMER HOME

Detectives Believe Jewels May Be Buried Near House — Fuller Description of Gems.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTHAMPTON, L. I., June 11.—Detective James J. Finan of the New York Police Department, who is on a six months' leave of absence, arrived at the Caruso Summer home, from which jewels valued at $480,000 were stolen on Tuesday night, and walked up to George Fitzgerald, the chauffeur and night watchman for the Carusos, exclaiming:

"Hello, Fitz."

The chauffeur recognized the detective, and after they had talked for a minute Fitzgerald went to Park Benjamin, Jr., a brother of Mrs. Caruso, and said:

"Mr. Benjamin, I know what these detectives want. Back in 1913 I was arrested with my brother-in-law for the theft of an automobile. I did not know a thing about it. My brother-in-law was convicted and sent away for three years, but I was honorably discharged by the Magistrate in the West Side Court before the case came to trial. I was discharged after a very short hearing."

The automobile was stolen from a man for whom Fitzgerald was working. The chauffeur later repeated the story to newspapermen.

"Did you tell Caruso about that matter?" he was asked.

"No," he replied. "After that unfortunate incident I got this wonderful job and have been with Mr. Caruso ever since and hope to continue with him."

In the evening detectives and other local authorities sat down in the Italian villa of Albert Herter, which is the Summer home of the Carusos, and entered into a long discussion with Fitzgerald and Frank Ferrel, the night watchman.

Total Insurance $150,000.

Detective Finan is employed by the Pinkertons, who represent one of the underwriters, who had insured jewels among those stolen for $25,000. The total insurance carried on the jewels, according to Park Benjamin, Jr., is $150,000, while the present market value of the stolen pieces is $450,000.

District Attorney Le Roy M. Young, of Suffolk County, who is in charge of the county investigation, intended to start a John Doe proceeding today, but he said that this plan had been set aside because of an important development last night, which made it necessary to postpone the formal inquiry until Tuesday morning.

An arrest is likely to take place at any time, according to those in charge of the investigation. The army of detectives, representing the two insurance companies, the Caruso family, Suffolk County and East Hampton, spent a large part of the time trudging about the 200-acre estate looking for footprints or other indications which might lead to the discovery that the jewels had been hidden on the property. Strict rules were adopted today against visitors and against the entrance of automobiles on the property without permission, in order to prevent any possible attempt to smuggle the gems from the estate.

Caruso Will Decide on Reward.

Park Benjamin, Jr., said that whether the family would offer a reward or not depended on the decision of Mr. Caruso, who is now at Havana. James J. Corrigan, who represents an underwriter who carries insurance of $126,000 on the jewels, said that that insurance company would probably offer a reward of $5,000 or $10,000, unless an arrest is made in the meantime.

One of the Italian maids employed by the Carusos, it was learned today, had dinner on Friday in Manhattan with an Italian. This man sailed for Italy on Tuesday. The Manhattan police are making inquiries to determine whether this man could have participated in the robbery and taken the jewelry to Italy with him. This he could have done if the robbery was committed before Tuesday night. One of the theories is that the jewels were taken before Tuesday night and that the ringing of the alarm in the jewel box was caused on Tuesday night by one of the participants to lead the investigators astray.

Fuller descriptions of the missing jewels were made public yesterday at the estate and by E. M. Gattle, jeweler of 630 Fifth Avenue, the revised description of the principal articles being as follows:

One graduated pearl necklace, containing some large pearls, with a navette diamond snap. The total weight of the necklace is 920.48 grains; the diamond snap weighing 2.62 carats. This was in a leather case of lavender color with velvet lining.

One diamond guard chain, 46 inches long, containing 200 diamonds, set in platinum. Total weight of diamonds, 46.53 carats. Attached to the diamond chain is an oval diamond pendant, engraved "From Nina Margosa" with a sentimental wording in the pendant. This piece was insured at $22,000, and $70,000 had been offered for it by a jeweler.

One bandeau, sixty-five stone diamond and calibre emerald double row pearl-shaped drop; thirty-three calibre emeralds, weight 133 carats; thirty-one diamonds, weigh 230 carats; large drop diamond in centre, weighs 9¼ carats.

One fifty-two-stone diamond flexible bar bracelet, thirteen diamonds set in octagon boxes, bars of small diamonds in between each; thirteen diamonds, weigh 239 carats; thirty-nine diamonds, weigh 141 carats.

One diamond and cabochon ruby, fancy all-platinum ring. Cabochon ruby, weighing 7.07 carats; fifty-eight small diamonds, weighing 55 carats.

PARIS DANCE HALLS RAIDED.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 11.—Several hundred dancing enthusiasts, of whom perhaps half were Americans, were thrown into panic when the police raided two dancing establishments early this morning after the 1 o'clock closing hour.

These places, situated at 17 and 23 Rue Caumartin, the latter place being known as the Clover Club, are both run by Americans and have achieved a certain notoriety because of their ability to escape the rigors of the closing rules. Under the guise of clubs they remained open late, even before June 1, when the 10 o'clock closing provision was abolished and the hour set at 1 o'clock. Their reputation had spread among American tourists, and they have been crowded every night.

A police Inspector with a raiding squad waited last night until 1:15, when he descended on the Clover Club. The exits were barred, and all those present were asked for their names. The proprietors were arrested. They are former American soldiers. Half an hour later the same performance was repeated at No. 17, which is also run by an ex-soldier.

The police released the proprietors today after a warning that their places would be closed if they did not shut their doors at 1 o'clock.

Mrs. Coughlin Also Asks Aid from All Children—Collapses After Plea.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., June 11.—Mothers and children throughout the country are appealed to by Mrs. George H. Coughlin, mother of Blakely Coughlin, 13 months old, who was kidnapped nine days ago, to help her find the baby. When she completed writing the appeal, which was blotted with her tears, the mother collapsed.

"I appeal to every mother and child in the United States to help us find my baby," Mrs. Coughlin said. "Surely some one will see and know my boy. If there is a strange baby in your neighborhood, please, oh, please, find out who he is and where he came from, for he may be my child. Don't be afraid to send us information. I promise harm will come to no one. All we want is our baby. Even those who took my boy must and will pealize my anxiety, and they will feel sure that we will keep our promise if they will only give us proof that they have Blakely safe and well."

Mrs. Coughlin appended a description of the stolen baby, which said he was 29 inches tall, weighed 20 pounds, and had blue eyes and light hair, and was sturdily built for a child of his age. He had no defects, and the only mark was a slight, almost invisible, scar over the right eyelid. He had four upper and four lower teeth when he was kidnapped, with two other teeth about to make their appearance.

HENRY FIELD'S CHILD IS BARRED FROM ESTATE

Chicago Judge Holds Illegal Offspring Cannot Share $130,000,000—Upholds Capt. Field.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Captain Marshall Field, 3d, is entitled to the income on three-fifths of the $130,000,000 estate of his grandfather and that on the two-fifths share of his brother, Henry Field, according to the oral opinion of Judge Charles M. Foell, Circuit Court, given today. Immediate possession of the entire estate was denied.

The Judge held that Henry Anthony Field, an illegitimate child of Henry Field, was not entitled to share in the estate. Mrs. Henry Field, now Mrs. Nancy Perkins Field Tree, was held to be entitled to a widow's dower in the real estate set aside in the will for Henry Field.

The New Packard Basis of Rating was Established by Absolute Transportation Facts revealed by more than 7000 Monthly National Standard Truck Cost System Reports, covering a period of Two Years

Why Packard Discarded "Ton Rating" for Packard Trucks

REASONING as transportation engineers, the Packard Company has believed for years that the arbitrary factory "ton rating" system was bound to become obsolete as soon as sufficient facts on transportation could be known.

These facts are now at hand—made available through more than 7000 Monthly National Standard Truck Cost System Reports, covering a period of two years.

These reports confirm what Packard has so long foreseen—the fallacy of rating a truck simply on the tonnage capacity of the chassis and engine under normal conditions.

They have proved again and again the sound Packard practice of rating a truck with all the transportation factors in mind—character of roads, grades to be met, speeds to be maintained, and the chances of overload, etc.

COMPARE a Packard Size G, Model E, Truck, developing nearly 6700 pounds' traction at rear wheels and able to pull a 28 per cent. grade on low gear; with the typical "6-ton truck," developing less than 4700 pounds' traction, and able to pull only a 20 per cent. grade!

Today, as always, Packard is selling transportation.

HEREAFTER each Packard Truck will be designated by size and model.

The rating will be made on the ground, for the job, by the local Packard engineer—selected for what it will do in the individual customer's business, and with all his actual conditions in mind.

COURT OF APPEALS PUTS BAN ON BUSES

THREE LINES ARE AFFECTED

Will Withdraw, Says Whalen, If Order Proves Binding—Opinion Not Written.

The action of Justice Cropsey of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn in granting a temporary injunction restraining the city from operating buses in competition with the lines of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company was sustained yesterday by the Court of Appeals.

Colonel Jackson A. Dykman, counsel for the Brooklyn City Company, said the decision of the Court of Appeals put an end to bus operation. "We will now serve all the interested parties," he said, "including individual bus drivers, with a copy of Justice Cropsey's restraining order, which will stop the buses. Later we will file the permanent injunction order issued by Justice Callaghan."

Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, who represented the city in the fight against the buses, said that as the court wrote no opinion he did not know how far-reaching the decision was.

"The decision of the Court of Appeals seems to be confined to narrow limits and, in my view, does not decide a big, broad, salient question, whether the city may not construct and operate its own buses upon the streets of the city," he added. "The complaint in this action, which is held by this decision to be a good complaint, dealt only with the peculiar situation."

Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structure, who is in charge of the bus lines, said the decision of the court left unanswered the "big, broad question as to the power of the Board of Estimate, under the Home Rule Act, or as a matter of emergency, to provide transportation service for the people." He said, however, that if the decision were binding, final orders would be issued at once stopping the buses along the routes of the Brooklyn City Company. He explained that only three lines of buses were involved as he understood the matter, the three being the Greenpoint, the Park Slope and the Flatbush Avenue lines.

Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon said the decision meant that unless operation of buses in the city must stop, that he had indicated to the Board of Estimate the lawful way, and that no attention had been paid to his warning.

"Anticipating that the buses will be withdrawn, we have directed all of the railways to place all the equipment possible in service so as to meet the demands of traffic," he said.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in this department heard argument yesterday on the appeal from the injunction granted by Justice Lydon of the lower court restraining the operation of buses on routes paralleling the Eighth and Fourteenth Street crosstown trolley lines of the New York Railways Company. Decision was reserved.

INSURGENT TICKET FRAMED.

Mrs. Thomas Black Slated for Federated Clubs Presidency.

Insurgents in the City Federation of Women's Clubs met in the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon at the call of Edyth Totten, President of the Drama Comedy Club, and framed a ticket, headed by Mrs. Thomas Black as President, for the official nomination meeting of the federation in December. It was the first time conditions had been dated as early as June, the purpose being to give supporters of Mrs. Black, who include several club Presidents, all Summer and Fall to work in.

Mrs. Black is running for office on the qualification of being a "good mother and a competent club woman. Her campaign manager, Mrs. Ella O'Gorman Slaton, is a mother of eleven children. Mrs. C. B. Donnellon of Brooklyn was selected for First Vice President and Mrs. A. M. Palmer for Third. The second place was left vacant. Mrs. Maegan Lloyd and Mrs. William J. Wilson, both of Brooklyn, were named Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, respectively. Mme. von Klenner told the women they must have workers for Mrs. Black and her ticket at every individual club meeting. The meeting adjourned, the women to report on the Summer's work at the Drama-Comedy Clubhouse in Brooklyn in September.

To Repeat Nurses' Pageant Today.

The Florence Nightingale pageant, which was given Wednesday by the Bloomingdale Hospital School of Nursing on the hospital's grounds at White Plains, will be repeated at the same place, weather permitting, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The important episodes of the heroine of the Crimea will be depicted in pantomime. The final scene represents the unveiling of the Lady of the Lamp with her benefitors passing in processional.

PLASTERERS' RULE HOLDS UP BUILDING

MULTI-FAMILY HOUSES HIT

Cost Forced Up 25 Per Cent. by Order Limiting Work to be Done in a Day, It Is Alleged.

After an afternoon spent in inspecting building activities in Queens, Tenement House Commissioner Frank Mann, as Chairman of the Mayor's Housing Conference Committee, yesterday sent a telegram to Samuel Gompers and other labor leaders now in Montreal, asking that the American Federation of Labor take action to prevent what the committee believes is discrimination against certain classes of buildings in Queens by the local union of plasterers. The complaint was made by the Queens Chamber of Commerce in behalf of the Queensboro Corporations, which is actively engaged in relieving the housing situation in that borough. It was alleged that the tactics employed by the plasterers has practically held up the construction of 300 apartments.

"Respectfully request consideration and action on complaint forwarded by Queens Chamber of Commerce stating that Plasterers' Local 214 has fixed an arbitrary scale of work on multi-family houses and that this has not been done in any other part of the city, forcing cost approximately 25 per cent. higher than in other parts of the city. Queens is being discriminated against by this action and upwards of 300 apartments which would be ready for occupancy in October are held up in face of a terrible housing situation. Brindell knows all facts. Urge immediate action."

Plasterers' Local 214 has fixed the amount of work that a man can do in a day on certain classes of houses, and this, Mr. Mann said, had not only set back building operations in Queens but was adding to the already acute housing situation here. Limiting the output of so many feet or yards of plastering as a day's work, Mr. Mann thought the situation was such as to call out every ounce of effort to the end that the homeless be provided with shelter.

The Mayor's Committee, he said, had been informed that the rule does not apply to private and two-family houses.

It is probable that the Mayor's Housing Committee soon will call a conference of all interested in the various branches of the building trades. One hundred thousand apartment houses are needed to meet the growing housing crisis, and there is need of closer co-operation between builders and the unions to assure that work started will be carried through. Chairman Mann sent a second telegram to Mr. Gompers yesterday urging the necessity for closer co-operation and a definite plan upon which building operations can be carried forward without friction.

ALUMNI FILL "DINNER PAIL."

Haverford Commencement Has New Way to Aid Faculty Fund.

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 11.—Commencement exercises at Haverford College today brought official announcement by President Comfort that the campaign for the $500,000 endowment fund had passed the halfway mark, with $261,000 contributed by 687 subscribers. Figures posted on a large screen at Founders' Hall showed that 21 per cent. of the 1,726 alumni had given $150,770, while a 100-per cent. subscription of the 182 students reached $10,150, and thirty-six friends of the college added $46,084 more.

Placed beside the bulletin board was a large dinner pail labeled, "The Faculty Dinner Pail—Fill It Up!" The record of the progress made by the fund during the day was shown, the figure of $500,000 being set as the minimum goal for the single day's subscriptions.

The fund is in part for the founding of a chair in English literature in memory of the late Dr. Francis B. Gummere. This will be one of the highest paid professorships in the United States, and $125,000 has been set aside for it, the balance of $375,000 being used to maintain the present high salary scale of the faculty.

President Comfort told the graduates that the college during the last year had had the largest number of students in its history. He announced the return to Haverford, from service elsewhere, of Dean Palmer, Professors Babbitt, Lunt and Pratt.

New faculty appointments also announced were those of Walter S. Hinchman, former English Master at Groton School, and John M. Kelly, recently Schurz Fellow in German at Columbia.

Winning Against Odds

YOU know the story of business upheaval since the first of the year. You know how constant and how serious have been the disturbances in the industrial world. You know that production has decreased 35% while the demand for production has greatly increased. You know that there is a serious shortage of raw materials and of fabricated articles. You know that tremendous obstacles must be overcome before any service or article can be delivered.

Keep these facts in mind as you read this story of the achievement of the telephone organization in New York City.

Coming out of the war sadly depleted in numbers, this organization faced a problem that might well have disheartened any organization. It had to overcome the effect of a two years' war embargo on commercial telephone construction, replace the reserves used up during the war and build to meet the greatest demand for new service in its history. And it had to do these things while handling the greatest volume of telephone traffic ever originated in the city of New York.

New workers, new buildings, new switchboards, new relays, new distributing boards, new conduits, new cables, new pole lines, new facilities of every kind were needed in greater quantities than ever before and at a time when these things were demanded by every other section of the country.

The telephone men and women in New York City were given a task of almost incredible size and difficulty and they undertook it in the same way and with the same spirit that Rowan showed when he carried the message to Garcia in Cuba back in '98. You remember the story. Nothing could stop that man Rowan, and nothing could stop these telephone workers. They have built up their organization. They have increased the central office operating force alone from 8,600 on January 1, 1919, to over 14,600 on May 15, 1920.

They have improved the service. Calls are now answered in half the time it took to answer them at the beginning of the year.

During the epidemic of influenza and the storms of last winter when thousands were kept from work and telephone traffic was largely increased these telephone workers, their numbers cut down by sickness and inability to reach their offices, stayed on the job and kept the service from breaking down.

In the past four months they not only have improved the service but they have succeeded in placing enough new equipment of all kinds to install 35,418 new telephones in New York City.

They have done these things despite the delays and obstacles that have held back production in the telephone business and in every other business. These difficulties are increasing. Production daily grows more uncertain. The supply of facilities for providing telephone service is decreasing and at the same time the demand for service in New York City is steadily increasing. This demand was unprecedented at the first of the year. It has increased since then and it is growing more rapidly than new facilities for service can be provided.

There now are 64,843 applications for service on our books. In filling these applications precedence will be given to those of an emergent nature, such as service for doctors, nurses, hospitals, cases of serious illness, fire and police; second, service required as a business necessity; third, service that is a convenience. By following this classification the most urgent needs for service will receive the earliest attention.

The public of New York City can rest assured that the 25,000 telephone workers in this city who already have achieved great results in the face of great odds will continue to carry on. They will leave nothing undone to complete the task of expanding the city's telephone system and further improving its quality in the shortest possible time.

THE FIRST BALLOTS.

On the whole, the first four ballots at Chicago went very much as anticipated. General Wood held his lead, though Governor Lowden made the larger gains. How much the shifting of votes was due to the careful planning of the various managers and how much to the inevitable splitting up of the delegations that first were for the minor candidates, it would be idle to guess. It would appear to be true, from the four ballots, that the convention is stampede-proof. Adjournment to this morning naturally meant that the night would be one—not of fasting and prayer—but of conferring and bargaining. The result ought to be apparent on the first ballot taken today, which should give an indication of the lines along which the combination is to be made that will lead to the final nomination.

"IN DEFINITE TERMS."

The Republican platform began with the statement that "the people are entitled to know in definite terms" what the party purposes to do. It must have hoped that this would be forgotten by the time the reader came to the end of the platform, for there was placed the plank on the Treaty and the League, which is the most indefinite, confusing, contradictory and altogether cross-eyed series of proposals ever put forward. The plank is admitted by even its apologists to be a gigantic "straddle." To effect harmony it sacrificed consistency and principle. "It does not preclude," observes The Tribune, acceptance of the League of Nations and ratification of the Treaty. But neither does it preclude violent repudiation of them both. The party of ideas did not, on this subject, think it safe to express in plain language whatever ideas it may have had.

Even the most studied concealment of thought by means of ambiguous words and squinting sentences cannot, however, cover up the motive and the effect of the League plank. For one thing, it puts a clear stamp of insincerity upon all that the Republicans in the Senate did and said. They professed anxiety to give the country peace under the Treaty and security under the League. Senator Lodge openly appealed for the votes of Democratic Senators on the ground that he was earnestly trying to get the Treaty ratified. But at Chicago he served notice that if a resolution were brought in favoring ratification—on any terms—he would fight it on the floor of the convention. This bears out the analysis of the Massachusetts Senator's secret intent made by one in close touch with him all through the Treaty fight in the Senate. It was that "Lodge really wants to kill the Treaty but does not dare to." At Chicago he plucked up the necessary courage.

If there is a particle of honesty in the League plank of the Republicans, it means a throwing away of all that has been done. There is, today, a League of Nations in existence and at work, but the Republicans will have nothing to do with it. We have a Treaty with Germany, but the Republicans propose to write an entirely new one. Their President, if they can elect him, will have to take up the negotiations afresh next March, and enter upon a long period of delay and vexation, while our old contracts are remodeled and new ones made—new ones which Germany will be in a position to render far less favorable to us than the old. Then would come the slow labor of getting the new treaty ratified. If the Democratic Senators were to prove as small-minded as the Republican Senators have been, that might take months. And this is the pleasant prospect put before us by the party that solemnly denounces President Wilson for having inexcusably retarded peace and reconstruction!

LABOR'S NEW STATUS.

Many who would support labor's aspiration for a more stable and responsible industrial status are alienated by the examples labor gives of the use it would make of power if it had it. Economic boycotts as illustrated in our local waterfront strike are sufficiently obnoxious, but industrial boycotts in politics, especially international politics, are unendurable. They are not left to the imagination, but are exemplified almost daily. Yesterday the cable brought the formal indorsement by the Irish Labor Party and Trades Union Congress of the refusal of the Dublin strikers to handle munitions sent for the use of the police and troops in Ireland. Their manifesto is an open defiance of the Government:

> Not all the armies in the empire will compel us to become traitors to our own nation. We will not shrink from the consequences of that view although the whole fabric of the Commonwealth be convulsed.

The British Miners' Federation on Thursday took similar action, adding Poland to Ireland in its opposition to Government policies. At Amsterdam the International Trades Unions and the General Council of the International Federation of Transport Workers declared a boycott of all commerce with Hungary, effective from the 20th of June, as a protest against the "persecution of Hungarian workmen by the White terror." There is no intention of passing upon the merits of any of these disputes in saying that this method of political procedure is more anti-social than socialism itself. The world cannot live in modern comfort if labor for any reason arrogates to itself power of blockade, displacing all other law with its own edicts. Mr. Gompers said that "at any time or place any attempt to enforce compulsory labor must be resisted at any cost," and his audience applauded. The right to strike as he expounds it includes the right to boycott, and labor itself would be the worst sufferer if the right to strike as thus defined were to be conceded.

RAVAGES OF INTERNATIONALISM.

Senator Johnson talks of the Republican League of Nations circumlocution as "a tremendous victory for Americanism, a signal and overwhelming defeat for internationalism and international bankers." He speaks with a solemnity that recalls the dark perpetual grief and wrath of the worshippers of the Great White Dollar of our Daddies about the Crime of 1873. It would be idle to expect any meaning in these his lamentations. If there were any, and he were to be taken seriously, the persuasiveness and pervasiveness of international bankers would have to be viewed with alarm by the Johnsonians. Since the international bankers are cultivating so assiduously and perniciously that root of all evil, the League of Nations, it must be they who have made the American Federation of Labor, with its millions of members, so persistent in insisting on the ratification of the Treaty and the Covenant. It must be the same iniquitous money lords who spread the work of sin in Mr. Johnson's own State and induced the school teachers, the colleges, the clergy, the women, strongly to approve the League. All over the country the case is the same. Nobody wants the League except the people, including most of the Republican people. Who would have believed that a coterie of international bankers, of the merest "money changers," could turn practically a whole nation to its will and selfish purpose?

THE REPUBLICANS ON MEXICO.

The Republican platform finds President Wilson responsible for all that has gone wrong in Mexico, as was to be expected; but things were going wrong when President Taft passed the problem on to his successor. Mr. Wilson has been in the White House a little more than seven years. He inherited a disturbed, a revolutionary Mexico. President Madero was arrested by order of General Huerta on Feb. 18, 1913, and the tragedy of the taking off of Madero and Suarez soon followed. "We should not recognize any Mexican Government," says the Republican platform, "unless it be a responsible Government, willing and able to give sufficient guarantees that the lives and property of American citizens are respected and protected, that wrongs will be promptly corrected and just compensation will be made for injury sustained." Mr. Wilson declined to recognize Huerta. He did not regard Huerta as the head of a Government that could give such guarantees. Mr. Wilson laid down the sound principle that he could not trust a Mexican who was responsible for the murder of the chosen head of the Government, constitutionally elected, if ever a President was. It must be proved that the Obregonistas are innocent of the tragedy of Carranza's murder before the Government of their provisional ruler can be recognized. The platform makers step carefully around the existing situation in Mexico.

Whatever criticism can be made of Mr. Wilson's Mexican policy, it will not be denied that a war with Mexico, begun in the President's first term, would have been very embarrassing after the United States entered the European conflict in April, 1917. If the platform makers at Chicago are sincere in their assaults upon Mr. Wilson's "ineffective policy" below the Rio Grande, they must contend that he should have intervened in Mexico to discipline and punish the Government and people for the outrages complained of. As a "sincere friend" of the Mexicans, the Republican Party, if it prevails in the elections in November, will not hesitate to intervene; that is to say, to make war upon Mexico, should order not be maintained and American citizens not be protected. What else can be concluded from the intimation that a "great service" will be rendered the Mexican people by the carrying out of the policy the Republican Party favors?

GARDNER'S GOLF.

Robert Gardner lost the British golf championship on the thirty-seventh hole. A break of the luck against him may have been sufficient to account for this, just as a break of the luck in Hilton's favor enabled that English golfer to win the American championship on the thirty-seventh hole. If Gardner had had the good fortune to win, the press in this country would have resounded with his praise. But the feat that he actually achieved merits cordial and admiring recognition. To have been able to play through the entire field of the finest British amateurs, and then to lose in the finals only by the narrowest margin, is testimony enough to the skill and steadiness of his game and to his stout heart. Best of all, he seems to have impressed everybody at the links with his modest bearing and true sportsmanship. He came just short of winning the championship, but he won respect and liking.

THE DEBS PICTURES.

Moving picture houses throughout the country are exhibiting the scene at Atlanta Prison that took place when Eugene V. Debs was formally notified that the Socialist Party had made him its candidate for President.

It is not a genuine scene; it is a performance carefully planned and rehearsed with a view to creating sympathy among the unthinking. Mr. Debs embraces the emissaries of his party—actually kisses them. When the hollow sham is thus coldly described, few can escape a shiver of repugnance. Many will revolt at the idea that a man legally and justly convicted of a crime against his country, committed at a time when the lives of his fellow citizens were at stake and the future of civilization in the balance, should be permitted by the nation's servants to take part in such mummery. But in the theatre, as the authors of the little drama well knew, no touch of the "faking" is obvious. Few who are responsive to the appeal of the dramatic, or whose hearts are sensitive to the pathos of old age in distress, can stifle a responsive emotion. Under the influence of this unreasoning mob psychology, the acknowledged criminal is nightly applauded—as loudly as many of the candidates for the Presidency who have won their honorable eminence by great and unflagging service to the American people. In brief, an outrage is committed, an outrage against the nation and against its heroic defenders.

It is probably too late to prevent the exhibition of the pictures; but it is not too late to provide that, together with so much deliberate mawkishness and premeditated falsification, the bare truth shall be made known to all. In a public speech delivered in June, 1918, the present candidate of the Socialist Party applauded its platform of 1917, which called for "continuous action and public opposition" against our conduct of the war; declared that the war was caused by and carried on for the sake of "capital," and exhorted wage earners not to submit to the draft or in any way aid their country. Speaking of the Government and the courts, he said: "With every drop in my veins I despise their law and defy them!" All this he admitted under oath in court and has never recanted a word of it.

With these few lines flashed upon the screen, little would be left of the mob psychology upon which the authors of the Debs scenario have so astutely played. The underlying falsity of the appeal for sympathy would be obvious, and the flagrant impropriety of exhibiting, on an equal footing with those who have been loyal to the American people, the man who is loyal only to socialism. With the true words of Debs inscribed upon it, the little drama would have a logical beginning and middle—probably also a logical end.

COOKS AND LADIES.

In England also they are having domestic difficulties and, thanks to the gossiping court reports of The London Times, many of them are spread before the public. A recent embroglio in Hampstead resulted in the utterance of several mighty lines, of import for both servants and employers—though his Lordship, the presiding Justice in the case, unfortunately appears to have regarded the occasion as one for levity.

The trouble sprang from a six-rib loin of mutton allotted by the Government. A stress of hospitality having arisen to contend with the stress of rationing, the mistress bade the cook to prepare the loin for a company of nine. The problem of serving six chops to nine people nonplussed the cook's mathematics. Words ensued, accompanied by physical violence and even blows. Finically the mistress seems to have triumphed, but according to the cook her dignity was sorely impaired. "Her face and nose were all black from the stove and there was grease all down her dress. She looked terrible." Hereupon his Lordship the Judge exclaimed: "What, did she rub her nose upon the stove?" and the report records undignified "(laughter)." Notwithstanding soot and disarray, the mistress gave a demonstration of culinary short division, though here, too, she failed to impress the cook. "You couldn't do it. It's impossible! You couldn't hash and monkey about with a thing like that!" But the mistress did it, and as she triumphantly performed the operation she exclaimed, "I am a cook-general! There are no ladies now; I am not a lady." In this sentiment the cook, for the first time, acquiesced. A cook-general, she explained, is "a menial woman who can do a little cooking; she is the lowest kind of servant!"

Many a housewife of late, here as in England, must have felt herself to be the lowest of menials. But, unlike this Hampstead virago, some have avoided looking and acting as such. The reason is that they have taken to heart another of those mighty lines from suburban London, though in a sense which they would once have thought paradoxical. "There are no ladies now." In the trivial days of old—days in which the soul of neither man nor woman was ever really tried—the possession of an uncertain amount of breeding, with a certain amount of money, conferred a distinction of class. At least with servants one could lord it and lady it. They were paid to accept the imposition and they needed the money. Today there is no such compulsion, even in the case of those who cannot divide six by nine. Equality is upon us. That is as it should be. It was a war fought for democracy.

In the Hampstead tragedy the master of the house (as he would once have been styled) seems also to have been at fault. On the occasion, crucial in such cases, of the first arrival of the cook he refused to let her in at the front door and took her around to the servants' entrance. We do not suggest a brass band and a seat in the parlor, though the impulse is strong. True democracy eliminates all show and ceremony. But that enforced circumambulation to the back stoop was itself a bit of "side." The cook insisted that, upon the occasion of her first arrival at the domicile of her equal, she had a right to come in at the front.

PLATFORM OMISSIONS.

What is left out of a platform is sometimes as significant as what is put in. The Republicans were expected to use some form of weasel words about the Irish Republic, but omitted even the conventional "sympathy" for Ireland. The only comfort for the Sinn Feiners lies in the hope that trouble with England may result from the proposal to discriminate against English ships using the Panama Canal and in the general attitude of cold aloofness toward the Allied Powers, who alone, according to the inadvertent admission of the platform, by their fleets and military supplies saved this country from "disaster." Then there is the failure to say anything about prohibition, except the little flourish in favor of enforcing all laws, which William Allen White, himself a member of the Committee on Resolutions, scornfully pronounces "bunk."

Most notable of all, however, is the omission to arraign the Democratic Administration for one of its blackest crimes. The platform assailed the Democrats for every kind of incompetence and neglect, but said nothing about one terrible calamity that they brought upon the country. This inflicted the heaviest financial loss and caused widespread personal suffering, yet it was not so much as alluded to in the platform. We mean, of course, the disastrous blizzard of last Winter. In forgetting to pledge the Republican Party never to allow anything of that kind to occur under a Republican Administration the platform risked the loss of the whole anti-blizzard vote.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Rivalry in Length of Noises.

Four years ago there was a lot of talk, backed by a lot of writing, in both ridicule and denunciation of the prolonged yells, howls and other uncouth noises that pass for cheering at political conventions. Everybody, seemingly, had come to the conclusion that "demonstrations" over the names of candidates were far less an expression of enthusiasm than an evidence of the skill possessed by certain individuals who are hired or otherwise persuaded to create semblances of excitement and rejoicing. It was generally realized that the outbursts thus produced were always artificial, at least in their extensions beyond a few minutes, and that they proved nothing in regard either to the merits of the candidates in behalf of whom they were manufactured or to what the voters of the country were going to do when Election Day came.

There was enough of this sort of criticism in 1916 to justify something between a hope and an expectation that the absurd habit so little in consonance with the serious business of a national convention and so much worse than a waste of valuable time, would not be followed this year. But the hope has been disappointed, the expectation not realized.

Again at Chicago yesterday the nominating speeches were followed by senseless uproar, and again the puny reporters had to note the exact number of minutes to which, by the energetic efforts of men properly described as "provoking agents," each silly imitation of a madhouse in revolt could be stretched out.

That a single vote was changed in the Coliseum or out of it, by contemplation of the relative "records" thus made nobody believes or even suspects, and why the sweltering delegates let themselves be used in the solemn farces is a problem for psychologists, especially those who have specialized in explaining the acts and emotions of crowds.

Done Only Because Customary.

Investigation of such a phenomenon as the prolonged ululations at national conventions probably should begin with the remote ancestors of the delegates and of their leaders and manipulators—with savages and barbarians and what they did before joining battle. Almost invariably they stood well apart for a considerable period, brandishing their weapons and shouting boasts, defiances and threats at their enemies.

The object was the double one of working themselves up into a state of excitement favorable for hard fighting and of inspiring fear on the other side. Probably the method had something of real utility, else would it not have become the widespread "folkway" it was, and for that matter still is, among primitive peoples.

That any part of its old efficiency survived for civilized men and women is hardly to be believed, but many an ancestral impulse and practice long outlives its utility, and politicians are a most conservative tribe, with a deadly fear of not doing what has always been done.

None knows better than they, or as well, the real nature of convention demonstrations, but they are slaves of custom.

Why Not Be Cool In Summer?

In all the convention dispatches of the last two days there have been frequent and feeling references to the high temperature in the Coliseum. The delegates sit in their shirt sleeves—the more fortunate or wiser women delegates in no sleeves at all—and all over the vast expanse fans wave desperately and constantly.

Considering how easy it has been to raise money for political purposes this year and how generously it has been spent, there is excuse for some wonder that no attempt was made at artificial cooling of the building. Had the time been Winter, the place would have been heated as a matter of course. At about the same expense its temperature could have been lowered, with the result, not only of making everybody comfortable, but also of keeping everybody in patience and good temper and so increasing the probability of well-considered and wise action.

The art of refrigeration is no mystery nowadays, and the fact that it is practiced hardly at all except for the benefit of perishable foods is a contrary reflection to human intelligence. People do not seem yet to realize that indoors it is no more necessary to swelter than to freeze, and the rich and poor alike endure in Summer hardships that are as easily avoidable as those of Winter.

Only the Name Is Missing.

With a caution that may have shown political wisdom—it certainly revealed none of any other sort—the Republicans did not say in their platform a word about military training for the youth of the country. They did sidle up to the idea, however, for they gravely proclaimed as follows:

> A thorough system of physical education for all children up to the age of 19, including adequate health supervision and instruction, would remedy conditions revealed by the draft and would add to the economic and industrial strength of the nation.

No hint is given how "all children up to the age of 19" are to get this "thorough system of physical education" except under a plan which, whatever its name, would be military. At any rate, every efficient plan would prepare the "children" to fight for their country in case of need, and the people of the United States are far from being so tainted with pacifism as really to object to the production of potential soldiers.

The great majority of Americans are well aware that whether or not military training leads to "militarism" is a question the answer to which depends on the character of a people and of its government. They have as little desire as intention to attack other nations, but they have had too recently a lesson too terrible as to the perils of unpreparedness to have been frightened if the Republicans had spoken out what they undoubtedly meant when they drafted this particular plank in their platform.

The Last Congress.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article "The Record of Congress" hits the nail squarely on the head. It is the facts and the whole truth and nothing but facts and truth. A great publicist has said: "Men's words are cheap and plenty enough; but ideas that rouse and set multitudes thinking come as gold from the mine." Reading editorial articles like the above in other publications, and some of the greatest of them non-partisan, I believe that the "gold" will be discovered. Like Napoleon, who was said to have done all that in him lay to live without moral principle, the last Congress seems to have done all that in it lay to confuse and disorganize all that the Administration had done to establish peace and to bring back the nation to stability. The writer is not hopeless that either at Chicago or San Francisco, in the selecting of a President, the man will be found who will be big enough and patriotic enough to see to it that the Republic will live and stand for better things than what noisy party charlatans would make us believe is Americanism. Hoover, Hughes, Lowden, Taft, Palmer, McAdoo, Davis are all of that stature.

OTHER DAYS—OTHER WAYS.

Don't you wonder, Madelon,
Where away I could have gone?
Gee! old girl, we used to play
Hard at love down Chalons way!
I know you thought I meant it, kid,
And then—compree?—I almost did!
Oh, those were great old days with you,
Down Chalons way at G. H. Q.!

It must have struck you queer, Marie,
What the deuce became of me!
'Member how I held your hand,
And tried to make you understand?
I promised you a billy-doo,
But then, I never did come through!
You see, old dear, I thought it best
To leave things as they were, at Brest.

I'd sure be hard-boiled, Antoinette,
If now I ever could forget!
You taught me all I ever knew
'Bout making love in parley voo!
I used to like to hear you say,
"Kesse me queek!" your Frenchy way.
There's lots of things I did, 'Toinette,
But one thing I can't do—forget!

I often think—you bet I do!—
'Bout how you're faring—all of you!
But things look different, now I'm back
In my old home town, Tamarack.
A little Jane I used to know
Has made herself my last C. O.
So let's let bygones be bygone—
Marie, 'Toinette and Madelon!

RACING NEWS BILL.

Objections to the Provisions of the Sims-Stirling Measure.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If it is the purpose of Congress to destroy thoroughbred horse racing in the United States no more effective means for the accomplishment of that end than is suggested in the Sims-Stirling bill could be employed. Racing, like other popular amusements and pastimes, lives by newspaper publicity. Make it impossible for the daily newspapers to obtain news of racing over the telephone and telegraph wires and to relay this news through the mails to their readers and racing will quickly lose the character of a great national sport, with the widest possible appeal, and swiftly degenerate into a mere fad of wealthy amateurs.

With the destruction of organized racing would go the thoroughbred breeding industry of the United States, which was well-nigh wrecked some ten years back in consequence of witlessly hostile legislation in several of the States. Considerably more than $100,000,000 is invested in this industry now and it is fast attracting new men of wealth and social and business distinction. Without organized and generously patronized racing—the patronage of racing would become a negligible thing if the right to gather and disseminate news of it were denied the daily papers—there would be no profitable employment or sale for the produce of thoroughbred stallions and mares that are today bringing in the markets of Great Britain, France and the United States from $2,500 to $250,000 apiece.

With the wiping out of the thoroughbred breeding industry in the United States now happily in a flourishing productive condition, would inevitably pass the last American light horse. Long ago the automobile made unprofitable the production in large numbers of old-fashioned harness and road horses. Racing has steadily maintained a paying market for the thoroughbred and his legitimate offspring, the trotter. Destroy the thoroughbred breeding industry and it will become impossible for the remount service of the army properly to equip with horses the cavalry, artillery and transport arms of the forces of national defense. Without horses of thoroughbred blood the United States would be at a hopeless disadvantage in a military sense, in any future war with a first, or a second, or even a third class power. There are not enough really serviceable military horses in the United States now for the outfitting of an army of 200,000. Ready verification of these statements may be had from the officers of the remount service in Washington.

In every other well organized country thoroughbred horse racing has the strongest governmental encouragement because experimentation and experience have demonstrated indubitably that racing alone makes possible the production in worth while numbers of the horse best suited in the essential qualities of courage, docility and endurance for military purposes. The Government of the United States could hardly undertake to defray, by an expenditure of money raised by taxing a people already grievously overburdened, the cost of maintaining a breed of horses the existence of racing, whose numbers run into the hundreds of thousands, are now joyously supporting by their patronage of the race courses.

Plans of Assemblyman Cuvillier.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The platform of the Republican Party is un-American, not constructive, and negative for the importance of this country after the World War. If I shall go to San Francisco demanding the nomination of General John J. Pershing from Missouri as President, and Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, as Vice President, both men representing true Americanism, and will insist on an amendment of the Eighteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution so that each State shall vote on this question, electing members of the Legislature, as to the popular will of the people on this question; also for the bonus for soldiers of the World War; for friendly recognition of Ireland as a republic, the same as France recognized the American colonies as free from Great Britain; that labor shall be free at all times to assert its rights and to compel all people in business to become citizens within the shortest time allowed by law; I am opposed to the League of Nations, and believe this country should be prepared at all times with an efficient army and navy.

Albanian Sentiment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's issue of The Times, I read with great interest Charles Upson Clarke's remarks about Koritza (Coritza) and heartily agree with him when he remarks, "Koritza is strictly an Albanian city." I also lived with the Koritzans for a period of eight months, and can pass an unbiased opinion as to how they feel about the matter. It was always understood by us who served with the French army before the United States entered the war that the Greek boundary line was situated at the town at Biglista, a distance of about fifty miles from Koritza. This opinion was apparently shared by all troops serving in the Balkans, including the Greeks. Now our Congress wishes to turn this beautiful little Albanian city over to the protesting arms of Greece. The Albanian population will not submit to the outrage. He will fight for Koritza as he did early in 1917, when, shoulder to shoulder with the Frenchman, he defeated the Bulgars who attempted to pass Lake Ostrova. Congress will take heed, or foresee, start another Balkan war.

The Story of Hi and Ho.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Early astronomy has it recorded how, in the twenty-second century B. C., two Chinese State astronomers named Hi and Ho became intoxicated upon the occasion of an important eclipse, and, consequently, failed to beat their drums and shoot their arrows, at that time nationally invoked to scare away the great dragon supposed to be swallowing the Lord of Day. The story goes that because of the confusion which resulted throughout the empire, Hi and Ho must be put to death. And so, thereafter a fear fell upon all holding this office, to the end that the monster seeking to devour mankind might be ever vigilantly watched to the preservation of the race.

Applying the allegory to modern life, Hi might fitly represent the high cost of living and Ho the profiteers of the public, being married to betwixt and between. Hi like his predecessor, is drunk with abundance flowing from a horn of plenty, while Ho similarly has become so bibulous as to be unable to calculate the difference between thirty-four-cent sugar in America and five-cent sugar in Peru. As a result darkness covers the land, and great confusion prevails.

The moral is keen with interest, for both Hi and Ho get into the hands of the great executioner.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial "Trading with Russia," that appeared in The Times June 5 should be read and considered by all who want to restore peace and world trade.

If, as has been stated, the Bolshevik are almost at the end of their rope and a few months more of their impossible economics will end them, why this effort on the part of some nations and individuals to reopen trade with Soviet Russia, which would only continue Trotsky in power?

Is it possible that any nation or capitalists could be so short-sighted that they cannot see the inevitable effect which must follow, and the indorsement implied because of their present anxiety to trade with Soviet Russia?

HOUSE'S VISIT IS NEWS.

French and American Officials in Paris Not Informed of It.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, June 11.—At the French Foreign Office, it was said today, nothing was known of the visit of Colonel House to Europe. It was said that the French Government had not invited him to any consultation.

At the American Embassy the coming of President Wilson's late adviser was news.

Col. E. M. House, Nathan Straus and Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis are among the prominent persons sailing today for Europe. Four liners, the Touraine, the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, the Lapland and the Philadelphia will carry full complements of passengers.

Mr. Straus, who has booked passage on the Lapland, will be accompanied by his wife and secretary. He said he expected to attend the Zionist Conference in London next month, following which he would devote his time to spreading propaganda in England in favor of pasteurized milk. He said the high infant death rate in England demonstrated the need of the pasteurization of milk. Mr. Straus will remain abroad several months. He plans to visit Palestine, but may postpone this trip until next Winter.

Colonel House, who will sail with Mrs. House of the same steamer, is quoted as saying his visit abroad was purely personal. He will visit London, Paris and other cities, returning home in September.

HYLAN-CRAIG ROW RENEWED.

Controller Blocks Appropriation for Motors for Police.

Long standing animosity between Mayor Hylan and Controller Charles L. Craig broke out afresh yesterday over several trivial routine matters at the Board of Estimate's weekly meeting. The final rupture came as a result of the Controller's opposition to Police Commissioner Enright's request for an appropriation of $45,150 for motor equipment for the department.

The Controller blocked the appropriation, for the passage of which a unanimous vote was necessary, by voting in the negative on every item. The items included fifty motorcycles, 200 bicycles, eight Ford touring cars and three Cadillac touring cars. The Fords, Commissioner Enright had explained, were for the use of detectives in the districts and the Cadillacs for the use of the Chief Inspector and the department in general.

Commissioner Enright was perturbed at the Controller's action.

"Don't worry, Commissioner," said the Mayor. "Things sometimes go this way."

"There are men walking today for the want of motorcycles," said the Police Commissioner. "If you want the traffic rules enforced you must provide the means to enforce them."

"The Controller's day of running the whole town is over," said the Mayor. "I have worked with a good many men, but never with one so annoying as you," turning to Mr. Craig.

"You'll never have to worry about working with another Controller," replied Mr. Craig.

A public hearing was held on the recommendation of the Committee on Plans and Public Improvement for closing and discontinuing South Second, South Third and South Fourth Streets from Kent Avenue to the bulkhead line of the East River, and River Street from Grand Street to Berry Avenue, Brooklyn. The request was made by the American Sugar Refining Company in order to build a new refinery. There was a veiled threat that the company would move its plant to some other city if the request were not granted.

A large delegation from the neighborhood opposed the closing of the streets on the ground that the building would cut off the air from the river. Former Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, counsel for the company, and a number of business men of the neighborhood appeared in favor of the project. The decision was postponed for one week.

CHILE NEEDS ROLLING STOCK

Government Seeks to Buy $8,000,000 Worth in This Country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Chilean Government desires to purchase in the United States $8,000,000 worth of railway rolling stock, and asks for bids on this material, according to advices today to the Chilean Embassy from its Foreign Office. Locomotives, cars and other supplies are included in the transportation equipment desired.

All the railways in Chile are owned by the Government. Little could be done during the war in the way of improving the railroads, and now Chile is anxious to restore them to good condition in order to take care of the growing commerce which that country is handling.

Only a few months ago Chile asked for bids on extensive electrical equipment for the port improvement works at Valparaiso, and when the installation of this modern machinery is completed on the large new docks at that port it will be possible to facilitate the handling of imports and exports.

NEW MISSIONARIES TO DINE.

Will Be Entertained, 251 Strong, at Hotel Astor.

The 251 newly appointed missionaries attending a week's conference for instruction at the Presbyterian Building, 156 Fifth Avenue, will be present at a corporate service tomorrow morning in the University Place Presbyterian Church at Tenth Street and hear a sermon by the Rev. Dr. George Alexander, the pastor, who is President of the Board of Foreign Missions. Monday evening they will be entertained at a dinner in the Hotel Astor by the Presbyterian Social Union of New York City.

Next Wednesday afternoon all the new missionaries will gather in front of the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street, to have a group picture taken.

BOOK SALE TOTALS $8,786.

Volume Printed by Franklin Brings $210 Here.

The sale of the library of an unnamed Boston book collector was ended at the Anderson Galleries last evening. E. Wehye paid $800 for a collection of title pages from rare books of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries.

James F. Drake gave $780 for a first edition of "Champ Fleury," illustrated by Geoffrey Tory and printed in 1529. The same bidder obtained for $210 Cicero's "Cato Major," printed by Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia in 1744. The grand total for the sale is $8,786.

DR. DAY TO PREACH AGAIN.

Markets Commissioner to Return to Labor Temple Pastorate.

The Rev. Dr. Jonathan C. Day, Commissioner of Public Markets, will return to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Labor Temple, Second Avenue and Fourteenth Street, which he resigned to take municipal office. His salary as Commissioner of Markets was $7,500. The church office will pay about $4,000. Dr. Day will succeed Francis E. Wilbur, who has been associate director under the Church Extension Committee of the Presbytery of New York. When Dr. Day came to New York about eight years ago from a pastorate in Tyrone, Pa., he succeeded the Rev. Charles Stelzle, founder of the Labor Temple.

PRINCETON'S ANNUAL EXERCISES START

ALUMNI THRONGING BACK

Baseball Game with Yale Will Be Feature Today—Program in Detail.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 11.—Princeton's 173d Commencement opened officially at 9 o'clock tonight with the performance of "The Isle of Surprise," by the Triangle Club. The exercises will close with the President's reception Tuesday afternoon.

Twenty-six classes have announced official headquarters and others are being established as rapidly as members arrive. So far the class of 1870, back for its fiftieth reunion, is the oldest to organize, but men of '53 and '55 and other classes that were graduated more than half a century ago are momentarily expected. Every available room in town is occupied and there will be a large overflow of alumni into the dormitories. Reunion tents have been put up on every vacant lot in town. There is a return to the ante-bellum commencement schedules.

The annual sophomore reception will be held in the gymnasium Monday night, and the girls who have arrived for this and the Yale baseball game tomorrow have added a dash of color to the occasion.

The class of 1895 is going to hold a unique reunion. It is their twenty-fifth, and each member of the class is to bring with him some product of his labors. Even a rat poison is to be exhibited, as the President of the company that makes it is a '95 man.

Many graduates arrived last night and they have been inspecting the new memorial hall, recently completed in a section of Nassau Hall in honor of those Princetonians who fell in the war. This memorial was dedicated in February.

For the Yale baseball game on University Field tomorrow every seat in the big grandstand has been sold. Twenty thousand persons are expected to witness the attempt of the Tigers to take their second straight game from the Elis.

Tomorrow at 11 o'clock the nineteenth annual junior oratorical contest will be held in Alexander Hall at 11:15 the ladies' auxiliary will meet at Prospect, the President's home. At 11:45 the alumni parade will form and the ball game will be called at 3:15. There will be a Princeton Rowing Association reception on the Lake Carnegie at 5:30. A performance of "The Isle of Surprise" at 9 will complete the day.

On Sunday morning President John Grier Hibben will deliver the sermon at 11 o'clock in Alexander Hall. At 4:15 the afternoon the Poe Field will be dedicated in honor of John Prentiss Poe, of the class of 1895. He was better known as Johnny and was one of the great Poes of Princeton football history. Then, in the next few days a bronze tablet imbedded in rock will be placed on the field in his honor. The commencement organ recital will take place at 4:30 in Proctor Hall at the Graduate College. Monday's schedule follows: 9:15, annual meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa Society; 10:15, annual meeting of the American Whig and American Cliosophic Societies; 10:45, opening exercises, Alexander Hall; 11, commencement meeting of the Board of Trustees; 12, class day exercises, Nassau Hall; 3:30, cannon exercises; 8:15, Glee Club concert; 10, sophomore reception. Monday is Class Day.

The commencement will take place Tuesday at 11:30 in Alexander Hall. The alumni trustees will be elected at 12, and at 12:45 the alumni luncheon will be held. The President's reception will follow at 4 o'clock.

BAKER NAMES ARMY BOARDS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Secretary Baker today announced the appointment of boards to prepare eligible and promotion lists for the reorganization of the army under the new Army Reorganization law.

A board consisting of General Pershing, Major Gens. McAndrew, Sturgis, Brig. Gens. Muir and Hines and Colonel Kenyon A. Joyce will meet here June 20 to prepare an initial list of officers eligible for General Staff duty. To be placed on the General Staff eligible list officers must have been graduated from the Army Staff College or Army War College before July 1, 1917, and have been recommended for duty as commander or chief of staff of

SUGAR PROMISED FOR SAVING CROPS

"FLYING SQUADRON" AIDS

The sugar requirements of the commercial canners and preservers for the 1920 season will be met by the four big refineries—American, National, Arbuckle and Warner—through the efforts of A. W. Riley, Chief of the "Flying Squadron." Representatives of the refineries, at a conference with Mr. Riley yesterday afternoon, agreed to allocate 17,000,000 pounds of sugar to the canners for five months, June to October, both inclusive, and a similar amount to the preserver for a six-month period. Earlier in the day representatives of the canners and preservers called on Mr. Riley and told him that a careful survey had indicated that each industry would require 17,000,000 pounds of sugar to tide them over the crop season to October.

The refineries, while agreeing to allocate the sugar, emphasized the lack of proper transportation facilities. They told Mr. Riley that they were willing to fill the orders of every essential industry, but said carriers were insufficient. At the conference were R. M. Parker, W. Edward Foster and Edward C. Cressmore of the American Sugar Refining Company; James H. Post and C. D. Bruyn, President of the National Sugar Refining Company; Max Crane of the Arbuckle Company and E. L. Wemple, Vice President of the Warner Sugar Refining Company.

There was also a conference on the sugar situation yesterday morning between Mr. Riley and Manuel Rionda, A. H. Lamborn and E. L. Lueder, sugar dealers, who constitute a committee representing the wholesale dealers and brokers.

In the United States District Court yesterday Judge Augustus N. Hand sustained the demurrers to indictments procured by agents of the "flying squadron," charging the Eugene A. Sullivan Company, Inc., Eugene A. Sullivan and Andrew Spada, produce merchants, with violating the Lever Act by profiteering in the sale of potatoes. Judge Hand explained that the indictments did not specify whether the defendants made any profit in dealing with the potatoes. The fact that the indictments specified the price paid for the potatoes and the price at which they were sold was not deemed sufficient by the court.

NEW 5TH AVENUE HOSPITAL.

Plans Are Filed for $3,000,000 Building at 105th Street.

Plans were filed yesterday for an eleven-story fireproof hospital on the east side of Fifth Avenue, between 105th and 106th Streets. The building, which will be known as the Fifth Avenue Hospital, will cost approximately $3,000,000. It will be built in the shape of a cross, affording plenty of light and ventilation to the 320 rooms.

The plan of construction has been made primarily to take care of the great middle class who desire private rooms but who cannot afford to pay expensive rates," Dr. Wiley B. Woodgrey, Superintendent of the hospital, said last night. "Every room will be an outside room."

Emile Vatable.

Emile Vatable, a member of the firm of H. A. Vatable & Son, 10 Hanover Square, which was founded by his father, Henri A. Vatable, died yesterday at his new residence, 1,215 Madison Avenue, following several months' ill health that ended in an affection of the heart. Mr. Vatable was 79 years old and a graduate of St. John's College, Fordham. His family has long been well known in the social life of the city and for many years Mr. Vatable was a liberal patron of sport, being noted himself in his younger days as a crack shot. He had a country residence at Cape Vincent, N. Y. Jules J. Vatable is a nephew.

MERCURY AT 90 TIES JUNE 11 HEAT RECORD

Heat Wave Results in Two Deaths, Two Prostrations and Injury to Child.

HEAVY DOWNPOUR IN SPOTS

Yesterday equaled the heat record for any June 11. It was 90 at 6 o'clock and at 7 o'clock, after which the temperature fell slowly. The records of the Weather Bureau show only one previous June 11 when the temperature reached 90, that being in 1894. The Weather Bureau predicted that the heat would continue today, although hope was held out that it might not reach the same peak.

The hot spell was broken in the middle of the afternoon by a thunderstorm, accompanied by a short-lived but terrific downpour which fell in an irregular pattern over the city. It resembled a small cloudburst for half a minute in the Times Square section, and was heavy above 100th Street, but it missed lower Manhattan and parts of Brooklyn. There was no rainfall near the Whitehall Building, where the Weather Bureau is situated. The cooling effect of the rain did not last long and the temperature rose afterward until, after reaching 90 at 6 o'clock and continuing there until 7 o'clock, it began to decline slowly.

Walls in First Avenue, near Fifty-third Street, late last night, John J. Boyd, 45 years old, an engineer on Blackwell's Island, collapsed. A patrolman called Dr. Stratte of Metropolitan Hospital, but the man was dead before he arrived. Death is believed to have been due to heart disease brought on by the heat.

The heat resulted in two prostrations in Manhattan. It indirectly resulted in the death of one child and serious injury to another. Solomon Strum, 18 months old, of 1,197 Forest Avenue, the Bronx, fell out of a first floor window at that address after being placed near the window to cool off. The child died in Lincoln Hospital. Annie Mooney, 18 months old, fell in the same way from a window on the second floor at 280 East Avenue and was taken to Harlem Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull.

Wires were broken down in some parts of Long Island, but the telephone company reported the inconveniences to it as slight and that its service was practically normal.

AUTOS KILL THREE, ONE ON SIDEWALK

Mrs. Susie Toerner Is Crushed Against Building at 156th Street and Third Avenue.

Two women and an 8-year-old boy were killed by automobiles in the city yesterday and six others were injured, none of them seriously.

Mrs. Susie Toerner of 875 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, was instantly killed when an automobile owned and operated by John Citrafni of 2,434 Cambreling Avenue, the Bronx, crushed her against a building at 156th Street and Third Avenue yesterday afternoon. According to witnesses, Citriani was driving down Third Avenue, and, swerving to avoid collision with a truck, hit an elevated pillar and rebounded on to the sidewalk, where Mrs. Toerner was standing.

Mrs. Sarah J. Bedford, 54 years old, of 200 Third Avenue, died in Bellevue Hospital of a fractured skull received when she was run down last night in front of her home by a commercial automobile owned and driven by Nicholas Maratino, of 250 East 136th Street, the Bronx.

Joseph Gusico, 8 years old, of 27 Mulberry Street, was struck and instantly killed by an automobile owned by the White Motor Car Company at the corner of Mulberry and Bayard Streets. Louis Leguorin of Belmore, L. I., was the chauffeur.

A new machine to measure fatigue

What record would you make on it?

AFTER years of effort to discover a means of measuring fatigue, a successful machine has at last been perfected in England. It can determine your nervous condition by testing your ability to concentrate.

This fatigue machine, recently described by Dr. Winifred Cullis, Professor of Physiology at the London School of Medicine, has a slit, behind which a roll of paper unwinds at a speed controlled by the operator. On the paper are dots printed at unequal intervals. The person being tested endeavors to pierce with a pointed instrument as many dots as he can in a given length of time.

By comparing the number of dots you can punch in the morning as you come to work, with the number you are able to strike at the end of the day, your condition is determined. With this machine your state of fatigue at any time can be accurately shown, your ability to concentrate measured.

Dr. Cullis, during her recent visit to America, announced some of the results of extensive research into conditions of various branches of work which produce fatigue.

One of the most important results established was that men and women in various ways waste their precious energy.

It is because of this waste that they become fatigued and listless in their daily tasks. This is why so many fail and meet defeat.

Today one of the greatest of wastes comes from pounding away your energy on hard, modern pavements. Every step you take with hard leather heels or "dead" rubber heels acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system.

Remove this cause of fatigue

If you are a person of average activity you take 8,000 steps a day. The constant repetition of these jolts and jars tends to exhaust your energy—to produce that state of fatigue which is the greatest enemy you have in your work today.

You can do much to prevent this condition. You can eliminate the shocks of pounding hard heels on still harder pavements. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are blended by special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

The same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.

O'Sullivan's Heels

49 TRUCKS IN OPERATION

LEGION CHIEF DENIES AID

Officer of 165th Infantry Also Asserts Organization Is Not Supporting the Merchants.

Efforts to line up the full strength of the American Federation of Labor against the business forces of this city in the threatened struggle over the "open shop" in transportation work will be made by representatives of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters at the labor convention in Montreal. A committee representing the 44,000 union truckmen in the city will leave for Montreal today to add their voices to the appeal for unswerving support.

J. J. McKenna, business agent of the teamsters, who is a member of the committee, said that upon their return from Montreal they would have an announcement to make, but that their plans would be presented to the convention before they were made public. "We are not doing anything hasty," he said, "and we are not going to reply to the aggressions of the Merchants' Association until after next week."

A resolution to throw the federation's support to the transportation workers was placed before the convention yesterday by James F. Costello, of the Brooklyn Central Labor Council. Mr. Costello declared that the merchants were raising a $5,000,000 fund to wage an "open shop" warfare. The resolution was referred to a committee.

The attitude of the coastwise longshoremen, whose strike is the underlying cause of the trucking difficulties, was shown in the votes of three of the union locals favoring a continuance of the strike. Local 915, which voted last night in Greenwich Hall, 131 Christopher Street, decided 427 to 3 to remain on strike. The decision of locals 895 and 1071, which had previously been taken, was correspondingly emphatic.

While the union leaders both in Montreal and New York were bestirring themselves to adopt some definite plan for resistance the independent trucking service, started Thursday by the committee, was being extended under the direction of Colonel Frederic A. Molitor. Forty-nine trucks were run yesterday without disorder and they carried away 125 tons of freight accumulated on the piers of the coastwise lines.

Policemen Guard the Trucks.

The trucks were run with a uniformed policeman beside each driver as the result of an arrangement between Police Commissioner Enright and Colonel Molitor. In addition several ex-service men, whose duties were freight handling, rode one the trucks.

The employment of ex-service men on the trucks brought forth peremptory disclaimers from officers of the American Legion and the 165th Infantry that either organization was acting officially in support of the merchants. Colonel Molitor had said on Thursday that the drivers were ex-members of the 165th Infantry and that representatives of the American Legion had assisted the committee in planning its operations. It was explained at the committee's offices yesterday that Colonel Molitor had taken only such action as such and that while most of the drivers were former members of the 165th, there were others who were not.

"In some of the news stories appearing in today's papers, regarding the efforts being made by certain commercial interests to adjust the transportation difficulties now being encountered in New York City, it was stated, either directly or inferentially, that the American Legion was co-operating with these commercial interests.

"As State Commander of the American Legion, I wish to deny, without equivocation, that the American Legion in either the State or the county is in any way whatsoever involved in this controversy.

Acting as Individuals.

"The Legion has not furnished truck drivers, has not purposed to furnish them, and such men as may have recently been employed in this capacity have acted upon their own initiative and as individuals, irrespective of the fact that they either were or were not members of the American Legion.

"It is true that a large number of ex-service men are still seeking employment, and for that reason it is possible that many of them have been engaged as drivers of motor trucks. It is also quite likely that many of them are members of the Presbyterian Church, the Elks, the Masons and the Ancient and Honorable Order of Hibernians, but it would be manifestly unfair to hold any of these highly respected organizations responsible for the activities of any of their individual members in seeking any honorable means of making a living.

"Therefore, if it should be true that among the men recently employed as drivers of motor trucks there should happen to be members of the American Legion, it should be clearly understood that they are acting in their individual capacity and not as representatives of the organization."

Lieut. Col. A. E. Anderson of the 165th Infantry, who is President of the New York Chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans' Association and the 69th Regiment Post of the American Legion, said: "I deny most emphatically that the action of the Citizens' Transportation Committee in their struggle with the Longshoremen's and Teamsters' unions has the backing or sympathy of either of the 69th veteran bodies. The former service men of the 165th Infantry are in the employ of the Citizens' Transportation Committee they are there by virtue of their rights as individuals and not by reason of approval of their former service comrades. We have made efforts to learn if any of our members were employed on the trucks and as far as we can determine not one of the trucks engaged in this work was manned by a member of our Veterans' Association.

"We desire, therefore, that immediate action be taken by the press to repudiate the report appearing in the daily papers of this date in order to remove the stigma, which will be attached to our organizations as sympathizing with strike-breakers and nonunionism."

Several Helpers Quit.

Colonel Molitor and Colonel Charles D. Sims, the operating managers of the independent trucks, were on the pier all day yesterday. Fifteen trucks were sent to the Savannah Line, three to the Mallory Line, twenty-one to the Morgan Line and seven to other piers and points. Several of the helpers employed on the trucks quit work at the Morgan Line piers because, they said, they were being asked to do longshoremen's work at considerably less pay than the longshoremen received. The trucks were held up for a short time, while other men were being taken to the piers to take the places of the dissatisfied ones.

Colonel Molitor expressed particular approval of the work of the police and of Commissioner Enright's co-operation. "At no time that I can remember have we received better police support," he said.

The police and the Police Commissioner are all right, believe me. Everything went fine."

William Fellowes Morgan, chairman of the Citizens' Transportation Committee, made public a letter which he sent to the Teamsters' Executive Board. In it he said:

"I have been advised that you have taken action that has caused many trucks to be stopped on the streets of this city, and that the drivers of these trucks have left their employment. I am informed that you have taken this action because the trucks are being operated by men who are not members of your organization.

"The Citizens' Transportation Committee has been formed for the purpose of relieving the congestion of freight on the docks and piers of the coastwise lines, and to that end has undertaken to operate trucks for the delivery of freight to consignees who agree to receive it. The committee has no desire to employ members of your organization, but it has undertaken to operate trucks with its own employees, and to employ such men as may be necessary to operate them, and has no intention of discharging any of its employees because they are not members of your organization.

"The committee has undertaken to perform a public service, and is determined to do so, and to that end will employ such men as may be necessary to operate its trucks, and will protect them in the performance of their duties."

Won't Confirm or Deny Rumor Of British Drug Stores Sale

LONDON, June 11.—Questioned as to the report from Chicago that the United Drug Company had approved the purchase of Messrs. Boots, Limited, Sir Jesse Boots, Secretary of the British corporation, said today:

"Sir Jesse Boots can neither deny nor confirm the statement that the company has been sold to an American firm."

It is believed in London that nothing has yet been settled, but that negotiations are proceeding. The matter came up about a year ago, but nothing came of the discussions.

N. Y. C. HELPS MERCHANTS.

Opens Third Track on West Street for Unloading of Cars.

The New York Central Railroad, acting on a suggestion from the Traffic Bureau Committee of the Board of Trade and Transportation, has opened its third track on West Street, below Morton Street, for the placing of freight cars to help the unloading of freight in the city. The track will be open only to such consignees as agree to unload immediately. Otherwise the cars will go to the regular terminals and the consignee will have to await his turn.

AUSTRIAN CABINET IS OUT OF OFFICE

VIENNA, June 11.—The Austrian Cabinet headed by Dr. Karl Renner as Chancellor, which has been administering the country's affairs for the greater part of the time since the armistice, has resigned office.

The break came unexpectedly over the Minister of War's decree on army discipline, which question was raised in the National Assembly yesterday by the Christian Socialists.

It is believed a new Coalition Cabinet will be formed pending the elections.

In political circles it was said today that the members of the Left had stood ready for some days to seize the first pretext for the break, feeling that the Christian Socialists were steadily blocking legislation to which the former were pledged. The crisis was hastened by external events and also by the incident at Gratz recently when gendarmes fired into crowds demonstrating against profiteering in food, killing three. The Conservative provincial Government, charged with blocking an investigation and punishment of the gendarmes. The reactionary anti-Semitic demonstration of Monday was followed by Monarchist agitation.

Reports point to a strong movement in Tyrol, Salzburg and portions of Upper Austria to join Bavaria and create a Catholic kingdom under Prince Ruppprecht also contributed to the fall of the Government. Innsbruck newspapers have stated that a Bavarian officer, who was active to this end, was in possession of 10,000 lires and received much money.

MT. VERNON BRINGING CZECH BAND TO NORFOLK

Transport Loses Propeller and Changes Course—Four Suicides Reported Among Troops.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The army transport Mount Vernon, on the way from Siberia to Trieste via the Panama Canal, with a large contingent of Czechoslovak troops and some German prisoners, lost a propeller after passing through the canal and has been diverted from her course to Norfolk, General Ettinger, in charge of the Army Transport Service, was advised late this afternoon by Captain Ferguson, in command of the transport, that the vessel was making 12½ knots and would reach Norfolk tomorrow. The Catskill reported nearby, having left the Mount Vernon. At Norfolk the transport will take on coal and a new propeller.

The first news of the accident reached the Czechoslovak legation today, which got into touch with the Potomac Division of the Red Cross and the War Department. Colonel Hurban of the Legation informed Colonel Rogers of the Red Cross his information was that there had been four suicides on the transport, but there was no reference to this in the official messages to the War Department.

On the transport are 3,335 Czechoslovak soldiers bound for Trieste, 200 German prisoners of war bound for Hamburg, and 200 Czechoslovak women and children.

Today The New York Times is obliged to omit 20 columns of advertisements, due to limitation of pages caused by the shortage of newsprint paper.

ALLIES MAY DROP THE SPA CONFERENCE

WANT BRUSSELS MEETING

Would Have Allies Decide There Upon European Financial Policies—Distrust of Giolitti.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 10.—It is entirely probable that the much-discussed Spa conference between allied and German statesmen will not take place at all. The French Government has never been really in favor of it, and Premier Millerand accepted the project at San Remo only on the insistence of Premier Lloyd George. Recent events, especially the results of the election in Germany and the Italian governmental difficulties, give the French arguments against the Spa meeting. It would be in accordance with the French view to call the Brussels financial conference as soon as practicable, have the Allies agree there on European financial policies and then do without the Spa meeting.

There is another factor in shaping French opposition to meeting the Germans. The British and French Governments up to the present have been unable to come to any agreement on the policy of financing the German indemnity. Such an agreement, Premier Millerand holds, must be reached before the meeting with the Germans. Premier Lloyd George's negotiations with the Russian Soviet envoy have not served to bring the two Governments to better relations.

The French expect much from the Brussels conference. They have never expected much from the one to be held at Spa, holding that the proper allied policy was to lay down the law to the Germans rather than to discuss matters with them. They point out that both the German parties which gained last Sunday are opposed to the execution of the Treaty, and that it is very probable that the next Government will be less disposed than the last to enforce the Treaty, and that, anyhow, by July 5, the latest date suggested for the Spa meeting, no German Government can establish itself so as to make its bargains worth while in view of the division of opinion in Germany.

The idea is also advanced that the Italian Government cannot get reorganized and in good shape by July 5. If Giolitti should become Premier, which seems likely, the French would not be anxious to have him take part in the discussions with the Germans. Giolitti, who opposed Italy's entrance into the war on the side of the Allies, has always had in France the reputation of being pro-German, and some French diplomats believe that he would have a worse effect on allied policy-making than Nitti, who, although his pacific tendencies did not jibe with French ideas, was never accused of being pro-German. It might be remarked that if Giolitti were Premier it would be with him that the other Allies would have to deal at Brussels, and that therefore there is little in the French argument. The only reply to that is that the French want the Brussels conference and do not want the Spa conference.

The Journal des Débats says tonight that in Government circles it is believed that if the Brussels conference can be held quickly and the Allies can get in accord "there will be, after all, no use of the Spa meeting." "Pertinax" in the Echo de Paris says that there is no telling now when the Spa conference can meet, and that the best thing to do is to forget it.

SAYS EBERT WON'T RUN.

BERLIN, June 11.—The Lokal-Anzeiger declares today it has learned from authoritative sources that President Ebert will not present himself again as a candidate for the Presidency.

The newspaper says his decision is the outcome of personal objections raised against him within his own party ranks, which he resents because his critics overlooked the fact that the President of the Republic is required to serve the State and not party interests.

Close collaboration between the Majority Socialists and Independent Socialists in the Government of Germany is considered the only course open to the former party by Philipp Scheidemann, one of its leaders, according to newspapers here. He rejects the idea of a coalition with the German People's Party.

Dr. W. S. Solf, former Minister of Colonies and recently named German Ambassador at Tokio, has departed for Japan. In an interview before embarking he expressed the hope he might be able to establish useful relations with Japan, with which country, now that the Shantung question is eliminated, Germany has no conflicting interests. He pointed out that, on the contrary, they have many concerns in common.

SINN FEIN GAINS GROW.

Elected 525 Out of 699 County Councilmen as Distinct Party.

DUBLIN, June 11.—The completed returns in the County Council elections show a Sinn Fein victory greater than was expected. This was owing to a compact between the Sinn Fein and Labor not to oppose each other in Leinster, Munster and Connaught, while in Ulster there was a similar compact between the Nationalists and Sinn Feiners to make common cause against the Carsonites.

Out of 699 seats, the Sinn Fein as a distinct party won 525, while the combined forces of the Sinn Fein, Labor and Nationalists captured 590 seats.

ANOTHER CONSTABLE SLAIN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, June 11.—Another Irish constable was murdered last night, making the fifty-second member of Irish Constabulary murdered since Jan. 1.

Constable Carroll was about to enter a hotel in Limerick in the busy quarter of the city when he was assailed by four men, who fired several shots, killing him.

LONDON, Saturday, June 12.—The Cabinet discussed the Irish questions yesterday and received reports from Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland. According to The Daily Mail, the Chief Secretary advised the Cabinet that measure taken are proving successful and said he hoped shortly to arrest some of the principal terrorist leaders in Ireland.

Curtiss to Discontinue Making Airplanes; Result of Congress' Failure to Stop Dumping

The Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corporation, claiming three-fourths of the output of the entire American aircraft industry, announced yesterday that it had abandoned practically all plans for the manufacture of commercial airplanes in this country. Before the first of next month the manufacture of planes, aerial motors and accessories at the large plant in Buffalo will be stopped and the factory will be used for other lines of industry.

"This step is taken," according to a statement authorized by C. M. Keys, Vice President of the corporation and Chairman of its Finance Committee, "as the direct result of the failure of Congress to protect the airplane market of the United States against the invasion of British airplanes, bought by a syndicate from the British Government at 1 per cent. of their cost, for export to this country, and now about to be dumped into this market.

"It is sincerely hoped," continued Mr. Keys, "that no emergency will arise which will require our Government to equip its military or naval forces with airplanes, even though on a small scale. There will be in this country no industry capable of immediate or rapid expansion into an efficient and productive industry.

"The steps which we have found it necessary to take to meet the competition of salvaged machines dumped into this market do not mean that the Curtiss company is going out of the airplane business. We do not believe that many of these dumped machines will be sold in the United States, that any profit worth while will be made in handling them, nor that they will give satisfaction as commercial machines. Their presence in the market, however, has made it impossible to build and sell up-to-date commercial types of airplanes, for there never was a time since the signing of the armistice when the American manufacturers were not able to more than supply the demand. The steps mean that the company is going out of the business of trying to compete on a commercial basis with war machines sold on a salvaged basis.

"We are keeping in operation ample facilities at Garden City to take care of all the demands of our distributors and to protect them on all of their commitments and to furnish replacements and spare parts for the large number of Curtiss machines now in use. We propose during this period to protect as well as we can both the American industry and the interests of our stockholders, and we fully expect that when this era of exploitation of war surpluses is over the American industry will be found to be still in existence and to be sound."

At the close of the war the Curtiss corporation had seven plants in operation, but these have been closed, one by one. The company has been one of the most energetic of the American firms to push the airplane commercially. While the United States was in the war the Curtiss company furnished several thousand airplanes to the Government.

BRITISH LABOR MEN PAINT RUSSIA DARK

BRING LENIN CALL TO REBEL

LONDON, June 11.—The first report of the British labor delegates, who have just returned from an investigation of conditions in Soviet Russia, was made public this evening.

The delegates declare themselves deeply impressed with the distress and disorganization which they found in Russia, the dejection of the people and the extent of the Government's interference with individual liberty. The report is said to be unanimous.

The report describes the blockade as injurious to the world and disastrous to Russia, and makes reference to the epidemic of diseases to which the absence of soap and medical supplies has given full sway, although great efforts have been made toward sanitation. Denouncing the Polish war, the report says:

"The appeal for creative work is being once more set aside in favor of an appeal to military enthusiasts, while the war conditions provide new pretexts for restricting individual liberty and preventing freedom of discussion."

The report says the rallies all parties to the defense of the country, emphasizes the breakdown in manufactures through lack of raw material and advocates the immediate recognition of Russia.

The report was brought to England by Benjamin Turner and Tom Shaw, members of the British labor delegation which visited Russia for presentation to the Labor Congress at Scarborough.

They brought also a letter from Nikolai Lenin, the Bolshevist Premier, exhorting the workers to revolution in England, which has created a sensation.

Lenin criticises the surprise expressed by the delegation at the "red terror," the suppression of freedom of the press and free assembly, and declares that the red terror is the defense of the working-men against exploiters, and that freedom of the press and assembly in a bourgeois democracy means freedom to plot against the workingmen. In turn Lenin expresses surprise that the viewpoint of part of the delegation coincides with the bourgeoisie.

BOLSHEVIKI BEATEN IN BERESINA BATTLE

WARSAW, June 11 (Associated Press).—The great battle along the River Beresina, which began on May 14, was crowned yesterday with a great success for the Poles, according to the Polish official communiqué today.

The Bolsheviki, says the statement, had concentrated nine divisions of infantry in this sector and tried to take the initiative by throwing all their forces into the attack.

Bitter fighting resulted, various positions changing hands frequently. The enemy, however, was definitely defeated on June 8, the communiqué states, and the next day the Poles attacked and drove the bulk of the hostile forces beyond the Beresina, taking 600 prisoners and capturing numerous machine guns.

In the Gorval region, at the junction of the Beresina and the Dniester, Polish detachments made a daring dash and destroyed fifty boats the Bolsheviki had prepared for the crossing of the river.

North of Kiev, adds the statement, the Soviet forces are developing serious activities in the vicinity of Tchernobil, near the junction of the Pripet and the Dnieper.

LONDON, June 11.—Bolshevist forces fighting north and south of Kiev have again advanced, according to a wireless message from Moscow, quoting an official statement issued there yesterday. The text of the statement follows:

"In the Kiev region, on the right bank of the Dnieper River, we continue to drive back the retreating enemy. On the left (east) bank of the Dnieper, near Daritsa station, we have flung the enemy back to the right bank.

"Enemy forces which had crossed the river ten miles north of Ratchisa, north of Kiev, have been driven back to the right bank of the Dnieper. On the Pripet River sector, as a result of fierce fighting, we have broken the enemy's resistance and occupied Tchernobil Village, capturing prisoners, cannon and machine guns. In the region of Skvira fighting continues."

MRS. CATT RE-ELECTED.

GENEVA, June 11 (Associated Press).—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt was unanimously re-elected President of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance at this morning's session of its congress here.

She has agreed to accept the office, it was announced, despite her declaration in a speech yesterday that she felt compelled to retire.

There was enthusiasm over Mrs. Catt's acceptance of her re-election, and during the afternoon session there were smiling faces everywhere in the hall.

The Woman's Charter was taken up again and two more clauses were accepted with slight changes, bringing the total to eleven. The two remaining clauses will be discussed immediately. One of them has to do with the question of State support and also the status of illegitimate children.

SCHEIDEMANN FEARS GERMAN CIVIL WAR

TALK OF COALITION CABINET

By LEONARD SPRAY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, June 11.—All wise men of all parties are assembled in Berlin, but they have not yet succeeded in solving Germany's political jigsaw puzzle. "We've got it," they say, and then they make the irritating discovery that the one little piece necessary to complete the picture is missing.

The missing piece of the political puzzle is, of course, a majority, and Germany's new Constitution provides that a Government is not a Government until a parliamentary majority has given it a vote of confidence, and so the search goes on.

So far the most practical suggestion made is that of Dr. Giesberts, the Minister of Posts, namely, that of a combination of Majority Socialists, Democrats, Centre and People's Party to carry on until "the German people can have another chance of declaring their clear judgment as to the political future."

All present omens seem to indicate that, whatever combination may be formed now, another general election must be held at no distant date, if that is not forestalled—so full of perils is the position—by the attempt of one or the other of the extremes to seek a solution by mass constitutional means.

Warning of this danger comes now from Philipp Scheidemann, Premier of the first Revolutionary Government, and one of the coolest of political observers. His warning has all the more emphasis from the fact that it was delivered secretly and not intended to come into publicity. It somehow went to be deported to the South. Only those could remain who embraced the faith of Islam. At once the tragedy began. The men were collected together and made to march out of the town, leaving their wives and children. The women packed in carts and driven behind their men. Some of them took their children with them, but others abandoned them, as they knew forever, placing them among Greek families who promised, out of mercy, to adopt them.

Scheidemann holds the post of Burgomaster at Cassel and was reported to have interrupted a discussion of the governing body of that city with the remark: "Don't excite yourselves any more, because within two months we shall have the revolution." Challenged as to the authenticity of this story Scheidemann denies having used these words, but he offers the following hardly reassuring version:

"In a confidential session of the City Council the political situation was discussed. As opposed to the absolutely unjustifiable optimistic expression of a Nationalist Deputy, I considered it right to express the idea that in a short time we might again have civil war."

Meantime the triumphant People's Party, headed by the multi-millionaire, Hugo Stinnes, is advocating a sort of business Government. This morning the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, Stinnes's latest purchase, came under his absolute control, and signified it by opening a propaganda campaign with this aim:

"The position of the People's Party, it declares, is that the question who shall guide the destiny of the German people must not be decided on the basis of mere Parliamentary combinations. The posts in the new Government should be filled, not necessarily by members of Parliament, but by the most able personalities in political and industrial life, for instance, a diplomat as Foreign Minister, a military officer as Minister of Defense, a business man for the Treasury."

So far, however, the Majority Socialists, whose co-operation as still the largest party, is essential as any coalition, has only responded to the advances of the People's Party. Vorwärts, the organ of the Majority Socialists, in fact, replies with a sensational attack upon Stinnes as "a war profiteer" and mentions his ownership of sixty-four newspapers as "a public danger."

GIOLITTI EXPECTED TO FORM CABINET

ROME, June 11.—The newspapers announce today that former Premier Giolitti has been requested to form a Cabinet to succeed that of Francesco Nitti, which resigned June 9.

The Messaggero says it is informed that Signor Giolitti has accepted the task.

Francesco Nitti, Premier in the Cabinet which resigned June 9, has obtained a passport to travel in European countries, says the Giornale d'Italia today. It is believed, however, that he is planning to go also to America for a rest, the newspaper adds.

ROME, June 11.—It is hoped that the ministerial crisis may be composed within the next week unless the politician intrusted by the sovereign with forming a Cabinet encounters strong opposition.

Every one is wondering what the Catholics will decide to do—participate in the Government or merely support it. Conservatives interested say that if they are guaranteed that the authority of the State will be respected, that the Adriatic question will be solved in such a way as will give Italy safe boundaries, that the country will be set on its way to economic and financial reconstruction, we won't deny our vote to the new Ministry, even if presided over by Giolitti."

They add that in this hour in which the country's future is at stake they won't make a question of being offered a portfolio.

ARMENIA FACES BUTCHERS UNARMED

TURKS VOW EXTERMINATION

"The West May Make Armenia Free," They Say; "We Will Make It a Desert."

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

SMYRNA, June 5.—To the Christian peoples of the West Armenia cries desperately for help. During my travels in the Orient I have heard the full story of the Armenian tragedy, and one narrative, typical of all the others, stands out in my mind with vivid horror.

It was on a ship that came through the Sea of Marmora to the Gulf of Smyrna that an Armenian woman told me of her life at Samsoun under Turkish rule and showed me photographs of her people, taken by German soldiers, as they lay dead after their massacre. All she told me was but a personal narrative of a more gruesome history recounted to me in French in a dark room in a back street in Constantinople by an Armenian missionary, who, having described the torturers of long caravans of women and children deported from their homes by the Turks and made to march across mountains until most of them were dead, pulled his brown beard and said:

"Unless England acts quickly, or America, or any of the great Powers, my people will be slaughtered in greater numbers. Their danger is greater now than ever before."

The woman's photographs of piled skulls and grinning dead on the roadside, and of bodies stripped of all clothing, heaped in a huddled mass of human corruption, were pictures of events which I heard in detail from another Armenian who spread out a map of Asia Minor and pointed to the country around Aleppo north of where the French are in difficulties with the Arabs and Turks of Syria.

100,000 Armenians in Deadly Peril.

He gave me the names of the villages in which crowds of Armenians, 100,000 altogether, were concentrated for safety's sake after their exodus from Mesopotamia.

"I have just had desperate news of those people," he said. "Unless new forces are sent to support them it is certain they will be butchered by the Arabs and Turks. The French colored troops at their present strength are no longer able to protect them. The massacre at Marash, where the Senegalese repelled, owing to their insufficient numbers, a new onslaught on a greater scale unless there is instant rescue. It is to England and France, and to America if she will hear us, that Armenia cries for help. Help now, before there is a tragedy of blood more terrible than in the past."

The man's voice trembled with dreadful anxiety. He is a man of culture, like many Armenians, speaking many languages, learned in the history of his own race, which had a great history as the bridgehead of the Christian world in the earlier days and afterward, when the minister power of the Turk came westward through Asia and overthrew the Christian Empire of the East.

This leader of a people under menace of extermination—for it is that—took my hand and pressed it on his heart and said:

"I beseech you to tell England how urgent is our need of protection. Surely the great heart of England will not let our people die."

There is little I can write which will tell England more than has been told; yet I fancy it could put into writing the plain tale of that woman of Armenia who was on the same ship with me along the Asiatic shore there would be a shiver of horror which might reach some one who had power to act.

She told me how at Samsoun the Armenians were first warned of their fate by placards posted on their walls one night, announcing that all Armenian men, and women were to be deported to the South. Only those could remain who embraced the faith of Islam. At once the tragedy began. The men were collected together and made to march out of the town, leaving their wives and children. The women packed in carts and driven behind their men. Some of them took their children with them, but others abandoned them, as they knew forever, placing them among Greek families who promised, out of mercy, to adopt them.

Preferred Martyrdom to Apostacy.

Only a few men and women yielded to the temptation of saving their lives by renouncing their own faith. The others chose the martyrdom that was certain. It began outside the town of Samsoun, and for some of the women lasted for three months, when only twenty out of eighty in one party were still alive.

For a little while they traveled behind their men in jolting carts, weeping for the children they had left. Then the men disappeared. Other parties following saw the bodies of their husbands and brothers hanging on wayside trees or lying with throats cut in ditches.

Presently the women were made to walk because the drivers of the carts would go no further. They walked over mountain passes in the glare of the sun, parched with thirst. Their shoes were torn to shreds and they walked with their feet wrapped in rags torn from their petticoats. They camped at night without shelter, and mobs of Kurds came down demanding their rings, trinkets and money under threat of massacre. So they had to buy off their lives day after day until they had nothing left. Even then they were stripped from them, and many were left naked.

The younger women were carried off by the brigands, and their screams were heartrending to their mothers and sisters. But the Turkish soldiers who were their guards did not lift a hand to ease them. All the way there passed babies still alive at the breasts of their dead mothers, and small children dying on the roadsides beside others already dead. Day by day women fell, unable to go further, although the Turks tried to flog them up, and they died of exhaustion.

The Turks did not kill the women as they had slaughtered the men; they only drove them until they died. From hundreds of villages in Asia Minor the Armenians were deported like that and tortured to death like that. It was a deliberate policy of extermination. Said one Turkish official: "We do not mind if the Western powers proclaim a free Armenia; we will make it a desert without people. It will be free for us."

While I was in Constantinople a number of Turkish officers were tried by court-martial for cruelties inflicted upon deported Armenians and condemned to death; but, as they are now with Mustapha Kemal in Anatolia, organizing a new campaign of murder, the sentence was without effect.

England's Failure to Send Arms.

Meanwhile the Armenians are surrounded by their enemies and, except in the mountains, are without means of self-defense. In the plains, where many are gathered, they are like sheep for the slaughterers, without the arms or ammunition which we promised and failed to send them.

"Vous avez chauffé le jeu," said the Armenian woman who told me the story of the exodus from Samsoun; "mais vous nous delivrez aux flammes."

"You have fanned the fire, but deliver us to the flames."

It is true, I think, that we have stirred up the fanaticism of the Turk in Anatolia and Thrace without enforcing our actions by the only method that impresses him—occupation by strong forces. In Constantinople the Turk is awed because of the fleet outside and the soldiers in the city, but in Asia Minor he is not impressed by landing parties which, as at Samsoun, parade along the quay and then re-embark and do not return.

"See how your friends abandon you!" laugh the Turks to the Armenians.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Prices of commodities are slowly falling in Chicago. Sugar sold for 19 cents a pound retail, and new potatoes for $1.15 a peck in most retail stores today, according to market reports received by District Attorney Clyne.

Evidence before the Federal Grand Jury indicated that prices of other vegetables and clothing also were dropping.

Indictment will be asked for several produce and sugar dealers, since investigators have reported that storage warehouses are stocking up heavily with eggs, butter and other foodstuffs.

ATTACKS ON TIGER ECHO IN TANGIERS

Cry of French Sacrifices in Near East May Mean Demand for That City.

Question of Final Disposition Looms Up as the Next Diplomatic Controversy.

PARIS, June 11.—The campaign against the alleged shortcomings of Clemenceau is showing great gains. Last week Tardieu demolished the story that had been gaining currency for weeks that the former Government had not done what it might to bring about the splitting up of Germany. Now the precarious situation in the Near East has brought forth a flood of attacks upon Clemenceau for "sacrificing France's interests" to Lloyd George, especially in the region of Mosul.

The motives of this campaign are not hard to find. The old Tiger made many enemies and their malice is none the less great because they did not dare to attack him while he was in power. Then too, Briand, whose ministerial ambitions were recently scored by Millerand in a scathing phrase, is doing his utmost to rehabilitate himself in public opinion. Millerand himself is not above pointing out that some of the difficulties with which he is coping are a heritage from his predecessor. It is also probable that the French wish to bring pressure upon Great Britain in emphasizing the fact that Clemenceau let England have too much her own way in the Near East.

The Tiger was opposed during war to the dispersion of French—or, indeed, allied—effort in other fields than the all important front of France. Shortly before the armistice he made haste to check ambitious plans that were being entertained for the action of the Army of the Orient and after the armistice and during the Peace Conference he was consistent in feeling that war weary France had better use for her energy and money than engaging in costly adventures in Asia Minor. He is reported to have said on one occasion that it was not worth while endangering Franco-English relations for the sake of "parochial squabbles" about obscure Levantine localities.

The recent course of Franco-British diplomacy, however, has made the French feel that it might do no harm to use Clemenceau's alleged generosity to Great Britain as a lever. In the Paris Midi today there is a suggestion by Philip Millet, whose articles pass for being often inspired, to the effect that if Great Britain having got the best of the bargain in the Levant, ought to feel disposed to give France compensation elsewhere."

Unless signs are fallacious, this is the first run of a campaign that may interest Franco-British opinion before long. The point at stake is the disposition of Tangiers, which in theory is still under international control, but which in practice is being administered by France. It has been whispered that the British have been getting somewhat restive under the delay to settle the state of Tangiers and it is quite reasonable to suppose that the French insistence on sacrifices under the Clemenceau régime is by way of preparation for a coming diplomatic conflict."

HERRERO ARRESTED AT COURT HEARING

Now Admits He Has No Personal Knowledge That Carranza Shot Himself.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO, June 11.—General Herrero, who is charged with killing Carranza, has been arrested on order of the judge on account of the large number of contradictions in his testimony. When confronted by General Murguia, Herrero changed testimony in such shape that the judge ordered his immediate arrest.

MEXICO CITY, June 11 (Associated Press).—Admission by General Rodolfo Herrero, who has been charged with responsibility for President Carranza's death, that he did not have personal knowledge that Carranza committed suicide, but that he was told so by one of the President's officers, featured the hearing last night before the Federal Court investigating the Chief Executive's death. A clash occurred during the session between Herrero and General Francisco Murgui, former Minister of War, when the latter denied the statement that he had offered Herrero money. The court stopped the colloquy.

Herrero declared that the officer who gave him the information that Carranza had committed suicide was Ernesto Herrero, his cousin, who brought him the pistol with which it was alleged the President shot himself. Herrero admitted having professed loyalty to Carranza and to Obregon, afterwards ordered his forces to attack the President, but said this was done to obtain information regarding the strength of the Presidential escort.

He stated he had received orders indirectly from Obregon to take Carranza alive. The President's forces, however, learned of the intended attack and began firing to prevent his capture.

FINED FOR TAKING REBATE.

Murray Dennison Pays $500 in Case Over $50,000 Insurance Policy.

Murray Dennison, a merchant living at 800 Riverside Drive, was fined $500 in Special Sessions yesterday for accepting a rebate of $635 from a premium of $2,000, which represented his first payment on a $50,000 life insurance policy issued to him.

J. L. V. Wood, head of the Complaint Bureau of the Insurance Department, told the court that an agent, Solomon Grossner of 528 West 111th Street, and solicited Dennison to apply for insurance and had paid the rebate by check to Dennison after agreeing upon these terms.

CLOTH NOT APPAREL; WOOLEN CASE FAILS

LAW LIMITED BY AMENDMENT

Company Accused of Increasing Prices 300 Per Cent. and Paying Enormous Salaries.

Federal Judge Mack yesterday directed the dismissal of the indictment against the American Woolen Company of New York and Massachusetts and William M. Wood, President of the company, charged with profiteering under the Lever act. The indictment had been returned on figures showing that in 1919 Mr. Wood had received $515,483.96 in commissions charged to manufacturing and selling expenses and that he also had received "enormous salaries" from both companies. The company was charged with having increased prices more than 300 per cent.

The order for dismissal was based on an amendment to the Lever act which included "wearing apparel" among the things which came under the ban against profiteering. The court held that if this amendment had not been made the indictment might have been sound, but by specifically naming "wearing apparel" the amendment limited profiteering to clothes and excluded cloth.

It later was announced that the Government would appeal.

Judge Mack said the substantial question involved was whether a piece of cloth was a necessary within Section 4 of the Lever act, on which the indictment was based, or whether it was wearing apparel as defined in the amendment made on Oct. 22, 1919.

After stating that Section 4 must be read in connection with Section 1, he said the prohibition applied only to those necessaries defined as such in Section 1. Then the opinion reads:

"'Wearing apparel is a necessary. If Section 4 had forbidden unreasonable rates as to any necessaries, wearing apparel, clearly a necessary in the general sense of the word, would have been embraced therein, even before the amendment of 1919. The amendment, therefore, would have been unnecessary. Congress did not so consider it and, therefore, by the amendment of 1919 expressly included it in the class of necessaries that were to become subject to the prohibition of the act.

"Either the word necessaries, as used in Section 4, is free from any limitation by reason of the definition in Section 1, in which case, even before the amendment of 1919 it would have included wearing apparel, or it is to be limited to those articles expressly stated in Section 1 as hereafter in this act called necessaries. It is practically conceded, and if it were not conceded it must be held, especially in view of the amendment, that any necessaries as used in Section 4 does not include all necessaries."

Coming to the question of cloth as differentiated from clothing, the opinion says:

SILK MEN REVEAL $100,000 SWINDLE

TRADE WARNING ISSUED

Shipments to Toronto Ordered and Name of Reputable Firm Used, but Fake Address Given.

A commercial swindling scheme said to involve more than $100,000 by fake orders placed with New York merchants was under investigation yesterday by the police here and at Toronto, Canada. The names of all the firms approached and the amounts of the losses of some of them are not yet known, but one firm, Edmund Wright-Ginsberg Company, commission merchants at 288 Fourth Avenue, notified all commercial organizations of an attempt to get $20,000 worth of silks from them, which failed.

The Century Silk Mills Company, at 441 Fourth Avenue, shipped silks on one order, but a representative of the firm at Toronto became suspicious and held up delivery. Menke, Kaufman & Co., 225 Fourth Avenue, also got one of the orders. Whether this firm suffered any loss could not be learned. V. C. Lambert, a member of the firm, said the details of the transaction were known only to their credit man, who could not be reached last night.

In each instance, so far reported, silk merchants were approached by a man who represented himself to be a buyer for the Ladies' Wear, Limited, Toronto, a reputable concern well known to the trade. He had a card bearing the name of this firm, but at a different address. The merchants here believe the man is one of an international gang of swindlers, who planned to make a big haul from New Yorkers before suspicion interfered with operations.

"The scheme was arranged to have the goods shipped at once to Toronto and there to be diverted from the legitimate concern in whose name they were ordered, so that the goods could be disposed of and realized upon by the thieves," said Edmund Wright. "The card shown to us by the fake buyer, printed in business-like form, bore an address which we have since learned was two buildings away from the correct address of the Ladies' Wear, Limited.

"This buyer complained of the great difference in the exchange rate between Canada and the United States, which he said made it so costly to buy here and meet competition, and he pleaded for more advantageous terms to meet the rate of exchange. This discussion concerning the exchange rate was simply to impress us with his apparent business sagacity. However, his order was a large one, and purported to be for a responsible firm, and so we met his request by a slight allowance to reduce the exchange differences.

"Of the $20,000 silks, the buyer wanted about $9,000 to go at once. We told him that we would verify the order with the Toronto firm, to which he responded 'all right.' Then he disappeared. We wrote to Toronto and received the reply that the firm had no buyer or representative in the United States, and asked us to notify the police.

A member of the Century Silk Mills Company said their shipment had been recovered at Toronto, but had not yet been returned. Their representative at Toronto had had the silks held by the express company.

MAY AFFECT GOULD DIVORCE

Decision in Kaiser Case Regarded as Having Bearing on Her Suit.

A decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday holding that when Mrs. Emanuel M. Kaiser, wife of a New York lawyer, divorced her husband in Pennsylvania and remarried there she was still the legal wife of Mr. Kaiser is expected to have an important bearing on the recent suit of Edith Kelly Gould filed here for a divorce from Frank J. Gould in which Mrs. Gould contends that her husband's divorce in Paris is not valid here because he was a resident of New York at the time and the Paris courts had no jurisdiction.

The only point of difference between the two cases is that while the failure of Mrs. Kaiser to serve her husband in Pennsylvania is the fatal defect in the Gould case the papers were thrust into a taxicab in which Mrs. Gould was riding in Paris. Mrs. Gould contends that she had no idea she was being served with divorce papers and knew nothing about the suit until after she had been divorced.

CITY SENDS CENSUS EXPERT TO CAPITAL

TO CHECK FEDERAL COUNT

If Police Enumeration Next Week Shows Shortage New Census Will Be Asked.

Dr. Frank Monaghan, Acting Commissioner of Health, yesterday directed Dr. William J. Guilfoy, Registrar of Statistics of the Health Department, to go to Washington on Monday to begin the study of the Federal census figures for the purpose of ascertaining how much foundation there is for the complaint that thousands of persons were not counted in New York City and that the census of Manhattan in particular fell short by a wide margin of showing the population residing there.

Dr. Guilfoy, who has been in charge of the Health Department Census Bureau for years and has studied the indications of the growth of population annually for the Health Department records, is of the opinion that the Manhattan population was not fully counted and that a 100 per cent. enumeration of the people of Manhattan would show a gain during the ten year period instead of a loss of 47,430, as indicated by the Federal census.

Former State Senator Samuel J. Foley, who was the Supervisor of the Census in Manhattan, said yesterday that he did not contend that the Manhattan census figures were complete, but that the work was as well done as was possible, considering the difficulties in counting the people of Manhattan and the inadequate measures taken for the census here. He said also that he had written a letter to the Census Bureau at Washington, criticising the provision which had been made there for taking the census of Manhattan.

Acting Health Commissioner Monaghan said yesterday that he had written a letter to the Census Bureau, and that Mayor Hylan had also written one, explaining the errand of Dr. Guilfoy, and asking the co-operation of the Federal Census Bureau.

"Dr. Guilfoy is the leading expert, in my opinion," said Dr. Monaghan, "and the population of this city, and the future course of the Committee on Census appointed by Mayor Hylan will depend on what he finds. I expect that we will take blocks and sections here and there throughout the city, obtaining the Federal figures for them, and then checking them up by a count made by the police. This check-up of the Federal census by the police will probably begin next week. If it shows any great inaccuracies, of course, a complete recount should take place."

'SPORTING' AGENTS RAID TWO SALOONS

Modern detective methods are being used by Prohibition Enforcement agents to obtain evidence against saloonkeepers engaged in illicit sale of liquors here. On Thursday night Agents Heaton and Dolan of the staff of James Shevlin, Supervising Prohibition Enforcement Agent for this district, entered the Criterion cafe at 380 East 149th Street and after saying they were prize fight promoters from San Francisco, succeeded in obtaining drinks, they allege, from Jacob Ammond, the bartender. The Criterion, according to the enforcement officers, was owned by "Billy" Gibson, boxing promoter and manager of Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion.

The two enforcement officers arrested the bartender and Gustave Beiswenger, alleged manager of the place. Gibson, they said, was not in the cafe at the time. They also seized three gallons of wine, three quarts of champagne and eight gallons of whisky, they said.

The two agents later went to the saloon conducted by Kelly Brothers, at Columbus Avenue and 100th Street, where they posed as race horse trainers. Joseph Gaughlin, the bartender, sold them two drinks of whisky, they said. They arrested him and confiscated five quarts of whisky found in the saloon. Gaughlin was held in $250 bail when arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Hitchcock.

NEIGHBOR DAY OPENS TODAY

Thirty Thousand School Children to March in Processions.

The "Three Days for Democracy" celebration under the auspices of various community and religious organizations opens today with the observance of "Neighbors' Day" in the five boroughs of New York.

"The 'Hello Neighbor' slogan adopted as the ticket of admission to Saturday's affairs," reads the advance statement of the Neighbors' Day Committee, "permeates all features of the programs adopted in the five boroughs, and the neighbors include everybody from baby to grandfather and cater to every taste and inclination."

Thirty thousand school children are scheduled to participate in parades in all boroughs. There will be folk dancing by Bohemian, Moravian, Italian and other national groups in addition to flag drills, community singing, street and block parties and exercises in various neighborhood houses as well as community parades of local organizations, the most elaborate of which will be the Bronx Borough parade, in which 10,000 are expected to march.

A letter has been sent to the clergy of all Christian churches and to rabbis of all synagogues requesting sermons tomorrow on the observance of Neighbors' Day as demanding a greater interest in community affairs and citizenship. The letter is signed by Charles S. Burch, Bishop of the Episcopal Church; William Pierson Merrill, Brick Presbyterian Church; Charles H. Jefferson, Broadway Tabernacle; James D. Ramensnyder, St. James Lutheran Church; Malcolm J. MacLeod, Dutch Reformed Church; Patrick J. Hayes, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church; Stephen S. Wise, Free Synagogue, and Aaron F. Atterbury, of the Neighbors' Day Committee for the Churches.

In the Bronx ten thousand men, women and children are expected to march in a demonstration and parade in the afternoon on Grand Concourse from 163d Street to Kingsbridge Road. Mayor Hylan will review the parade which starts at 2 o'clock.

Brooklyn will have celebrations engineered and carried out by its own local committees. The Washington Square Association will dedicate its memorial flag pole to soldiers and sailors of the district killed in the war, with addresses by Albert R. Shattuck, President of the association; Francis D. Gallatin, Park Commissioner, and Dr. Howard Duffield.

Neighbors' Day exercises will be held in Harlem on the law net Mount Morris Park in the afternoon.

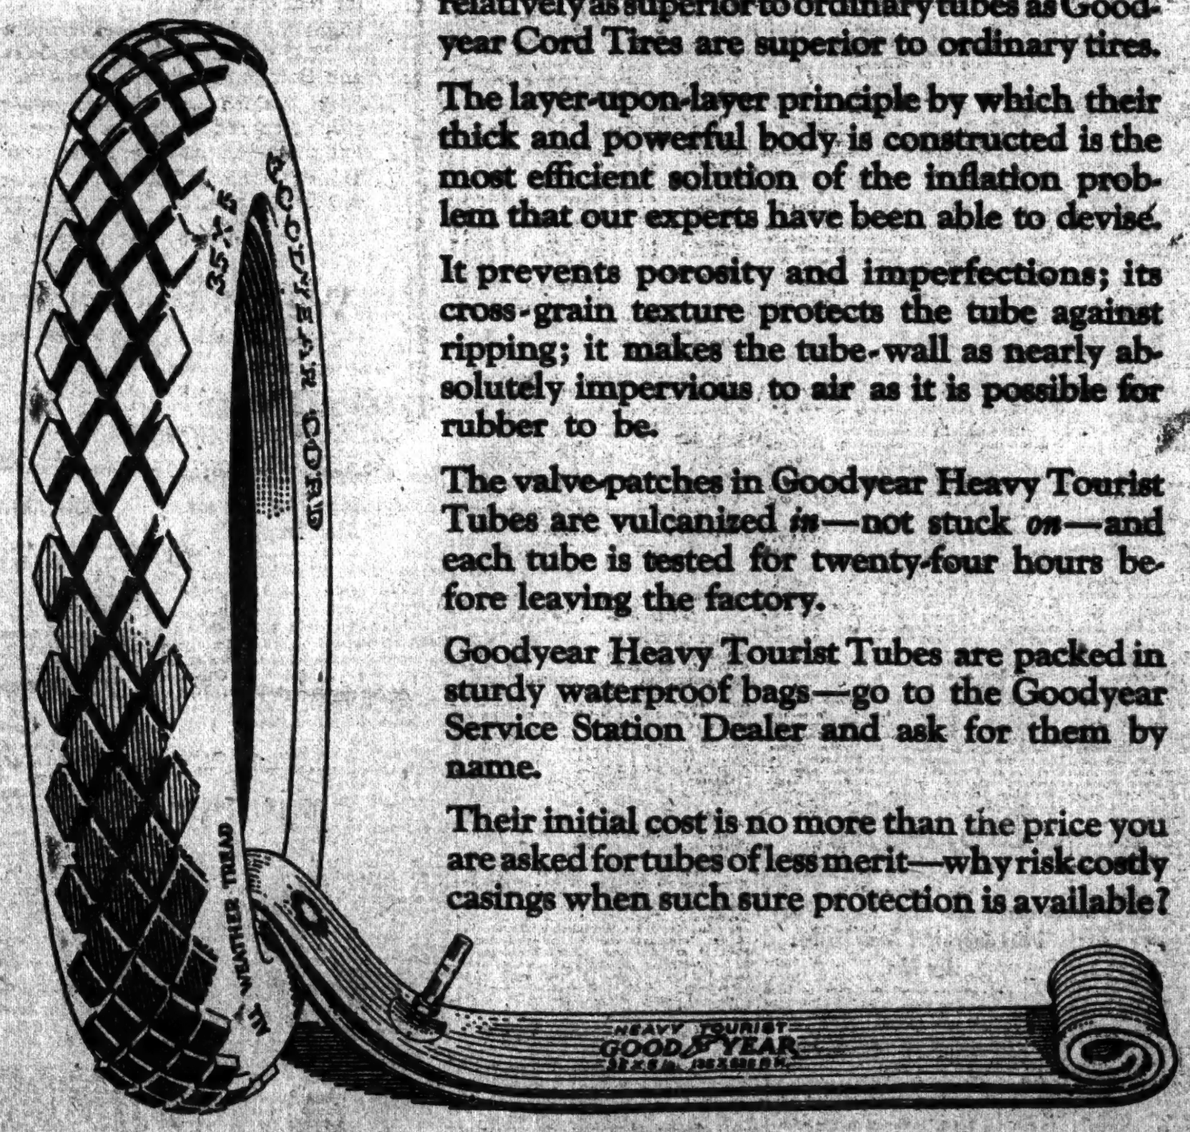
A Tube as Good as the Goodyear Cord Tire



We build Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes to be relatively as superior to ordinary tubes as Goodyear Cord Tires are superior to ordinary tires.

The layer-upon-layer principle by which their thick and powerful body is constructed is the most efficient solution of the inflation problem that our experts have been able to devise.

It prevents porosity and imperfections; its cross-grain texture protects the tube against ripping; it makes the tube-wall as nearly absolutely impervious to air as it is possible for rubber to be.

The valve-patches in Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are vulcanized in—not stuck on—and each tube is tested for twenty-four hours before leaving the factory.

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are packed in sturdy waterproof bags—go to the Goodyear Service Station Dealer and ask for them by name.

Their initial cost is no more than the price you are asked for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available?

Slim Sallee had sumpthin' on his hip up at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. Umpire Harrison didn't know what it was; Umpire McCormack didn't know what it was; Christy Mathewson didn't know what it was; Johnny Evers didn't know what it was; and Sallee wouldn't tell what it was. But whatever it was, it made a lot of fans jealous who would vote for even a painter's platform if it had a wet plank in it. Whether it was a violation of the Eighteenth Amendment or had anything even remotely to do with the Volstead Act will never be known, but Slim's actions were a violation of that particular baseball rule which deals with the putting of foreign substances on the ball and Umpire Harrison chased him to the cooling influences of the showers after two were out in the eighth inning. The banishment of Slim had little influence on the fourth game of the series between the Giants and the world's champion Reds, for at that time the New Yorks were cavorting along in front and they didn't really need the additional run they scored after Slim eased himself from the premises. The final count was New York 6, Cincinnati, 2, the Giants thus winning three of the four matinees played with Pat Moran's pupils.

Walter Ruether having succeeded in checking the wild gambols of the Giants on Thursday, Pat Moran decided to left-hand the New Yorkers some more yesterday. Being slim, Sallee doesn't mind the heat so much as some of his more corpulent confrères on Garry Herrmann's payroll. Being a southpaw of parts—not so many parts but a lot of angles—Moran figured Slim might be able to emulate Mr. Ruether. So Slim got the assignment whether he wanted it or not. For a time it seemed as if Sal might muss up the Polo Grounders quite a little. He held them hitless for three innings, and the run which the Reds presented him with in the third came to felt as oppressive as the heat. But Bancroft's single and King's double came close enough together in the Giant's half of the fourth inning to tie the score and revive the rapidly wilting hopes, if not the collars, of the 10,000 décolleté fans.

Giants Romp Into Lead.

The Reds took the lead in the fifth only to lose it again in the last half of the same canto, when the Giants unleashed a series of three hits, a double, a single and a triple, in that order, which were cashed in for two runs. Thereafter Fred Toney held the Ohioans in the hollow of his curve ball, so to speak.

Slim Sallee has been pitching baseballs at batters' bats for quite a spell. He has learned a lot of tricks about port-siding that are mysteries to younger artists. It is probable that the ball was peregrining like everything else under the sun, and it is also probable, that Sallee began jamming his left hand into his hip pocket before every pitch just to dry his fork hand that he might get a better grip on the ball. Whatever the reason was the fact remains that he did it, and it got Matty's goat; caused Evers to become hotter than usual around the space reserved for his collar; gave the fans some new wet thoughts, and irritated Umpire Harrison.

In the seventh inning, when Slim was having more than usual trouble with the wayward ball and his motions toward his gun pocket, or whatever the pocket is used for, became more frequent and more aggravating, Umpire Harrison admonished him about it. Slim paid no heed, so Umpire Harrison scolded him about it. Still Slim heard nothing but the intermittent peals of thunder that told of a rain that never rained at the Polo Ground. Then Umpire Harrison told him to absent himself from the box score, and, naturally, Slim did. Slim didn't talk back much, so maybe he wanted to go to the showers.

Bancroft's Error Lets Run In.

The Reds burst forth like a rash or something in the third inning. See thumped a single to centre. Wingo filed to Burns. It was a long lift, and See attempted to go to third. Bancroft let the throw get away from him and See scurried home. The Giants evened the count in the fourth when Bancroft started with a single to left. Ross Young and Larry Doyle raised pops to Groh. Young's being foul, and Bancroft seemed doomed to wither on first. But King, who does all the hitting for Benny Kauff against left handers, doubled to right and Bancroft scored.

The Reds regained the lead in the fifth. Neale singled to left. See singled to centre, and Neale managed to reach third when Sicking dropped King's throw. See then stole second. Wingo bounced toward Toney and the ball caromed off his glove to Bancroft, who threw the batter out, but Neale scored. The Giants got two in the fifth. Kelly doubled to right. Snyder caught the Cincinnati infield asleep by bunting and beat the throw to first for a single, Kelly skipping to third. Toney walloped the ball into left field for three bases and Kelly and Snyder scored. In the seventh Kelly made his homer. Snyder followed with a two-bagger. Toney sacrificed him to third and he scored on Burns's single to right. In the eighth King's smash for a round trip completed the scoring. It would have been a hot game even if the day had been cooler.

SKEETERS DISPOSE OF SYRACUSE, 8-1

Bill Donovan's Skeeters continued their winning streak at the expense of the Syracuse Stars with another victory yesterday in Jersey City, scored 8 to 1, giving the home crew three games in a row, and enabling them to balance accounts for the three-ply defeat handed to Donovan's men in their previous clash at the Syracuse ball park. Pitcher Bill Grevell showed marked consistency in his work for Jersey City, in that he issued five passes, struck out five men and, until the ninth round, held the visitors to five safe hits. Donelson in the ninth managed to hang up an extra tingle by a bunt along the third-base line.

Grevell's good work should have been rewarded by a shut-out, the visitors' only run being chargeable to a bad muff of Witterstatter's easy fly in the first period. The error was made with two out and Donelson on second, the result of a free trip and a sacrifice. Harschar tried his skill on the pitching block for Syracuse and went along well for four rounds, but the Skeeters swarmed around his twisters in the fifth for five clean-cut drives, which, with a base on balls and an error by Shortstop Hence, contributed six marks to the Jersey City score board.

In the fourth inning, with another cluster of Syracuse runners on the bags and one out, a hot liner was pulled down by Bill Zitman, who ran over and touched second and then shot the ball over to first. However, as there had already been one man retired, Jersey City was robbed of the first chance this season to figure in what would have been a three-time killing.

Jersey City added to its batting record with eleven blows, Eddie Mooers setting the pace with a single, a triple and three runs.

Curves and Bingles

The umpires have quit wearing rubber collars. Recent happenings at the Polo Grounds have made the arbiters too hot in the immediate vicinity of the neck bands of their shirts. Safety first!

There may be some places that are hotter than the Polo Grounds was yesterday, but if there are they must use asbestos score cards.

Lee King says he doesn't expect to make any singles until he starts bunting the ball. He made a double and a home run yesterday in four trips to the plate. His homer was made off the first pitch Ray Fisher offered.

George Kelly got on every time he was up. He reached first safely in the third when Duncan dropped his fly. He doubled in the fifth and later scored. He knocked a home run in the seventh.

Pancho Snyder may not be an Adonis, but his footwork isn't as faulty as some folks may have thought. He beat out a bunt in the fifth and in the seventh he stretched only a slightly overgrown hit to right into a double by beating Crane's throw by a spike point.

Two balls had been called on Fred Toney before he tripled, scoring a brace of runners in the fifth. Being a pitcher Toney realized that Sallee had to groove the next one. He took a toe hold and swung as Sallee let go of the ball. Slim hit Toney's bat just north of the trade-mark.

Jake Daubert made a long bid for a hit in the eighth inning, but George Burns pulled one of his circus catches. Jake hit the ball to deep left centre on a line. Burns started running with the crack of the bat against the ball and just managed to reach it.

Several pitchers spent the afternoon warming up in the bull pen. They must have figured they might just as well warm up in the bull pen as on the bench.

YANKEES CLEAN UP ON DETROIT SERIES

ANOTHER HOMER BY MEUSEL

Californian Drives Ball Into Right-Field Bleachers in First Inning—Great Catch by Veach.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, June 11.—Rip Collins, the young Texas Ranger, turned in a pitching classic for the Yankees today at Navin Field and shut out the Tigers, 5 to 0. It gave the Yanks a clean sweep of the series, and tonight they move on to Cleveland to see if they can't snatch the league leadership away from Tris Speaker's club.

From that tense, dramatic moment in the first inning when big Bob Meusel cracked the ball on the beak and sent it on a dizzy journey to the right field bleachers, it was the Yankees' game. Dutch Leonard was primed for today's tilt, and Manager Hughey Jennings was back on the coaching lines to wake up his slumbering ball players. Meusel was the second batsman to face Leonard. Peck having hoisted a fly to Veach. The clouting native son whanged the ball a brutal jolt, and it fell among the steerage passengers in the open outfield stand.

That one homer was plenty of encouragement for Collins. He had a world of speed and plenty of bend on his curves. Rip's marksmanship was so good that he said he could throw the ball around a haystack and hit a sparrow. Ellison was the only one of the Bengals who could hit Collins. He got three of the Tigers' five hits.

Rip in Danger Once.

There was only one time when Rip was in danger. That was after Ellison doubled in the fifth. After his two-base slam to centre Pinelli pushed him to third with a sacrifice. Woodall then smashed a bounder at Collins which almost knocked Rip back to Texas. The Texan staggered under the blow, but promptly recovered the ball and hurled it to Hannah as Ellison was galloping in to the plate.

Hannah made a great play. He got the ball just as Ellison came sliding in with his spikes gleaming in the afternoon sun. Truck and Ellison came together like a couple of freight cars on a siding. Ellison capsized and so did Truck, but during the acrobatics Truck tagged the runner and held on to the ball.

The Yanks played fine ball behind Collins. They were sprightly on the bases and looked like split satin a yard wide. Their batting total for the day was nine hits including the homer and a double by Meusel and a three-bagger by Bodie, the San Francisco table d'hote hunter.

Collins not only pitched a gilt-edged game but he fielded his position like a rubber ball and he was as fleet as an antelope on the runways. He's a slinger from Slingville, Sling County, is Rip Collins and he doesn't care who knows it.

While the five runs were plenty for the Yankees, they would have had more if it hadn't been for the miraculous intervention of Veach in the fifth, when with two men aboard he bounced skyward as if off a spring board and plucked Peck's full grown smash with his naked hand. Hannah was doubled off second after this magical grab and a hungry Yank rally was starved into submission.

Peck, the first Yank to face Leonard, hoisted a high one to Veach. Bob Meusel shot a tremendous rap high into right field and the ball sailed into the bleachers for a home run. Pipp walked and stole second. Ruth waited patiently for a good one until the count on him was three balls and two strikes. Leonard spun one over on the inside of the plate and Umpire Chill called Babe out. To say that Ruth was highly displeased is scarcely mentioning his attitude. Pratt rocketed to Heilman for the third out.

Double Play Checks Tigers.

The Tigers got a brace of hits off Collins in the second, but they amounted to nothing. Veach singled to right and Heilman soaked a hot liner at Peck and Veach was doubled before he could return to first. Ellison singled to left, but Pinelli ended the session when Collins threw him out at first.

Pipp opened the fourth with a Texas leaguer over second, but he tried to make too much of a good thing when he attempted to stretch his way to second and was out. The Detroit outfield went back to the fences when Ruth came to the bat. Ruth took a healthy swing at one, but caught it on the tip of his bat and batted an easy one to Bush. Pratt was safe when Pinelli threw wide to first, but Del died stealing.

Great commotion in the fifth. Ping Bodie smashed a triple along the right field foul line but was held at third when Bush threw Lewis out at first. Hannah jammed a single to centre and Bodie registered. Rip Collins, with two strikes on him, laid down a bunt and beat Leonard's throw to first in an outburst of speed which astonished the natives. Rip is as fast as lightning going down hill.

Peck walloped a high drive to the furthest corner of the left field, and it looked as if it was going to bore a hole through the fence. Bobby Veach leaped as the ball was about to kiss the fence and grabbed it with his bare hand. Rheumatic snakes, what a catch! Hannah was naturally on his way home, as any wide-awake player would be; as no one but a soothsayer would think that Veach was going to commit grand larceny, Hannah tried to get back to second, but Veach's throw beat him by a wink and he was out. Pretty hot pastiming for a hot day.

More Yank prosperity in the sixth. Meusel banged a two-bagger to left. Pipp tried to sacrifice and Pinelli threw high. Wallie was safe when Ellison leaped off the bag. Ruth sent a high hopper to Ellison, who threw to the plate to get Meusel, but Bob slid under and was safe.

Pratt's sacrifice sent the travelers on their journey and Bodie poked a grounder at Young. Pep threw the ball to the plate, but Pipp slid under Woodall and the Yanks had another run. Duffy Lewis struck out. It wasn't compulsory that Duffy should do such a thing at such a time, but that's what he did. Woodall threw Hannah out at first and closed the incident for the time being.

In the eighth Rip Collins bounced one at Leonard, and Dutch threw so wildly to first that Rip went around to third like a mustang. After Young threw Peck out at first, Leonard unravelled a wild pitch and Collins scored.

Maybe This Party Wagered License to Wed on Giants

The Housewives' Association was long divorced from baseball and nearly divorced from the Ancient Brotherhood of Husbands because of cold suppers and such things. But baseball has been guilty of another misdemeanor. Its latest offense is causing the postponement, if not the calling off, of a wedding. It seems that a young bridegroom to be was a spectator at Thursday's game between the Giants and Reds. Earlier in the day he had visited the City Clerk's office and obtained a license to commit matrimony. Between the excitement of going to be married and being at the ball game he had to lose something. Having previously lost his heart and having lost his head when the Giants were losing the game, he lost the marriage license. Yesterday a somewhat agitated special policeman made anxious inquiries of attendants, club officials and others as to whether the precious document had been found.

GARDNER DEFEATED IN BRITISH FINAL

American Has Title Within Grasp, but Loses to Tolley on Thirty-seventh Hole.

3,000 SEE BATTLE royal

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, June 11 (Associated Press).—After having had the British amateur golf championship almost at his mercy, Robert A. Gardner of Chicago today went down to defeat when he lost to Cyril Tolley of the Oxford University team in the finals after a hard-fought, sensational match which was all square at the 36th hole and necessitated the playing of an extra hole.

The match was a battle royal from the start, but at the end of the first round Gardner was two up and bade fair to fulfill the predictions of experts that he would capture the championship. In the second round, however, Tolley forged ahead and was three up on his opponent with only four to play. Gardner fought doggedly and amidst intense excitement on the part of the spectators made it all square at the 36th hole, lost the next hole and won the one after.

Public interest in the match was at the highest pitch. This was the second time in the history of the championships that an American had reached the finals, not since Walter J. Travis beat Edward Blackwell for the championship in 1904 had a Yankee got so far as Gardner, despite repeated invasions from across the water.

Fully 3,000 persons watched the match. Walter Hagen and Jim Barnes, the American professionals, who yesterday defeated two English professionals in a golf match at Croydon, England, traveled all night to be present.

Tolley is only twenty-one years old and this was the first time he had reached a championship final. He is powerfully built, hits a very long ball and played throughout the series with the greatest care.

Gardner was very accurate with his long approach putts today, but failed sadly with some of the short ones. He led at the end of the first round, but the turning point came at the fifth and sixth holes of the second half, both of which he threw away on the green. He thereby lost the lead, and for a few holes seemed to lose his nerve. But when the American became three down with four to go, he played with renewed determination.

Having a temporary relapse in his putting, Tolley was brought back to double one and lost the home hole, where he was first in the rushes and then in a bunker. Gardner put his tee shot to the 37th on the green, nine yards to the left of the pin. Tolley, however, played a beauty only four yards short of the hole and got the putt after Gardner had laid his second a yard from the pin. Gardner thus had a par three, but Tolley won the hole in a birdie 2 and took the match.

Tolley won the first hole in the morning round but Gardner took the next three. Tolley won the fifth and the next was halved. This made Gardner 2 up. By holding long putts on the eighth and ninth the Oxford man evened the match at the turn. Gardner won the tenth and they halved the next. The American found a bunker going to the twelfth which he lost, and Tolley took the lead when he won on the next green. Gardner ran down a seven-yard putt on the fourteenth and they were all square. The fifteenth was halved but Tolley missed a putt on the sixteenth which went to Gardner, who also won the seventeenth. As the eighteenth was halved the American visitor was 2 up at the finish of the first half of the match.

In the afternoon round Gardner lost his lead early in the play, and the match was all square on the twenty-third hole. At this stage Tolley was outplaying the visitor and at the turn (twenty-seventh hole) Gardner was 2 down.

The first hole in the second half was halved. Gardner putted into the rough at the second and lost, leaving Tolley 1 down. The third hole was halved, Tolley putting finally after overrunning the green. Tolley took a hard half at the fourth and Gardner missed a four-foot putt at the fifth, where the match was squared. Gardner thus far had not played as steadily in the forenoon.

Tolley, after being in the rough, had a nice run up and Gardner missed a putt, giving Tolley the lead, which he kept by cleverly pitching over a stymie at the seventh and securing a half. Gardner was bunkered near the green at the eighth but made a fine recovery, snatching a half.

Gardner was near the wall going to the ninth and Tolley, playing perfectly, turned homeward 2 up. The next two holes were halved. Both competitors were in trouble at the twelfth, which also was halved, leaving Tolley 2 up and 6 to play.

The cards read:

WOLFF AND McKEE WIN.

They Will Meet in Final of Trans-Mississippi Golf Tourney.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., June 11.—Clarence L. Wolff, of St. Louis, played true to form today and defeated Harlow Hurley of Topeka, Kansas, five and four, for a place in the final tomorrow in the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association tournament at the Rock Island Arsenal. Robert McKee of Des Moines, State champion of Iowa, defeated Francis Dickinson of Des Moines, three and two, and he will oppose Wolff for the title.

Wolff's match with Hurley was a repetition of his previous triumphs of the week. Early in the morning round Hurley exhibited signs of nervousness and when he drove his ball into the pumpkin vine his upset was marked. Wolff completed the morning round of eighteen holes with a 2-up advantage.

McKee and Dickinson are among the younger players in the tournament. McKee is expected to give Wolff a hard contest, but nearly all the experts predict victory for the St. Louisian.

Ray Ormest of Kansas City defeated H. Lindsey of Cedar Rapids, 7 and 5, and will meet Lynn Johnson.

DATES FOR EAST'S TRYOUTS.

Plans Fixed for Boxing and Track Tests in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—The Eastern tryouts for the American Olympic boxing team will be held in this city on June 30 and July 1, according to an announcement by the committee in charge. The track and field tryouts will be held here June 26.

The committees were appointed last night to secure financial assistance and arouse interest in the tryouts in this district which includes all of Pennsylvania east of Altoona, New Jersey south of Trenton and all of Delaware. It is proposed to raise $50,000 in the district.

To Settle Junior Net Title.

The final match in the tennis tournament at the New York Tennis Club for the Manhattan junior championships, between Jerry Lang and Edward Kuhn, will be played at the club on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Lang and Kuhn won their way to the final on Wednesday.

Invite U. S. Golfers to Play In Canadian Title Tourney

All golfers whose names are included in the eligibility list of the United States Golf Association have been cordially invited to compete in the Royal Canadian Golf Association championship tournament over the Beaconsfield links, June 29 to July 3. The program of the Canadian tournament calls for a thirty-six-hole qualifying round on the first day, the leading sixty-four to continue at match play. Semi-final and final matches in the championship division will be over thirty-six holes, all other contests to be at eighteen holes. Entries should be made through club Secretaries to the Honorary Secretary-Treasurer, James P. McCulloch, of the Beaconsfield Golf Club, Post Office Box 175, Montreal. The list will close on Saturday, June 26.

GRISCOM CUP LOST BY NEW YORK TEAM

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Women golfers of this city defeated the New York team today in the third and final round of the play for the intercity championship of the East and the Griscom Cup over the links of the Philadelphia Cricket Club at St. Martins by nine matches to six. The winning team, one of the best that ever represented this city, well deserved its victory. Incidentally, the cup comes here after a lapse of several years. New York won the trophy last season.

One of the surprises of the tournament was the defeat of Mrs. R. H. Barlow of Merion by Mrs. W. A. Gavin of New York by 2 and 1. This match between the two leading players of the respective teams was the hardest fought of the day, and at the end both players were nearly prostrated as a result of the heat, which fairly radiated from the fairways. Not only did the humidity affect the Barlow-Gavin match, but it also threw most of the other players off their stride.

Mrs. Barlow was not driving with her usual accuracy and distance, while her putting was very poor at times. On the other hand, Mrs. Gavin's approach shots were not up to the standard, though her work from the tee was excellent.

Mrs. Barlow Takes Lead.

Mrs. Barlow started off with a rush and won the first two holes, but was forced to pick up on the third. Both players picked up on the seventh. By getting a pretty three on the ninth Mrs. Barlow became one up at the turn. On the home journey Mrs. Gavin settled down and held Mrs. Barlow even at the fifteenth. Then the New York captain took the next two holes and the match.

The cards:

Mrs. Gavin—
Out	5	4	5	5	4	5	6	5	—43
In	6	5	3	5	4	6	4
Mrs. Barlow—
Out	4	3	x	5	4	5	6	5	3—4
In	5	6	4	4	5	5	4	7	6

Miss May Bell, Philadelphia champion, showed fine pluck in pulling out her match against Miss Georgiana Bishop, New York. Miss Bell was 3 down at the turn, but squared the match on the next three holes, jumped in the lead at the fourteenth and won at the nineteenth after Miss Bishop had sunk her putt for a 3 at the eighteenth to square the match.

Their cards:

Miss Bell—
Out	5	4	5	5	4	5	5	4	—42
In	5	4	4	5	4	5	5	4	4—85
Miss Bishop—
Out	4	5	5	4	4	6	5	4	—43
In	4	6	3	5	4	4	5	5	—42

Halve Five Holes in a Row.

The match between Mrs. G. Morris of New York and Mrs. E. H. Fitler, the Merion star, was one of the most remarkable of the tourney. The players were all square on the twelfth, and then halved every hole till Mrs. Morris sank a long putt on the eighteenth for a win by 1 up. Mrs. A. K. Billstein of Bala turned in another local victory when she defeated Mrs. F. E. DeBoit, one of the most dangerous of the New York players, by 1 up.

Attendants wheeled barrels of ice water to vantage points around the course. The players tucked cabbage leaves under their hats, and all announced that their fondest hopes were to survive "Cheyiff's Kitchen," as the eleventh hole is called. A spring there has for its mission to make matters easier the rest of the way home in hot weather.

Mrs. R. G. Butz of Philadelphia carried Mrs. G. E. Morrow to the twenty-third hole before the latter managed to win, 1 up. Eight holes were halved during the match, the last five being played in one above par for each hole. At the end of the twenty-third the golfers were exhausted.

MEREDITH IN N. Y. A. C. MEET.

Many Other Noted Athletes to Meet in Games Today.

James E. (Ted) Meredith, former University of Pennsylvania middle-distance star, is scheduled to attempt a comeback this afternoon at Travers Island, where the New York A. C. will conduct its 104th games, postponed from last Saturday because of the rain. The former Red and Blue flyer is entered for the quarter-mile handicap run, in which he will start from the back mark with several formidable rivals, including Frank Shea, Pittsburgh runner, former intercollegiate titleholder and present national champion. Meredith, though out of competition for several years, has been training steadily of late for the purpose of rounding himself into shape to participate in the Olympic Games qualification trials.

A number of national Olympic, intercollegiate and sectional A. A. U. champions will compete in this afternoon's attractive program. Yale, Princeton and Annapolis have entered representatives, as have a number of the local clubs. The Navy contingent will include Chas. Lieut. Commander Lee C. Carey, a sprinter; W. H. Paine, a half-miler; Lieutenant Harry Leversedge, U. S. M. C., formes intercollegiate and Pacific Coast Conference weight champion, and Salvador Cepede, from the Philippines, who is credited with shading ten seconds for the century and with being the fastest man off the mark since the days of Howard P. Drew.

SAWYER AND WHITE ENTER GOLF FINAL

SURPRISES RULE THE DAY

2 P. M.—Second round.

Oswald Kirkby, the lean Jerseyman from Englewood, yesterday became just an ordinary, everyday golfer. Kirkby, who has been champion of metropolitan amateurs off and on for so long that his accumulations of gold medals would fill a good-sized safe, lost in the third round to Ned Sawyer by 1 up in the rip-roaring 1920 tournament now being played at Apawamis. By sundown today a brand new titleholder will have been found, inasmuch as Sawyer and Gardiner W. White, who advanced yesterday to the final, have never won a championship.

Golfers just went plumb crazy with the heat. Kirkby's downfall was and really the great surprise of the week. When he fell by the well known wayside the gallery looked to Jerry Travers as a favorite, but then there were more signs of disappointment. Travers lost to White by 4 and 2 on a day when some of the greatest golf ever played hereabouts resulted in the untimely elimination of old favorites. The casualty list is long and saddening. John N. Sterns, Jr., passed out; Henry J. Topping, who played brilliantly earlier in the tourney, took the count, and Frank W. Dyer bade farewell to the gallery.

The remarkable feature about the day was the necessity for extra-hole matches. Every one of the third-round affairs in which Sterns, Kirkby, Topping and Dyer went out were won by only one hole. That isn't all. Three of these matches were won at the nineteenth hole, Kirkby alone losing in the regulation number. Several hundred spectators refused to sit in the cool of the piazza when such sterling golf was being played on a links where a nice, clean, stiff white collar wilted in just thirty seconds by actual count.

Sawyer the Dark Horse.

After all these flipflops, only one thing can be certain today. The cycle of champions, who have been rotating periodically and taking turns at grabbing off the Metropolitan spoils, has come to an abrupt end. Kirkby climbed into the final back in 1911 and has been either at the top or hanging on the sides ever since. He was a finalist again in 1912, semi-finalist in 1913, champion in 1914, semi-finalist in 1915 and champion since 1916. Travers was local titleholder in 1908, 1907, 1911, 1912 and 1913.

As for Gardiner White, this active young Long Islander, who would rather nibble himself out of long grass than eat turkey on Thanksgiving Day, has been knocking at the door ever since he was a bashful boy, but no one ever before let him into the final. White suffered his first championship in 1910 when he lost the semi-final to the late Freddy Herrenhoff, and, although he has not missed an event since that year, he has always been eliminated in early rounds. Last year he lost to Max Marston in the third frame.

Sawyer is the dark horse. Last year was his first in a local event of importance, although he had ranked with the veterans of the Chicago section. Sawyer lost to Kirkby in the semi-final last year, but yesterday turned the tables and beat the champion in the third round. In such a tourney as this, golfers with reputations refuse to commit themselves by picking favorites. Some whispering was heard to the effect that Sawyer was favored by a shade, based in particular on his first round of the qualifying test played Wednesday, when he got a 78, one under par.

White's match with Travers in the semi-final yesterday was the big event of the day. The young Nassau shotmaker's victory by 4 and 2 was well earned, but on the second half the fact remains that Travers bumped against the hardest kind of hard luck. White started with a totally unexpected flash of brilliance and won the first four holes, each in par 4, while Travers had two 4s and two fives as a result principally of weak putting. Travers rimmed the cup for a 2 on the fifth, but halved it in three; lost the seventh when he pulled his second shot to a rock pile and in getting out walloped his ball clear across the green to more trouble; halved the eighth and then finally won a hole. White missed a three-footer on the ninth and halved it.

Jinx on Travers's Trail.

This left Travers 4 down at the turn and he deserved no better, for White had played a sensational game. But Jerry most certainly did not deserve more than the unfortunate series of bad breaks of luck he got on the next few holes. White drove the tenth to a tiny peninsula in the lake, the ball just escaping the water. His second was short, but he was on in three, while Travers was in two. The latter's approach putt overran the pin, but with a short one for a 4 White's ball stymied him, and in trying the impossible shot of circling White's pellet Travers hit it and had to take a halve for the hole. Travers won the next when White took three putts, and was round 3 down, but it seemed that every known jinx in the universe was piling up trouble in front of Jerry on the twelfth.

His drive landed in a sand trap just off the green, but his out was a real masterpiece, the kind of a shot a duffer never plays and a champion only once in a blue moon. Travers chipped that ball of his out of the sand without disturbing a single grain. He left no trace except the tiny depression caused by the ball, and his chip was dead to the pin, not two feet away. Travers missed this putt and took a halve. That broke his heart. He couldn't forget it for the rest of the match, and his game and, worse yet, his nerve. "I had a chance to win if I had holed that putt," repeated the former champion of them all.

He was still thinking about it when he pulled his very next drive far off the line and to the stone wall on the edge of a brook. Then, still persecuting his fate, he did something he rarely does—flubbed an approach, the ball going only a few feet and still hugging the edge of the brook. White won this hole. Travers took the fourteenth when a poor green spoiled White's putting and he needed six to hole out. The fifteenth was halved. At the sixteenth, where the match ended, White chipped his approach over a hill to within three feet of the cup and went down for a birdie three. Travers having driven to the rough over the green.

Poor Putting Beats Kirkby.

Kirkby can blame his defeat at the hands of Ned Sawyer to one thing—poor putting. Even at the eighteenth hole, the champion of the last four years needed three taps on the green, and on the fourth, ninth and eleventh the same was true. Kirkby won the first two holes, but started to lose at the third, when Sawyer's second shot was laid dead to the pin and he took a birdie 3. At the fifth Sawyer put his tee shot to within eight feet of the cup and sailed on in. But if the gallery thought these were bits of phenomenal golf, it had only to watch him at the tricky seventeenth to see something still more remarkable. Here something very similar to Hilton's famous luck smiled on the former Westerner. Sawyer pulled his second to rough grass near one of the famous springs on the Apawamis course, but the ball hit a rock and bounded on to the green about twelve feet from the hole. He was down in 3 putts for a birdie 4. This squared the match, and Kirkby's 2 putts on the home green ended it.

Sawyer, who defeated W. P. Seeley, former Connecticut champion, by 5 and 4 in the semi-finals, was always ahead. He won the first, second and third, and was 4 up at the turn. Seeley was always playing the best golf he knows, but Sawyer is enjoying one of the most brilliant weeks of his long career, and few could have defeated him yesterday.

Against Dyer in the third round White was pressed to his limit. Spectators who had seen this match only passing notice tore out from the clubhouse to see the pair play the nineteenth hole after the round had ended all square. White's tee shot found long grass, but he made a brilliant recovery. Dyer's short one, and holed out in 4, while Dyer took 5 to get down.

In the consolation sixteen of the championship division, J. Simpson Dean defeated Harry Scharff in the semi-final by 5 and 4, and will play Hamilton K. Kerr, who beat W. M. Reekie 3 and 1.

The summary:

Championship Division.

THIRD ROUND—W. P. Seeley, Brooklawn, defeated John N. Sterns, Jr., Nassau, 1 up (19 holes); D. R. Sawyer, Siwanoy, defeated Oswald Kirkby, Englewood, 1 up; Jerome D. TIGER TRACK MEN WILL SAIL TODAY

Princeton Team to Leave for Invasion of England and Meet with Oxford.

With the exception of Bill Downs, the manager, and one or two members of the team, the Princeton track athletes who are to engage Oxford in a dual meet will sail from New York at noon today on the Philadelphia of the American Line. The other men will go on the Cunard liner K. A. Victoria at the same time. Present plans call for daily workouts on deck, weather permitting, but there will be careful watch kept to see that the runners, who have been on the cinder path all season, do not injure their muscles from too much pounding on the boards.

Princeton will be represented literally by a team of champions. Carl Erdman, the Tiger Captain, is the former intercollegiate champion over both the 120-yard high hurdles and the 220-yard low hurdles. He has been bothered by a strained leg and rheumatism this season, but he should be at the top of his form against the Englishmen. George A. Trowbridge, who is also a crack hurdler, is former junior national indoor champion.

S. Harrison Thompson, who has been ineligible to compete for Princeton this year because of the one-year residence rule, is national all-around champion and also junior national outdoor high hurdle champion. He will hurdle, high jump and put the shot against the Britons, and he should land a first place in one of the three events.

Randolph E. Brown, the present intercollegiate champion at 100 yards and at 220 yards, will meet Oxford's best in the short dash. The English program does not call for a 220, which will work to Princeton's disadvantage. Donald B. Lourie, for two years national interscholastic broad jump champion, and victor this year in this event against both Harvard and Yale, will be with the team. In addition to jumping he will run the 100-yard dash.

Princeton's middle distancers are Frank L. Murray, William E. Stevenson and W. I. L. Adams, the Captain of the Freshman team. Robert M. McCulloch will go to run the mile and Allan Swede will be the three-miler.

The other members of the team are C. D. Halsey, E. F. Cleveland and Thompson, shot-put; T. C. Speers, hammer throw, and C. F. Sweet, high jump.

TIGERS IN FINAL WORKOUT.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 11.—Princeton's track team is all primed for its invasion of England. Rose Pitzpatrick, the Tiger coach, put the men through a final workout today, and expressed himself as well satisfied with their condition. The weather was ideal and practice sessions were staged both morning and afternoon. It is the last chance the runners will have to work on land for nearly two weeks, and everybody took full advantage of it. Half the team went to New York today and the rest will leave early tomorrow.

Besides the athletes the following will accompany the team: W. H. Downs, Jr., is the manager; Donald Grant Herring, 1907, and Dr. Kennedy, 1903, will go for the university; Dan Wheeler, who has been rubbing Princeton athletes since 1904, will go along in his favorite capacity.

WILL PLAY FINAL TODAY.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 11.—Miss Marion A. Zinderstein, Boston, and Miss Ann B. Townsend, Philadelphia, will meet in the challenge round for the Delaware State Women's singles lawn tennis championship tomorrow. Miss Zinderstein defeated Miss Phyllis Walsh, Philadelphia, in the final round today, 6—3, 6—1.

FRANK M'NAMARA WINS GOLF TITLE

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 11.—Frank McNamara, professional at Cherry Valley, of Garden City won the open championship of the Golf Association of Philadelphia on the links of the Country Club of Atlantic City at Northfield today.

McNamara turned in an aggregate card of 304 for the seventy-two holes. He was in fine form throughout the tournament. His score yesterday was 150 for the thirty-six holes. The winner bettered the performance by six strokes today.

G. L. Fotheringham, Richmond County C. C. of Dongan Hills, Staten Island, who finished second yesterday, was also second in the final standing to McNamara.

Pat O'Hara, Irish champion and professional at Shankamaxon, tied for third honors with Tom McNamara of Siwanoy, brother of Frank. Each had scores of 309 for the seventy-two holes.

Frank McNamara's card:

MORNING.

Out	4	4	4	5	5	3	4	5	—38
In	5	4	4	4	4	5	3	5	—38

AFTERNOON.

Out	3	4	4	5	4	4	5	5	—38
In	5	4	5	4	4	4	4	5	—38—76—152

IS VICTOR BY 57 SECONDS

RESULTS OF RACES BETWEEN RESOLUTE AND VANITIE.

Third Race—Won by Resolute. (Leeward and windward course, 30 miles.)

NEWPORT, R. I., June 11.—The Resolute was the winner today in the sixth race with Vanitie to determine which will be selected to defend the America's Cup.

Over the thirty-mile windward and leeward course off the Brenton Reef light vessel, which took the pair well over toward Block Island, the Resolute crossed the finish line a winner on her time allowance by a margin of 57 seconds, despite the fact that, when a mile and a half from home, while jibing, her topmast snapped and, with her big club topsail, carried away. It added another to Resolute's tally as regards victories but at the same time disclosed another weakness on the part of the Herreshoff craft.

On actual time Vanitie took 45 seconds less than Resolute to cover the course, which affords a fair idea of how close the two sloops are on that most important requisite—speed. A bit of luck or a bit better sailing by one or the other of the two Corinthian skippers, or a bit speedier sail handling on either yacht is all that is needed to swing a victory to one or the other.

The breeze was within a point of from the southwestward throughout the day and its velocity ranged from nine to fifteen knots while the sea was smooth, and the heavy fog which some predicted last night did not put in an appearance.

The skipper of Resolute forced Vanitie across the line before the starting signal and she was obliged to recross, thereby getting away 41 seconds after the Bristol craft.

Resolute reached the outer mark 22 seconds in the lead and rounded the weather mark at 1:21:55, while Vanitie's time was 1:21:55. On the homeward leg, with the wind, which freshened all the time, they tacked to leeward instead of making a run of it, and were less than two miles from Beavertail Light when they turned around and headed for the lightship.

As Resolute's mainsail went over the stern, the topmast snapped off above the head of the mast, and came down with the big club topsail. The Resolute was one and a half miles from the finish at the time, and continued with Vanitie under her spinnaker and topsail, for Resolute was ready for stepping when she reached the harbor.

The summary:

Yachts.	Start.	Finish.	Elapsed Time.	Cor. Time.
Resolute	11:00:00	2:53:55	3:53:55	3:50:40

P. S. A. L. Title Games Today.

More than a thousand schoolboy athletes, representing local elementary schools, will strive for the Public School Athletic League track and field championship this morning at Brooklyn Athletic Field. A total of 1,894 embryo champions have been entered for the eighteen events on the program, and a stiff battle is expected for the team championship. The events have been divided into weight classes in order to equalize the competition.

Ithaca Regatta Will Be Rowed in Late Afternoon

The intercollegiate regatta, which is to be rowed on Cayuga Lake, Ithaca, June 19, will take place in the late afternoon, it was announced here yesterday. Julian W. Curtiss, Yale '10, a Managing Steward of the American Henley, has been appointed referee. There will be no observation train for spectators, but one car, drawn by a locomotive, will be provided for working newspaper men and the Regatta Committee.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON ARRIVES ON CELTIC

Baronet Thinks Shamrock's Chances Are Good — Receives Ovation at Pier.

When the White Star Line steamship Celtic arrived at her pier yesterday afternoon there was a large crowd of relatives and friends of the passengers on hand to greet them. A tall, weather-tanned man in a yachting cap with the insignia of the Rear Commodore of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club and clad in a blue suit was one of the first to leave the ship and pier. As he briskly approached the roped-off crowd some one discovered that this individual was Sir Thomas Lipton, whose challenger, Shamrock IV., is now being groomed for the contests to take place off Sandy Hook in July for the America's Cup.

"Hello, Sir Thomas! Good luck to you with Shamrock!" shouted his discoverer, and immediately there was started a rousing reception for the owner of many Shamrocks. Some of those behind the lines surged forward to shake his hand, and he was held up on his way to a waiting automobile for at least five minutes. The New York Yacht Club had no delegation or committee at the pier to meet him, but former Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, a member of the club, was there, and it was in his car that the Irish Baronet and his yachting and business representatives who were there to meet him left for the Biltmore Hotel, where he will stay until the steam yacht Victoria, which he has chartered, is ready for him.

Sir Thomas looked better physically and actually much younger than he did when he was here last Autumn, and he is brim full of enthusiasm and hope—hope that at last, after waiting and striving for twenty-one years, he may "lift" that old silver mug which has been here since 1851 and has become the emblem of supremacy on the seas. When asked what he thought of his chances of winning, he said: "I think I have a good chance if she (Shamrock IV.) will hold together," and when asked as to her ability to hold together he admitted that she had been subjected to some pretty stiff trials before leaving for this side in 1914. He added a complimentary remark about the originality of her designer, Charles H. Nicholson, who has produced the mystery yacht of the age.

Predicts Hard-Fought Races.

When questioned as to what he thought of the type of yachts that were to race for the cup this year, he said he would much rather race with craft built under the international rule, which he believed produced a much sturdier craft. He cited the 23-meter Shamrock as an example. "However," he added, "Shamrock IV. is sure to meet a keen adversary, and it should be a marine battle well worth coming all the way over here to see."

Sir Thomas was particularly anxious to learn how work on the challenger and her "trial horse" was progressing, and was greatly pleased when he was told that the 23-meter craft was overboard and nearly ready for her first trial spin and that the challenger had been hauled out for another grooming and probably would be in readiness for the resumption of her trials today.

When he was reminded that the America's Cup is being defended for the thirteenth time this year, he remarked that thirteen was a lucky number for him—and also four, as indicated by the four-leaved shamrock. When the subject of luck, omens and mascots was brought up Sir Thomas told of a most unusual mascot that had been offered to him.

He said he had received a letter from a Mrs. F. K. Hunter of New Rochelle telling him of an old colored woman who had been in the family service for years and who had a 15-year-old son as black as coal and with brilliant red hair whom she desired to offer the Irish Baronet as a mascot. He doubted whether he could find room for this particular mascot, but he has another which is to be aboard the Shamrock IV. in her races.

The Shamrock's Mascot.

It is an American shield and spread-winged eagle carved out of wood and gilded. This used to hold a place of honor in the saloon of the old schooner yacht America, first winner of the historic trophy and responsible for so many marine battle since then. This has been loaned to Sir Thomas by the Messrs. Leeson & Duke of London, but only for the races and is to be returned to them. This precious trophy Sir Thomas had carefully packed with his own personal luggage, and more than once while the Celtic was proceeding on her way to her pier from Quarantine he cautioned his valet to take good care of it.

Among those who met Sir Thomas at the pier were Colonel Duncan F. Neill, his yachting representative, who preceded him here by several months; Aemilius Jarvis, the premier Canadian Corinthian; Willard U. Taylor, his business representative in this country; Mr. Graham, also identified with his interests here, and former Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith.

Sir Thomas was greatly pleased at the brief report of Colonel Neill on the work done and being done aboard the two Shamrocks.

Colonel Neill said that the 23-meter craft had been taken off the ways and was nearly ready for her first trial, which would be under lower canvas since it was not their intention to send up her Marconi mast until she was past the bridges and down the Bay. He added that Shamrock IV., which was on the ways yesterday, would be in the water again by today and might be given a trial spin, but that the two were not likely to meet in even an impromptu brush until Monday, when, if all goes well, they will make immediate preparations for the journey to the Hook and get busy with the long-awaited trials.

WILSON UNCOVERS ANOTHER FAST ONE

R. T. Wilson, Jr., did not expose the last of his good two-year-olds when his Kirk Levington foiled Tryster to extend himself to the limit to win the Keene Memorial by a head. Another fleet one from this stable called Dimmesdale, a chestnut son of Diambala, was brought out at Belmont Park yesterday and showed such fine speed on his first appearance as to leave the impression that he is one of the best youngsters seen this season. He galloped home in the final event at five furlongs fifteen lengths in front of Jefferson Livingston's Oriole and the Glen Riddle Farm's Tottie, both easy winners on their previous efforts.

This turned out to be the most interesting event of a day in which most of the races were turned over to the cheaper performers. The original feature having failed to fill, a selling race was substituted, so that, except for the Plattsdale Handicap, which opened the card, there was no race of any pretensions.

Dimmesdale did not go to the post entirely unheralded. A report got out early in the day that the Wilson youngster named for the final race had worked as fast or faster than Kirk Levington, so that the oralists had a due respect for the colt when they quoted prices. However, Tottie had shown such speed in her initial race that she was made the favorite, but the Wilson colt was an equal favorite with her at 11 to 5 at post time.

Runs Others Into the Ground.

As the barrier went up Dimmesdale leaped to the front, and, holding a true course down the middle of the track, soon left a wide streak of daylight between himself and his nearest rivals. He was leading by two lengths when he reached the head of the stretch, and by that time he had taken much of the running out of the others which tried to keep up with him.

Tottie bolted slightly as the barrier went up, but she straightened out at once and did her best to the finish. Oriole raced with the fleet leader for half a mile, when he found he could not keep up, and he spent the remainder of the journey fighting for second place. Dimmesdale had only got well started at the head of the stretch, and from there on he began to draw away until he was just galloping fifteen lengths in front of Oriole at the finish. Oriole was under a hard drive to stall off Tottie, but saved second place by a length.

Dimmesdale's victory adds materially to the interest in the juvenile division, as there are now at least four fleet youngsters well qualified as candidates for the honors of the division. They are, besides the Wilson runner, Tryster, Touch Me Not, which, though still in the maiden class, has shown fine speed, and Careful, the undefeated filly, with seven victories to her credit.

The Plattesdale Handicap at seven furlongs over the main course resulted in a victory for J. W. May's Vice Chairman, which won by a length from War Machine, with Tattle taking third from Nightstick. Vice Chairman has been steadily improving and yesterday he ran to his best form.

Winner Tiring at Close.

Vice Chairman set the pace all the way after breaking in motion and at one time opened up a gap of four lengths. He is probably better suited at six furlongs, for he was tiring fast at the finish, and War Machine was gaining on him with every stride. He finished gamely, however, and lasted to the end. Nightstick had speed for half the distance, but was well beaten by the time he reached the stretch, while War Machine came from far back to make the strongest finish of the quartet of starters.

Lawrence Waterbury's Ticket scored a victory in his first effort through the field, when he won the steeplechase event from Sea Sun and Blue Laddie among others. It was also a first effort for Blue Laddie, which won very handily on the flat at Jamaica. He fenced well and showed fine speed for a turn and a half of the field, but tired badly in the last half mile and was topping the brush at the last two jumps.

BOTSFORD VICTOR OVER MAN AT NET

Harold Throckmorton, tennis champion of New Jersey, will defend his title at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon as the courts of the Montclair Athletic Club, with Willard Botsford as his opponent. The latter added another upset to his season's string yesterday by defeating a former State champion, Alrick H. Man, Jr., in two out of three sets, 4—6, 6—4, 7—5.

Throckmorton came through the semi-finals at the expense of Ralph L. Baggs, whom he eliminated by scores of 6—2, 6—4. The doubles contained a minor surprise in the defeat of Vincent Richards and Charles A. Anderson by the Vandeventer brothers, with six teams reaching the round before the semi-finals. Chairman Hammatt Norton of the tournament committee plans to complete the event tomorrow afternoon.

Although Botsford has been playing exceedingly well all through the New Jersey tournament, there were few who would concede him a chance with the former Yale captain, ranked among the best in the Metropolitan District for the last few years. In fact, it did not seem possible that the youngster could pull out the match against his experienced opponent when the rubber stood at 5—3 and 40—30, with Man needing only one point for victory. But this tally never came, for Botsford started a magnificent uphill battle that brought him no less than four games in a row, first tieing up the set at 5—all, and eventually winning at 7—5.

The boys was slow in getting started and dropped the opener largely through his own errors. But, after assuming control of his strokes, Man rushed ahead in impressive style, and the second session was his decisively at 6—3. He continued his winning streak well into the third set, with the match point on the table, his uphill effort seemed about to be rewarded. Botsford, however, summoned all his resources for a reciprocal rally, and played such sterling tennis to the finish that the former title holder actually was never again in a threatening position.

Ralph Baggs found Throckmorton's speed somewhat beyond him in the opening set of the other semi-final, but gradually accustomed himself to the situation, and by steadying down eventually drove his rival into errors. The champion was carried to deuce games in the second session, and had a narrow escape from the verdict in the three-set struggle. By gaining control just in time, however, he managed to sweep through the odd game after 6—all had been called, and took the match with an 8—6 decision.

Alfred D. Hammett and Embree H. Henderson of the University Heights Club gave further demonstration of their strength as a doubles team by winning two matches, while Fred Anderson and Ben Letson continued their recent brilliant streak in an overwhelming victory over McWatty and Bocock. Other winning teams were Throckmorton and Kumasaa, last year's Middle States champions, Man and Major, holders of many titles in the past, and the new combination of Botsford and Gerald Emerson.

The summaries:

SINGLES—Semi-final Round—Harold Throckmorton defeated Ralph Lewis Baggs, 6—2, 6—4; Willard Botsford defeated Alrick H. Man, Jr., 4—6, 6—4, 7—5.

DOUBLES—Second Round—Alfred D. Hammett and Embree H. Henderson defeated George S. Goodrich and Edgar T. Appleby, 6—2, 6—3; Vinton Vernam and F. L. Baggs defeated Churchill and Dell, 7—5, 6—2; Harold Throckmorton and Ichiya Kumasaa defeated P. M. Day and S. Shafer, 6—3, 6—3.

Third Round—Palin and Ludlow Van Deventer defeated Vincent Richards and C. A. Anderson, 6—4, 6—4; Gerald Emerson and Willard Botsford defeated Vernam and Baggs, 6—4, 6—3; Ben Letson and Fred C. Anderson defeated F. L. McWatty and C. W. Bocock, 6—4, 6—0; A. H. Man, Jr., and Cedric Major defeated S. C. Palmer and L. M. Knox, 6—4, 6—4; Throckmorton and Kumasaa defeated H. W. Holbrook and Farquhar, 6—1, 6—0.

WOMEN PLAY DOUBLES.

Because of the absence of Miss Margaret Grove, who had scored a brilliant victory over Mrs. Edward Raymond in the semi-finals of the women's tennis championship of New York State yesterday's play at the New York Tennis Club was confined to doubles and mixed doubles.

Women's Doubles—Semi-final Round—Miss Mario Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel defeated Mrs. S. H. Waring and Mrs. H. V. Lynch, 6—1, 6—0; Mrs. L. G. Morris and Miss Margaret Grove defeated Mrs. Robert Leroy and Mrs. Rawson Wood, 6—4, 1—6, 6—3.

Mixed Doubles—Second Round—Mrs. Percy Wilbourne and W. H. Bates defeated Miss Westervelt and J. D. Keyes, 6—3, 6—3; Mrs. L. G. Morris and Alex Iler defeated Miss Marie Wagner and A. J. Ostendorf, 6—4, 6—2; Miss Grove and J. H. Steinkampf defeated Miss Muriel Binnse and E. H. Binse, 6—3, 6—1.

CALIFORNIAN BEATS VOSHELL ON COURT

The tennis players of the Terrace-Kings County Association, on their own courts at Flatbush, yesterday defeated the four-man team of the University of California, which previously had lost only to Yale, the score being 4 to 2. The Westerners gained many friends and some real glory, in spite of their defeat, for their top man in singles, Wallace Bates, took the measure of no less a star than S. Howard Voshell, winning in straight sets 6—3, 7—6. The Brooklyn southpaw got a little revenge later when he and Frank Anderson eliminated Bates and Edmund Levy in the doubles, 6—2, 6—4. This pair ran second to McLoughlin and Bundy for the Pacific Coast doubles title in 1916, and their decisive downfall was one of the features of the meeting.

Anderson, Chambers and Cecil Donaldson were other individual winners for the Terrace-Kings County side, while M. Rothschild and P. P. Martin accounted for the Californians' remaining tally by a victory over Royal D. Richey and William Hartye at 6—4, 1—6, 6—4.

All four of the young collegians from the coast play a typical California game. Their forehand drive is made in the McLoughlin style, with the hand well around the racquet, plenty of speed and top resulting. They serve well, except for a tendency to foot-fault which may prove costly if it is not eradicated. While their volleying is good, they are not so reckless in their charges on the net as was the custom a few years ago out in California. Altogether they show a tendency to develop the well-rounded game which national champion William M. Johnston has both justified and popularized.

Wins by Superior Driving.

Bates yesterday defeated Voshell largely by his speedy and accurate driving from deep court. He seemed able to pass the left hander whenever he absolutely needed a point, and even the keen anticipation and lightning volleys of Voshell could not cope with such skill. The home star's game picked up in the second set, after having dropped the opener at 6—3, and for a time it seemed that he would certainly tie up the match. But a hard-fought deuce set eventually went to the Californian, who stuck to his campaign of steady driving and let his opponent make the fatal errors. It was a real triumph for the Western youngster.

Frank Anderson found Edmund Levy also a worthy rival, but his own game was in good working order yesterday, and, by hard hitting and energetic covering of the court, he kept the edge throughout both sets, winning at 6—3, 6—4. With Voshell as a partner, he showed even greater speed in the doubles match, and the Brooklyn pair proved irresistible in a straight set victory over Bates and Levy at 6—2, 6—4.

Chambers in Old-Time Form.

In defeating M. Rothschild at 6—3, 7—5, Charles Chambers exhibited much of his old court wizardry and gave clear indications of a return to the form which had been interrupted by his Y. M. C. A. service abroad. The demon of the choked bat was putting the ball where he wished yesterday and his flawless foot work gave Rothschild few chances to score.

Even faster tennis was played by Cecil Donaldson, who scored the most one-sided victory of the day in disposing of P. P. Martin at 6—1, 6—0. The blond junior was going at his best cliff and should be heard from in the open tournaments this season if he can keep up such form.

Rothschild and Martin had a hard time pulling out their match against Richey and Hartye, losing the second set 6—4, but showing a little more endurance in the last and taking the rubber at 6—4.

The summary:

SINGLES—Wallace Bates, California, defeated S. Howard Voshell, T. K. C., 6—3, 7—6; Frank T. Anderson, T. K. C., defeated Edmund Levy, California, 6—3, 6—4; Charles Chambers, T. K. C., defeated M. Rothschild, California, 6—3, 7—5; Cecil Donaldson, T. K. C., defeated P. P. Martin, California, 6—1, 6—0.

DOUBLES—Voshell and Anderson, T. K. C., defeated Bates and Levy, California, 6—2, 6—4; Rothschild and Martin, California, defeated Royal D. Richey and William Hartye, T. K. C., 6—4, 1—6, 6—4.

Robert Crespi recovered his prodigal billiard form at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn last night and the one-armed wonder defeated M. Lonk by a score of 25 to 21 in sixty-seven innings. They are both scratch men in the annual handicap three-cushion tournament. Both players resorted to a great deal of safety play, which caused the match to be somewhat drawn out.

In Man-size Fists All Over America The Gillette Big Fellow

HAND an American an implement that is made for him—the best kind of an implement that it is possible to produce for a specific job—and he takes to it naturally—instinctively.

That's why, all over this country, you see two-fisted men taking to the new Gillette Big Fellow—the man-size razor for a man-size job.

There are sixteen years of shaving experience summed up in the Big Fellow, now on sale in the stores of Gillette dealers everywhere.

Each blade gives you many of the cleanest, smoothest, most satisfying shaves you ever had in your life. Then you simply throw it away and put in a new one.

No Stropping—No Honing.

THE HAGUE GREETS DAMROSCH PLAYERS

SHE COMPLIMENTS LEADER

THE HAGUE, June 11.—The concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra conducted by Walter Damrosch tonight at The Hague was not only a great musical but also a great social event. Besides many important Netherlands people the whole Diplomatic Corps was represented, while the American Minister, William Phillips, and Mrs. Phillips, who were patrons of the concert, brought a large party.

Queen Wilhemina, who is absent from The Hague, was unable to attend, but her mother, who is a great patron of the arts, attended and greatly appreciated the concert. During an interval the American Minister presented Mr. Damrosch to the Queen's mother, who complimented him on "a wonderful concert."

Unfortunately, a large orchestral hall was not available, but in spite of this the concert was an overwhelming success, the Dutch audience expressing unusual appreciation and enthusiasm for the American orchestra.

The program included selections from Wagner's "Meisteringer," Dvorak's symphony, "From the New World," and the violin concerto of Mendelssohn, which Albert Spalding, the soloist, played with exceptional brilliancy, followed by tremendous applause.

Damrosch has just given concerts in Brussels, Antwerp, Liège and Ghent, and is now going to Amsterdam and London. The Belgian newspapers were overwhelming in their praise, holding up the American orchestra as a model for Belgium, and remarking especially its finesse, delicacy and clarity of execution.

Several Belgian papers remarked on Damrosch's orchestration of "The Star-Spangled Banner," saying that they realized for the first time that the air was a noble piece of music.

Damrosch Tells Results of Tour.

To THE TIMES correspondent, Mr. Damrosch spoke with the greatest satisfaction of his tour of Europe, the first ever made with an American orchestra.

"Every concert finished with the national anthem of the country," he said, "followed by 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' and in every case the audience accepted this as a demonstration of the existing friendship between the nation and greeted our rendition with a jubilation of cheers and extraordinary demonstrations of enthusiasm.

"Before we left the United States, kind friends told us much about the enmity of all Europe against America and things American. Whatever friction may exist is political and economic. We have been overwhelmed with such demonstrations of affection as to leave no doubt of their sincerity.

"Many municipalities, such as Rome, Milan, Metz and Fontainebleau, honored us with official receptions and luncheons to the orchestra, interspersed with speeches by the highest dignitaries and of the most cordial character.

Found in Music a Common Language.

"Through music we approached these friendly people with a language which is theirs just as much as ours, and their delight in discovering that we, too, speak that language and love it as much as they do has been truly touching.

"The people everywhere have been astonished at the discipline and capability of nuance shewn by our orchestra. They were still more astonished when I told them that we have twelve symphony orchestras in America which, like mine, rehearse daily through the season.

"In one sense, the success of the tour is the more remarkable when it is considered that we encountered every possible variety of strike known to the laboring man, including those of railroad and dock laborers, a general strike of hotel employes in Genoa and Milan, not to mention an electrical engineers' strike.

"Especially we have been struck by the not only able but friendly way in which all foreign representatives of the United States have taken care of our needs and interests, overcoming any amount of annoying and cumbersome difficulties."

PADEREWSKI RETURNS.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—According to a cablegram received today from Warsaw, President Pilsudski is expected to refuse to accept the resignation of Premier Skulski and will call upon him to form a new Cabinet.

The advices stated that the reason for the Premier's resignation is obscure, but that it has apparently developed as a result of the defeat, in committee, of the Government's bill for the sequestration of agricultural products. M. Bardel and M. Kadsior, Ministers of Agriculture and Public Works, respectively, have resigned, and a third member of the Polish Cabinet, M. Sliwinski, has signified his intention to resign on similar grounds.

M. Paderewski, the dispatch concluded, will arrive at Warsaw tomorrow, where he will remain seven days before proceeding to Oxford to receive a degree from the university. His arrival, seen in connection with the resignation of Skulski and his Ministers, has given rise to much gossip in political circles in the Polish capital.

PARIS, June 11.—Notwithstanding the resignation of the Polish Cabinet while he was en route to Paris, Stanislas Patek, Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Skulski Ministry, has full powers and will confer with Dr. Eduard Benes, representing Czechoslovakia, in an effort to settle the Teschen controversy.

The first conversation was held today in an endeavor to reach an agreement between themselves. In case Dr. Benes and M. Patek find it impossible to reach a solution satisfactory to both sides they will consider arbitration. King Albert of Belgium has been suggested as arbitrator, but nothing will be settled until it develops what the results are of the direct negotiations.

FRENCH REVENUE UP.

$57,000,000 France Collected in May, $28,000,000 Above Estimate.

PARIS, June 11.—The Ministry of Finance reported today that the revenue for May amounted to 857,000,000 francs, exceeding the estimates by 129,000,000 francs, which was a smaller increase than in previous months because of strikes and reduced customs through the prohibition of importations of certain articles.

The greatest excess was in the stamp tax, which was estimated at 110,000,000 francs, but amounted to 252,000,000 francs. Last May's revenue was 15,000,000 francs below the estimate.

GREET SWEDISH SINGERS.

Choral Club of Chicago Welcomed at Carnegie Hall Concert.

The United Swedish Societies of New York, from the boxes of Carnegie Hall, welcomed with a surprise serenade or "Song of Greeting" the eighty-two singers of the Swedish Choral Club of Chicago, who gave a concert in that hall last night on the eve of sailing for a tour of their mother country. All the visitors, including both men and women, were young, with vigorous voices, and all but four of the eighty-two were American-born.

"Hear Us, O Svea," a song in Sweden equivalent to "Hail, Columbia," here was given by the visitors and their hosts together. The local societies presented a laurel wreath, tied with red, white and blue, an address of welcome being delivered by President Emil F. Johnson, followed by a response for the Chicagoans by their President, Charles S. Peterson.

The choir sang, as it will in Sweden also, works by Parker and other Americans, adding to the groups in English another of Latin liturgical pieces by Palestrina and Di Lasso, the "Sanctus" from Bach's B minor Mass, and present-day Swedish airs by Sodermann and Peterson-Berger.

Herbert M. Johnson to Sail Today.

Herbert M. Johnson, business controller of the Chicago Opera Company, will sail today by the Lapland to spend two months in London, Paris, Milan and Rome. While in Italy, he will confer with Gino Marinuzzi, the company's new artistic director, and he will go to Zurich, Switzerland, to meet Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, who have been the principal guarantors of the Chicago season for a half-dozen years past. Mr. Johnson, who said his trip is for a holiday as well as operatic business, will be accompanied by his wife, and by Harry Cahill, of the company's New York office, as secretary.

"Pinafore" by Ethical Culture Club.

Members of the Ethical Culture Club are to give Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pinafore" in the auditorium of the Ethical Culture Society at Central Park West and Sixty-fourth Street this evening as part of the celebration of Neighborhood Day. Francis J. Tyler, formerly basso of Savage's English "Butterfly" company, has staged the amateur production. Four banks in Wall Street also have arranged to start an opera competition next Fall under his direction.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Frank Tinney will soon begin rehearsals in "Tickle Me," the musical comedy in which he will be seen at the Selwyn Theatre on Aug. 16. Otto Harbach, Frank Mandel and Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, are the authors and Herbert Stothart wrote the music.

"A Thief in the Night," instead of "The Bat," will be the title of the Hopwood-Rinehart play, which Wagenhals & Kemper will produce in Washington next Monday night.

Will Morrissey's revue, "Buzzin' Around," has outgrown the Bijou Theatre, for which it was originally intended, and will be presented at a larger house.

A benefit performance will be given at the Casino tomorrow night in aid of the Home Service Fund of the Salvation Army. It will be under the auspices of the American ex-Service Men's Committee of Ten Thousand.

THE SCREEN

What are probably the most nearly perfect motion pictures in colors ever exhibited were shown last night to invited spectators at the Hotel Astor by Leon Gaumont, the French producer, who has developed a new process of cinamatography. While motion pictures in colors are not usual today, those just brought to this country by Mr. Gaumont are distinct by the naturalness of their many hues, the precision of their registration, and the striking beauty of separate scenes achieved by a combination of excellent details.

Some of the pictures had the realistic color and artistic composition of oil paintings, and deservedly won spontaneous applause from the spectators. If there was any noticeable shortcoming in them it was in their failure, sometimes, to be as clear in outline as one might wish. This, it seemed, was due to a difficulty of focus which affected the outdoor scenes more than those made indoors under artificial lights and with objects at only slightly varying distances from the camera, but whether the fault was in Mr. Gaumont's machine or the inability of the photographer to keep an exact focus it is not easy to say. But, however that may be, nothing interfered seriously with the beauty of the pictures and the capability of the camera to register the finest detail under favorable conditions was unquestionably demonstrated. The principal flaw in many other color-pictures was entirely absent from Mr. Gaumont's, namely, the failure of colors to register properly on objects moving rapidly across the field of the camera, as, for example, a trotting dog, a flying bird, or prancing horse. In this particular Mr. Gaumont's pictures seem entirely adequate.

The feature of the exhibition last night was a stirring reproduction of the Victory Parade in Paris on July 14, 1919, in which the many colors of flags, uniforms, and decorations were present in all of their variety and splendor. Other pictures, however, shared honors on the program, among them being photographs of antiques, medallions, paintings, flowers, fruits, and Venetian glass works. Scenics of Morocco, the coasts of Provence and the French Alps, greatly enriched the entertainment, which will be repeated to invited spectators at the Hotel Astor this evening.

Mr. Gaumont's process is an extension of that employed some years ago with marked success, except, it seems, from a commercial point of view, by Charles Urban and G. Albert Smith, who used a camera, and also a projection machine, equipped with two lenses, one orange-red and the other bluish-green. One lense permitted only light rays of certain colors to pass through it and the other rays of different colors. A strip of film made with these lenses, which were placed side by side, contained separate pictures, or, as they are known, frames, in pairs, each pair practically identical except that one had been affected chiefly by orange-red rays and the other by bluish-green. When the positive of this film was run through a projection machine equipped with lenses similar to those of the camera, at the rate at which the negative had been exposed, which was thirty-two frames a second, or double the normal speed, the images in each pair of frames were projected simultaneously on the screen so that the spectator received the impression of seeing one picture in which much of the color ration of nature had been imparted, for, not only would the reds and blues be reproduced, but other shades obtained by the combination of these two.

Mr. Gaumont sought greater color truth than could be obtained with two colored lenses, and worked with the idea of using three lenses, adopting violet-blue, red and green as his colors.

But when he attempted to use three lenses he encountered difficulties, for example, that of taking three identical pictures through three lenses placed together that others would be no appreciable difference in their angle of vision and then projecting these three separate pictures simultaneously so they would appear on the screen as one, with all colors blended. The ordinary film will not, as a rule, stand such rapid motion through a camera or projection machine as was necessary for Mr. Gaumont's purpose, and lenses arranged to make pictures in frames of standard size were found to be too far apart at some points to produce identical images. Mr. Gaumont, therefore, reduced the height of each frame, and in this way made a reduction in the speed of the film possible and at the same time was able to bring all points of his lenses sufficiently close together to produce practically identical images. By making his red lense fixed in the centre and the others on either side of it adjustable Mr. Gaumont is able to project all three reproductions of each picture on exactly the same surface, it is said, and thus insure the proper registration of colors. There are many other details of the delicate instruments built by Mr. Gaumont which add to their accuracy and constitute, with the main features, a decided advance in the mechanism of color photography.

Whether color pictures as made by Mr. Gaumont will come into general use is a question with a large commercial factor. Machines made for black-and-white pictures have become so standardized and are so widely used in three theatres elsewhere today that any innovation requiring additional equipment is sure to encounter obstacles to its general adoption. A great deal will depend, of course, on the cost involved, and also, presumably, on the public, which may or may not insist upon colored pictures.

KAHN FINDS EUROPE BLIGHTED BY PEACE

AT CREST OF DIFFICULTIES

A survey of Europe leaves one with a world impression of the blessed position of America and of the boundlessness of the opportunities before this country both for its own good and the good of the world, Otto H. Kahn, the banker, said yesterday on his return from Europe. Mr. Kahn, who was a passenger on the Celtic, stressed the advantage of increasing our sphere of international commercial activities, pointing out that American capital could find a fertile field on the other side.

In a prepared statement Mr. Kahn set forth his conclusions of economic and political conditions, based on actual observations in England, France and Italy and reports he had received from Germany and Russia. He was particularly optimistic over the progress that was being made in the first three countries, in spite of the fact that they have come out of the war with the belief that the effect of the after-war difficulties had been reached.

While Europe was not unmindful of the assistance rendered by America in the world war, Mr. Kahn said, nevertheless there existed a feeling of disappointment at the outcome of it all. This feeling was all the more deep-rooted because the hopes raised by our statesmen had come so far short of being realized, the banker found.

"The blight of that baneful instrument, the Treaty of Versailles, still lies upon the land," said Mr. Kahn. "If history be the basis of historical development, of centuries and of racial qualities or disqualities, ignoring what was among the most essential elements involved, namely, the element of economics, setting up dispositions which reflect long premeditated, communistic and international propensities, completely out of joint in all Europe east of the Rhine; carving up with iconoclastic arbitrariness the map of Europe, Africa and Asia; failing to temper justice, however stern, with the restraints of wisdom and the sanctities of mercy, compassion and pity; ignoring, disregarding, professedly thus and in other ways the treaty makers, instead of peace and settlement, wrought dispeace and unsettlement.

Treaty-Makers Failed, He Says.

"Given a controlling moral prestige and actual influence which at the time adhered to America and her spokesman, it was open to America at the peace table to render a service of immeasurable value to the entire world and particularly, in the lasting outcome, to those who had been our associates in arms. The opportunity was lost, the more's the pity. An eminent British statesman has termed the treaty 'devastating in its effects beyond all precedents in treaty making, destructive of the foundations of lasting peace and of trade, which the evolution of centuries has created between peoples, leaving behind it a trail of ruin, starvation and racial hatred in large sections of Europe and the source of interminable racial strife.' I commit paradoxical but in large measure it is true. Europe for the last year has been suffering less from the effects of the war than from the effects of the peace.

"However, such is the recuperative power of healthy organisms and the vitality of great peoples, that at least the three countries visited, England, France and Italy, my voyage was unavoidably curtailed and I was thus unable to go to Belgium and other countries I had intended visiting, the acute problems and difficulties of the post-bellum situation either have been left with or the assured prediction is justified that they will be overcome.

"They have been overcome in the main in England. The spirit of wise, yet daring enterprise which is traditional and, founded on the experience and insight and financial skill gained in the course of centuries, her wonderfully perfected machinery for international trade, her old time prestige based upon the justly earned reputation for fair and honest trading, her resource and clear recognition and utilization of the facts, her governmental methods of fostering trade and co-operating with commercial interests—all these and other elements have been effective toward her recovery of her old time position. She is prosperous and she is going ahead apace. Throughout the world, her far-flung activities are in full swing. If anything, rather too much may possibly have been attempted too quickly, and too great a strain may have been put upon England's current resources, which may lead to a reaction. But, if so, I am convinced that it will be temporary.

Sees England Supreme.

"I have said in London and I repeat it here that the talk about our displacing England as the world's financial centre is idle. Her position is the result of geographical, economic and psychological factors of racial qualities and of the experience and practice of centuries. In saying this I am far from underestimating the leading part which America will play in the world's work and the boundless scope of our opportunities. But we should seek to supplement, not to supplant one another. There is plenty of room and to spare in the world for the most intensive activities of both nations. There is plenty of need for the most vigorous enterprise of both.

"England, a few discordant and insignificant notes excepted, the dominant public standing, is conscious of the greatness of the spirit, of the action and of the service of America during the war. She is genuinely desirous for a cordial understanding and close and harmonious co-operation between the two nations. No man, not blinded by prejudice, can fail to see how necessary such a relationship is for the peace, prosperity and ordered liberty of the world.

"England realizes fully how greatly that relationship would be furthered by a final settlement of the Irish problem and how warmly, too, her self-governing dominions and colonies would welcome such a settlement. If there is anything which the Irish and the friends of the Irish in America can do to bring about a speedy ending to that age-long tragedy they will be rendering a great service to all concerned. But—I say it as an appreciative and sympathetic friend of that brave, gifted and warm-hearted Irish race—any one who thinks that the British can be moved by threats, intimidated by agitation or stimulated by pinpricks knows not the sources, does not know the stuff that the British people are made of. And any one acting on that mistaken notion does more harm than good to the cause he means to serve.

"France is hard at work, far more so than she is generally given credit for. Indeed, if one considers the appalling losses, sacrifices and suffering which she has undergone and the disorganization necessarily incident to four and one-half years of war on her soil, it is quite remarkable what she has accomplished. It would not be fair to expect that France, invaded, devastated, largely prevented from engaging in world commerce during the war, and deprived of some of her richest provinces, should have taxed herself while the war lasted as America and Great Britain taxed themselves.

"She is taxing herself now (by wiser methods than ours) to the full extent needed to meet her budget, outside, of course, the expense of reconstructing the devastated regions, which expenses should not and could not be met by taxation. With her bountiful natural resources, with her thrifty, industrious and frugal population and with these great impregnable interests in a truly great race which more than once has accomplished the seemingly impossible, the ultimate recovery of France, now under way, is assured.

"In Italy, too, I found that the situation justified confident anticipation of ultimate complete recovery. The people are hard at work, and Italy almost alone among the countries of Europe has a surplus of that most valuable of assets, labor. Italy has faced resolutely the realities of the situation and has refused to base its program upon the unreal expectation of wringing a fabulous indemnity out of a broken down debtor. She has had the courage earlier than any of the other continental nations to tax herself to the limit. She is vigorously curtailing her imports and has succeeded to a surprising degree in increasing her exports. Her industrial centres, in the northern provinces under the leadership of men of extraordinary ability and great enterprise are growing and developing to a remarkable degree. Her business men have commercial ability of a high order, and she promises to become the great entrepot for trading between the peoples to the west and the East of her. In Italy, too, there are many very attractive opportunities for the enlistment of American capital.

"I do not mean to imply in what I have said that either in France or in Italy normal conditions will return quickly and that everything is to run smoothly henceforth. Many difficulties remain, and considerable time will yet be required for the process of rehabilitation, much hard work, self-discipline and saving. But I do believe that, barring the unforeseen, and given the granting of reasonably required credit facilities for essential purposes, the great post-bellum perplexities has been reached in those countries.

"While I did not visit Germany, I met in Paris the head of the economic mission which the German Government sent to the peace congress with delegates appointed by the French Government. I also met a number of Americans, Englishmen and Frenchmen who had recently visited Germany. The impression which I gathered is that there is nothing to be feared from the Junker Militarist or Hohenzollern party. The ruin and disgrace which their rule has brought upon the German people will not lose its deterrent effect in this generation.

"With the cessation of the period when cheap land or unoccupied land was largely available for agriculture in our country, the time when we could afford to be more or less self-sufficient unto ourselves is over. We must now take increasingly a world view of things in its relation to our own interests, not in order to involve ourselves into the political affairs of Europe, but to take that part in international commerce which is our due and our need for the progress and prosperity of our people.

"We must play our part and hold our own in the strenuously contested field of world trade. In order to do this we do not ask or need direct Government support such as it is and long has been the practice of several other nations to give, but we do require wisely directed governmental encouragement, the countenance and confidence of rightly informed and guided public opinion and freedom from hampering or damaging legislation. We did not have these essentials in the period following the armistice and consequently failed to take anything like full advantage of the unprecedented opportunities which were within our grasp at that time.

"We should have had, as some of us had urged during the war in one of the departments of the Government, co-operating with business men, a competent economic general staff at work with well-matured plans prepared in advance for the occasion, as England had made herself prepared and ready. Some of the opportunities then before us are no longer recoverable, but many others remain. The Cabinet position of Secretary of Commerce is gaining in importance all the time, and the right man in that position could render truly important and highly beneficial national service.

Mr. Kahn said he expected to remain abroad much longer but the approaching marriage of his daughter made it necessary for him to return home.

Gray Goods Prices Ease Off.

Second hands came into the local grey goods market as sellers again yesterday with the result that prices eased off about a quarter of a cent a yard on certain printcloths and sheetings. In the former goods spot business was done in 39-inch 68-72s at 24 cents, while for similar delivery 39½ cents was paid for 39½-inch 64-60s. June deliveries of sheetings were sold at 23½ cents for 56-60 four-yards and at 22½ cents for 3.50s. In the clothing styles some more business was done in 39-inch 64-104, 4.20-yard sateens for delivery during this month, at 31 cents.

About the only kind of speculation that can be carried on in the dress fabrics trade at present, according to a prominent buyer, is for some one to make a business of gathering together small lots of merchandise and grouping materials of the same sort together for sale. He stated that there are a few places on the market, but it is made up chiefly of small lots that the large cutter-up does not find to his advantage to purchase. What these quantities lose in the individual amounts he said, they make up in number. Large holdings of a fabric are selling at appreciably higher rates than the small lots.

Goods in Transit.

Estimates of the amount of goods tied up in transit cannot be very well obtained, but quantities still on the way from mills to manufacturers or from the manufacturers to the stores must be very large, judging from individual instances. One clothing firm, for instance, has woolens valued at more than a million and a quarter somewhere between the mills and its factory. This is not taken as an uncommon case, as the orders were placed at the same time other clothiers placed theirs, and the routing is the same. The express companies are reported to be adding to their storage space in order to accommodate goods delayed in transit, as well as shipments that are refused by the consignees who have cancelled orders which the deliveries represent.

Better Tone to Silks.

In certain quarters of the silk trade there has been noted an improvement in the outlook. Those concerns that are willing to do business on the present basis of raw material costs and make desirable merchandise have made a selling effort, but receive their orders in dribs. Averaging of prices won't do, such firms state, because buyers, who were so long taught to regard the selling price of raw silk as the basis for advanced prices of finished goods, now expect prices based on the actual declines. Therefore, those manufacturers who are making a fresh start, there appears to be business to be obtained. This, at any rate, has been the experience of sellers who have put the past behind them.

Hard Coal Coming More Freely.

Anthracite distribution is again running in normal channels to a large degree, Seward's Journal will say today, all of the important embargoes affecting rail shipments having been lifted, as well as most of the minor ones. The collieries are producing on a heavy scale and, with the wage demands disposed of in a way that leaves no excuse for a strike, the whole situation, as regards the hard coal trade, has a better aspect than for many weeks past. After a period of several days' suspension in May, during which not coal prices remained just about steady, the market took another spurt this week and quotations were carried to the highest levels yet recorded.

Summer Clothes the Higher.

As to reports of the unwillingness of makers of the so-called Summer clothes for men to cut prices as their products in sympathy with the declines in regular suits, it was said here yesterday that the retailers, for the most, are just as unwilling to cheapen them as the manufacturers. Attention was called to the fact that, in the window of a prominent department store, all-wool suits were offered with $20.75 the top price, in an adjacent window was one of the "Summer stuff" at prices ranging up to $34.75. A year ago the disparity in the figures would have been on the side of the all-wool suits, and it probably would have been considerably larger than the difference between the top prices in the case referred to.

The Tug of War Has Come.

The situation in the textile trades at the moment, so far as buying and selling is concerned, parallels to a considerable extent the event that comes off each Greek June Greek. On the one hand are the jobbers and the retailers, abetted by the public, refusing to buy more than relatively trivial amounts of goods at one time until prices get more to their liking. On the other hand are the manufacturers, who say that, as long as material and labor costs stay high, they are not going to make up goods any faster than the buyers order them. Cloth ing mills and shortened weekly working schedules prove that the manufacturers are carrying their threats into effect, but how long they can afford to stick to their guns is a matter of conjecture. In the meantime, the high-price propagandists are again beginning to get busy, as is shown by reports from the clothiers' convention at Atlantic City.

Figuring Closer for Fall.

While it is not considered probable that clothing and furnishing goods dealers will apply such close mark-ups to all their lines as they have in many instances in the cellars, nevertheless a very close figuring will be done from now on, according to all accounts. The general situation, as related by travelling salesmen who have returned from their trips, is that the stores are carrying heavy stocks of all lines. Considerable overbuying of profits is expected, with the result that clothing bought now will sell at a very small percentage of profit, and the longer margins will be taken on goods bought at cheaper prices. With the emphasis on price, it is thought that many retailers will carry their ideas about the amount required to cover overhead expenses, and will mark their prices lower accordingly.

Buying for Needs.

The impression has gained ground among wholesalers of apparel and other departments store merchandise that on a very rigid adherence to the policy of buying only for needs may be expected. Plans of merchandise men, it is said, call for very small appropriations. The big stores are expected to follow the hand-to-mouth policy of buying more strictly than they ever have in the past, the retailers see it, everything will depend for some time on prices, and the risk cannot be run of buying at these which a competitor by waiting may be able to beat. The wholesale view is that the same accounts will be the most difficult customers from now on, and that the manufacturers will be practically compelled to do a twelve months' business, by which is meant that orders will string out from day to day and not be placed in bulk.

They Think Well of Advertising.

The campaign for the national advertising of sweaters that has been proposed by executives of the National Association of Sweater and Knitted Textile Manufacturers is receiving enthusiastic support from members in various parts of the country, according to the bulletin of that organization. One of the prominent member concerns writes of the plan, in part, as follows: "A working man on week days can find in a sweater the comfort, warmth and service that he can secure from an overcoat, with the difference that a sweater costs him about one-fifth of the price of the coat. He, of course, will need an overcoat for Sunday wear and for 'dress up' occasions, and by wearing a sweater for working day usage he will save his overcoat from becoming creased, soiled and worn out. Thus, you see, the sweater and for overcoat idea can be put over, and yet at the same time with the suggestion of wearing an overcoat for 'dress up' and Sunday, the knitted cloth manufacturers who are members of the association will not be harmed in the sale of their cloth."

COMMODITIES PRICES.

So marked was the downward trend of wholesale commodities prices here this week that the declines shown in Dun's list outnumbered the advances by slightly more than three to one. The total number of changes shown, however, was smaller than for some time. Prices on only 58 of the listed articles were revised during the week, and of these 40 were declines. Last week, in 45 revisions, there were but 24 declines. One of the real features of the week was the sharp break in Spring patent flour, which fell off $1 a barrel.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted this week on selected standard commodities. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Government maximum. †Nominal.

Only fourteen changes were shown in the foodstuffs this week, and of these ten were downward. The only foods that went up were the best creamery butter, No. 4 Santos coffee, fine granulated sugar, which advanced 50 cents a hundred pounds, and cabbages, which advanced $5 cents a barrel. Against them were drops of 40 cents and $1 a barrel, respectively, in the cost of navy and pea beans, a break in Spring patent flour referred to, a decrease in the price of the best cheese, and lower prices for mess pork and hams, No. 1 Saigon rice, black Singapore pepper, raw sugar and onions. The onions dropped $1.25 a bag. For the first time in four months there was no change in the price of either of the listed grades of eggs.

In the grains list wheat and corn were cheaper, but higher prices were quoted for oats and rye, and for prime timothy hay and long rye straw. In the drugs, chemicals and dyestuffs and oils the declines outnumbered the advances by nearly four to one. Important features were lacking. The naval stores contributed declines in resin and turpentine, although the price of the latter was quoted nominally. Both Eastern and Brazilian crude rubbers were cheaper.

In the leather list there were again no visible changes and in the hides only three declines were seen. There were no advances. Changes in the metals were confined to declines in ordinary antimony and in the Japanese raw silks showed a nice advance for the week after the announcement broke that brought it, with very little interruption, from the record high point of $17.25 reached by Sinshiu No. 1 early in the year. Chinese silk, on the other hand, was quoted somewhat lower, due to decreased lay-down costs arising from the decline in silver.

The miscellaneous changes included declines in hemp and in medium platinum. The latter, although still about twice as expensive as it was before the war, is now only about half as costly as it was several months ago. The textiles markets came through one of the quietest weeks in recent times. Fairness closed the week at the same levels they opened it, and the same was true of several constructions of grey cottons. The latter, although they advanced in the foreparts of the week, slipped off toward the end and closed practically unchanged.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

There was a better sentiment in financial circles yesterday, based almost exclusively on the more favorable character of the news from the Republican Convention at Chicago. The apparent avoidance of a "split" or a "bolt" in the party seemed to encourage the market, or at least the few market operators who now are doing their utmost to instill some semblance of life into the price movement, and yesterday their efforts were considerably more convincing than they had been on other days of the week.

The overnight news from Chicago was interpreted as highly favorable, from the market's viewpoint, and the happenings of the day, as reported from time to time on the news tickers, contained nothing to alter the early impressions or to destroy the early hopefulness. Thus, after an opening demonstration of strength, the market held its initial gains and in the cases of several of the more conspicuous issues in the industrial list, the advances were added to substantially as the day wore on. There was talk of "professional buying," which probably was well founded, and the gossips had it that a certain big private operator was taking a pronounced position on the up side.

Short covering added its weight to the buying, but it would be unsafe to assume that this constituted the major part of the day's demand for stocks. There were evidences of new buying in many parts of the list and if the shorts had been the only ones bidding for stocks it is doubtful if the strong undertone would have carried through the session as well as it did.

The rise was accomplished in the face of more high money rates. The range yesterday was from 8 per cent. to 10 per cent. and back to the opening figure just before the closing. Being Friday, these rates have three days in them, which is rather a serious consideration. But yesterday the fluctuations of the call money market were ignored completely. Although they probably forecast unfavorable bank statements today, traders could see no reason for allowing them to interfere with their purchases and at no time were money rates a factor.

Railroad stocks were neglected. There was neither weakness nor strength in them; only complete dullness, and they were permitted to drift along without contributing anything to the day's business. The bond market, too, was dull and featureless. There was the usual quiet but firm demand for Anglo-French bonds and for some of the others in the foreign department, and there was less selling of Liberty bonds than on several other recent days.

Sterling exchange continued its quiet climb, getting up to $3.94⅝, for demand bills and closing about ½ cent under this price. French francs, on the other hand, again sold off, going to 13.20. Italian rates were notably weak, breaking more than 100 points on rather light sales. Silver for the second day advanced, being quoted at 92 cents here and at 51½d in London, as against the low prices of 83 cents and 45¾d, respectively, on Wednesday.

LONDON SILVER MARKET UP.

LONDON, June 12.—The silver market quotations rose today to 51¼d per ounce after having been down to 46d on June 7. The market has been subjected to unusual fluctuations since May 28, when the price was 50½d. The fall early in this fluctuating period was occasioned by the stagnation of the Chinese export trade, which brought about a decline in exchange, upon which there was selling in all quarters.

The greatest decline and shakeout, however, occurred with the liquidation of a large bull account in the metal which was reported to have been created on Chinese account, but which was believed in reality to be largely on American account. When this liquidation ceased, speculators covered. Some large orders appeared from the Indian bazaar, while America also supported the market at the low level, materially assisting in the recovery to today's level.

During the last week, bullion brokers report, the turnover here has been approximately 1,000,000 ounces daily.

White Motor Increases Capital.

Stockholders of the White Motor Company have authorized an increase in the capital from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. No action looking to the distribution of the authorized increase is contemplated at this time.

GREAT TALK OF "LA BAISSE"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 10.—The French offensive against the high cost of living has carried the first line trenches. At Havre and Marseilles several groups of large wholesale and retail stores have had to give way before popular pressure and have announced 10 to 25 per cent reductions on their prices. The method being pursued all over the country is to talk and write about "La Baisse" as persistently as the high cost was talked about formerly in the hope that talk may result in action.

At first traders and shopkeepers shrugged shoulders and smiled when customers began talk about lower prices. Now they are anxious. They feel the terrible end to their long regime of high profits is beginning, for in response to daily clamor of newspapers and customers some members of the fraternity are weakening and are showing symptoms of wishing to capture trade by lowering prices and starting a competitive battle rather than staying in unofficial profit-making combines.

Every morning paper records fully the differences of prices in different parts of the city and welcome with paeans of praise any shopkeeper who risks the displeasure of his fellows by lowering his grins. By afternoon his shop is crowded. The effect is obvious. The morale of surrounding tradesmen is being badly shaken and the whole city begins to feel the effects.

It is especially foodstuffs that are being affected. Crops are splendid and farmers and market gardeners can no longer ask what they please for fresh fruit and vegetables. At the central markets every morning there is more than enough to meet the demand and no longer any excuse for keeping up prices. The attempt was made but publicity has killed it.

For the first time in five years the shops are announcing in flaming posters "great fall in prices." The fall is not yet anything like commensurate with the steady increase of the last five years, but it is beginning, and beginning is better than nothing at all. Manufactured goods are harder to bring down in price. The happy discovery, however, that leather costs now on account of prohibition of export far less than it did has led to a newspaper campaign for cheaper boots, and as among the greengrocers and butter merchants the weaker brethren among the bootmakers are weakening.

Another phase of the campaign has been a sudden revolt among the retailers themselves against the wholesalers and manufacturers. Their federation, which includes almost all retail dealers in the country, has passed a resolution urging all customers to buy as sparingly as possible, for only in that way they say can the retail dealers secure lower prices from manufacturers. While not entirely blameless themselves they are striving to fix the blame higher up in the scale and are adding strength to the commission of the Chamber of Deputies which has just begun work inquiring into the extent of speculation and profit-making with a view to taking legal action against the most notorious offenders.

Willys-Overland Votes Increase.

The stockholders of the Willys-Overland Company at a meeting in Boston ratified the plan for the underwriting of 400,000 shares of additional common stock. An increase in the directorate from nine to twelve members was also voted. The Directors elected to fill these places were E. R. Tinker, Vice President of the Chase Securities Corporation; George Peck, President of the Moline Plow Company, and J. R. Harbeck, Vice President of the American Can Company.

Victor Talking Machine Dividend.

The Victor Talking Machine Company has declared a dividend of $15 a share on the common stock. A year ago at this time a dividend of $20 a share was declared. The regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. also was declared on the preferred stock. Both are payable July 15 to stock of record June 30.

ARREST 11 IN SUGAR DEALS.

Four at Boston, 2 at Burlington and 5 in Salt Lake Accused.

BOSTON, June 11.—Federal officers today arrested four sugar brokers here and two at Burlington, Vermont, charging a conspiracy by which the price of 40,000 pounds of sugar was boosted from 19 to 27 cents a pound. The men arrested here—Israel Butensin, Louis Kortz, Henry Kushner and Morris A. Levine—pleaded not guilty and were held in $500 bail for hearings.

The lot finally was disposed of to Dunn & Co. of Canaan, N. Y., at 27 cents a pound. The Government claims to have evidence that the brokers were paid $100 each apr their assistance in the alleged conspiracy.

POCATELLO, Idaho, June 11.—Charges of making excessive profits in sugar, contrary to the Lever act, were filed here yesterday against officials of the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company, of Salt Lake, before United States Commissioner R. Turner by F. E. Martinean, head of the Department of Justice bureau there.

Heber H. Grant, named a defendant as president of the company, is President of the Mormon Church. C. W. Nibley, presiding bishop, and H. G. Whitney, former editor in chief of the Deseret News, official church paper, also were made defendants as officers of the sugar company.

The complaint charged specifically that the three men and W. T. Pyper and S. H. Love, other officers of the company, made excessive profits in selling for $24.081 each, twenty-five 100-pound sacks of sugar to a concern owned by the Mormon Church, when the producing cost of each bag was only $9.50.

Foreign Exchanges.

LONDON, June 11.—Bar silver, 51¼d. per ounce; bar gold, 104s. 2d. Money, 4½ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 6⅛@6¼ per cent.; three months' bills, 6⅛@6¼ per cent.; gold premium at Lisbon, 140.00.

PARIS, June 11.—Price changes were irregular on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 59 francs 45 centimes; exchange on London 52 francs 6 centimes; 5 per cent. loan, 86 francs 9 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 13 francs 21½ centimes.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Utah-Idaho Sugar Company, according to reports from Denver, has sold $7,500,000 short term notes, the proceeds of which will be used in paying for six new factories. Eastern sugar men, who are identified with the case as well as the beet sugar industry, have underwritten the issue, it is said.

James Hoeksche, Vice President of the Irving National Bank, will sail for Europe on the Lapland today to be gone until the end of August. He will visit correspondents of the bank in France, England and Scandinavia.

Ernest R. Hudson, formerly with McDonnell & Co., and Lowell M. Ciucas, formerly with Munds, Rogers & Stackpole, have formed a copartnership to deal in unlisted stocks and bonds at 31 Wall Street.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Prices Move Forward.

Prices on the Stock Exchange advanced yesterday, on a larger volume of business than has prevailed in several days. The greatest degree of strength was shown in the industrial shares, some of which moved up from 2 to 3 points. In general there was a far better tone than has prevailed at any time this week. This was due, in large part, to the trend of events at Chicago. Convention news was followed closely, and the belief was expressed by the majority of people that Wall Street could view without alarm the ultimate verdict. In conjunction with this there was a greater demand for securities, and even the much abused rail group responded slightly to the better feeling which prevailed.

Call Money at 10 Per Cent.

The market once more demonstrated that it was little concerned over the call money rate. Renewals were made at 9 per cent., a higher level than at any time this week, and from that figure the rate rose to 10 per cent., with a subsequent decline to 9 per cent. The flurries, however, received only scant attention. There was no heavy demand for accommodation; in fact, it was much below normal, and to this reason, in part, at least, can be attributed the lack of interest.

The Woolen Decision.

The announcement early in the day that the charge of profiteering against the American Woolen Company had been dismissed led to a revival of interest in the shares of this company. Coincident with the announcement on the ticker quite a sizable amount of buying came into the stock, which advanced as high as 104⅝. The first buying move, however, was not sustained, and the shares reacted to 102¾ at the close, with a net gain for the day amounting to 1⅝ points. American Woolen, since the market break some time ago, has advanced about 10 points above the low level then established.

The Railroad Stocks.

It was noticeable that the railroad shares were recovering from the shock which they received earlier in the week with the announcement of a cut in the Chicago & Northwestern distribution. Prices are holding fairly firm at current levels, even though there has been some talk that other roads might follow the example which has been set. The fact remains, however, that most of the railroad shares have largely discounted any cut in dividends should such be ordered. At the present price, for instance, Chicago & Northwestern common shares, even at the reduced dividend rate, are yielding something in the neighborhood of 7 per cent. This compares favorably with some of the less speculative industrial issues. Normally the rails would be expected to show a yield that was lower than the industrials, but the plight in which the railroads find themselves has necessarily changed the situation. However, the carriers have something to look forward to in the way of good news from the decision which is expected shortly by the Interstate Commerce Commission on rates.

Crucible Steel.

The shares of the Crucible Steel Company were decidedly in the limelight, advancing nearly 8 points on the day's trading. It is reported that some of the Directors of the company are advocating that another stock distribution be made at the next meeting of the Directors for dividend action, and a 33 1-3 per cent. declaration was talked about in the stock market yesterday. There is nothing tangible to show that such a declaration will be declared, but it is perfectly evident that Crucible Steel is in a position to make such a distribution if it is thought wise. When the common stock of the corporation was increased, early in the year, it was announced that the increase would be used for stock dividend declarations, which were to be made from time to time as the Directors might order. Already one dividend has been paid, but whether the time is ripe for another distribution is a question. It must be remembered that the position in which the steel industry finds itself for the moment is not particularly advantageous as regards earnings. Yesterday's demonstration in the stock was no doubt impelled in part by the fears of the shorts, who have always had a hard time in Crucible.

Barrett Company.

Barrett Company and National Aniline and Chemical were two of the strong issues. Reports were once more in circulation that a merger between these companies was contemplated. The interests behind the two companies are closely identified, and it has been argued that a union of the companies would result in greater efficiency and reduced costs. There was nothing authoritative on this subject yesterday, but the rumor persisted and was to be heard in many quarters. Another rumor which has had some circulation applies to a prospective dividend declaration by National Aniline and Chemical. The earnings of the company had a substantial rise recently and are now not far removed from their record price of the year.

A New Steel Merger.

It was reported that a merger of the Lackawanna Steel Company and Sloss-Sheffield Iron and Steel was being considered. This was another phase of the mooted steel merger story which Wall Street has been hearing for some time. From authoritative sources in the Lackawanna Company the statement came forth that no merger with Sloss-Sheffield was being planned. However, since even authoritative information sometimes has a way of going wrong, the financial district was not prepared entirely to eliminate the report from consideration. The merger, however, appears to be one that is not probable of consummation, since the interests of the companies are widely apart geographically.

The Rate Increase Ruling.

There is a great deal of guessing in railroad circles as to the date upon which the Interstate Commerce Commission will announce the increase in freight rates for the railroads. It is quite well agreed that the commission will let the roads have just about what they have asked for in order to comply with the provisions of the Transportation act, which calls for a specific return on property value, but just when the announcement will be made is disputed. The present hearings will terminate, according to advices received from Washington, either next week or the week after next, and the Commissioners will then apply themselves to a consideration of the facts presented. Some say that an announcement will be made by July 15, but the more conservative element says that the first week in August would be an early date for the ruling to be made public.

It has been estimated recently by statisticians for the railroads that 80,000 coal cars are needed this year to enable the carriers properly to transport the tonnage produced at the mines. In other words, the shortage is that much and it should be made up. This takes into account, it is understood, the percentage of replacements necessary each year through the wearing out of cars. For all cars, box, refrigerator, stock, and the like, the percentage allowed for replacements is 2.857. At the end of 1919 there were 853,000 coal cars in the country and this would mean that each year some 24,000 of these must be junked. Railroad men say that this figure is too high, as the more recent coal carrying equipment is of steel and does not deteriorate as rapidly as do the cars of composite construction. At the same time estimates of the number of gondola and hopper cars which wear out each year range from 18,000 to as high as 21,000, which is no small item in itself. So far this year only about 5,000 new coal cars have been received by the various carriers and there remain some 40,000 to meet the requirements of the roads as a whole.

Interest is Growing in Canadian Pulp and Paper

Canada has two things that the rest of the world must have. They are pulp and paper.

You know perhaps that Canadian pulp and paper shares have risen phenomenally as values during the past few months. This advance is a good indication of the sound investment qualities of pulp and paper Bonds and Debentures, for they rank senior to both preferred and common shares.

We can offer you sound Bonds and Debentures of established Canadian pulp and paper enterprises to yield American investors from 6½% to 9%.

We suggest you write for our current letter of Investment Recommendations.

DULLEST COTTON MARKET OF SEASON

WEATHER MAP FAVORABLE

If Conditions Remain Good for Rest of Month Government Report May Show Gain.

In many respects, yesterday's cotton market was the dullest and narrowest seen this season. Prices did little more than stand still. The greatest range enjoyed by any of the prominent options was 51 points in January, which sold at a high of 32.83 and at a low of 32.32. This option, too, scored the greatest net gain of any when it closed at 32.80, an advance of 5 points from the previous day's closing. The others fluctuated 17 to 39 points and closed 8 to 7 points up for the day.

These figures show how extremely dull the market was. Business was flat and interest, even among the ring operators, was totally negative. The members paid a great deal more attention to the bulletins from Chicago than to the cotton trade reports, and if the lack of any orders from out of town had any significance, it probably reflected a similar situation elsewhere.

The weather map was again favorable, showing good weather for the third consecutive day, and the Bureau's forecasts for last night and today indicated a continuance of these conditions. The crop can stand a lot of good weather, for it has experienced about the worst start on record, and to assume that the last few days have made up for all the unfavorable weeks of the past would be to show undue optimism. However, if weather conditions remain good for the rest of the month, there may be a very different story by the time the next Government report comes out on July 2.

Votes $250 Bonus to Employe Who Foiled Holdup Men.

The Directors of the State Bank yesterday voted a bonus of $250 to Louis Bayer, a messenger employed by the bank, in appreciation of the courage he showed in foiling a robbery when he was held up on May 21. He was badly beaten in the struggle, but succeeded in protecting the securities he carried. The National Surety Company also voted him $250.

Arthur J. Van Pelt has been appointed assistant cashier of the bank. Together with Vice President H. W. Vogel he will be in charge of the company's Madison Square branch in the Holland House building, which will be opened June 28.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

BUTTER—The receipts yesterday were 20,824 packages. Larger supplies, moderate trading and prices about 1 cent lower on the average and feeling unsettled at the reduced figures were the features of the day's market. Creamery, higher than extras, 90@92c; extras (92 score), 89@90c; firsts (88 to 91 score), 84@88c; seconds (83 to 87 score), 80@83c; lower grades, 40@45c; unsalted, higher than extras, 63@69½c; extras, 89@90c; firsts, 84@87½c; seconds, 80@83c; State dairy tubs, finest, 85@86c; good to prime, 83@84c; common to fair, 44@81c; renovated, extras, 50@83c; firsts, 48@49c; ladles, current make, firsts, 45@46c; seconds, 41½@42c; lower grades, 40@41c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 42c; No. 2, 41c; lower grade, 37@40c.

EGGS—The receipts yesterday were 33,815 cases. High grades were still in comparatively light supply and met a steady demand at fully sustained prices. On the medium and lower grades, too, there are still ample offerings at irregular prices and a wide range of values. Western stock had no value above a range of 40@42c. Inferior stock ranged downward indefinitely. Fancy quality nearby white eggs, in light supply, were firm; under grades values were still irregular and California about steady. Fresh gathered, extras, dozen, 40½@49c; storage packed, extra firsts, 47@48c; firsts, 44@46c; fresh gathered, extras, 46@47c; firsts, 42@44c; seconds, 39@41c; dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 42@43c; checks, good to choice, 37@38c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western, hennery whites, extras, 54@55c; firsts, extras, fresh gathered, mixed whites, firsts to extra firsts, 47@53c; under grades, 40@46c; Pacific Coast white, extras, 53c; extra firsts, 51@52c; firsts, 46@50c; other Western and Southern, gathered whites, 46@50c; Pennsylvania and nearby Western, hennery browns, extras, 50@51c; gathered brown and mixed colors, graded extras, 48½@49c; firsts to extra firsts, 42@45c.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Price considerations and transportation difficulties are the chief factors in the business situation, according to the trade reviews. Manufacture is slowing down, it is reported, and conditions are turning more strongly in the buyer's favor.

Dun's Review says in part:

The wide publicity given to the reduction sales at retail counters had seemingly created the impression among some interests that in practically no other quarter has there been evidence of price yielding; yet certain important commodities have weakened appreciably in wholesale lines and others are distinctly easier, and some quotations that are either unchanged or little altered would disclose sizable declines if sufficient trading were being done to really establish a market.

Bradstreet's says:

Wholesale and jobbing trade are quieter, and despite more seasonable weather advertised price cuts retail buying does not expand, the deterring cause being apparently the feeling that still lower prices are possible.

DISPOSSESS LAW INVALID.

Jersey Act Requiring Three Months' Notice Held Defective.

The Hansen law, which required landlords to give three months' notice of dispossess proceedings to tenants, was declared unconstitutional yesterday by Judge Charles G. Garrick of the First District Court of Jersey City. He found the act defective because it was "enacted as a supplement to the District Court act" and changes "the fundamental law fixing the respective rights of landlords and tenants." Such action, the court held, cannot be taken through an act which in its title purports merely to change provisions of the District Court act, which is concerned with only judicial jurisdiction and procedure.

GIVE $9,000,000 SCHOOL.

Rockefeller Board and Eastman Provide Rochester Medical Branch.

ROCHESTER, June 11.—A $9,000,000 school of medicine, surgery and dentistry, including a 250-bed teaching hospital, has been given the University of Rochester by the Rockefeller General Education Board and George Eastman of Rochester, it was announced here tonight. The board contributed $5,000,000 and Mr. Eastman $4,000,000.

In addition to these outright gifts, the Rochester Dental Dispensary, which was built and endowed by Mr. Eastman, will furnish the school's clinic for the study of dentistry.

Announcement of the gift was made by Dr. Rush Rhees, President of the University; Dr. Abraham Flexner, Secretary of the General Education Board, and Mr. Eastman.

TENANTS PURCHASE APARTMENT HOUSES

AN 86TH STREET DEAL

Negotiations Are Also Well Advanced for Acquisition of the Hendrik Hudson Annex.

Tenants in the twelve-story building at 320 West Eighty-sixth Street, on a plot 72 by 102.2, between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive, purchased the property yesterday from Charles Wynne and Louis H. Low and will operate the house themselves. Slawson & Hobbs negotiated the transaction. The building has been valued at $600,000 and shows an annual rent roll of about $81,000. It houses twenty-four families.

Deal for Hendrik Hudson Annex.

Negotiations are well advanced for the sale of the Hendrik Hudson Annex to tenants living in the building and elsewhere on the co-operative plan of ownership. The annex is a twelve-story structure and adjoins the Hendrik Hudson in 110th Street, where it has a frontage of 175 feet, with a frontage of 90.11 feet on Broadway. The deal is being arranged by Nassoit & Lanning. The annex contains fifty-eight apartments of suites of six to nine rooms.

It was also learned that the last of the sixteen subscribers for the Hendrik Hudson, which covers the remainder of the block front in 110th Street, west to Riverside Drive, where it occupies the block front to 111th Street, have been signed up, completing the deal for the property, which was also purchased under the co-operative plan of ownership arranged by the same brokers. The tenants have paid $1,325,600 for the latter structure, which contains seventy-two apartments. The buyers are Harold S. Hull, Frederick A. Halsey, F. M. Seamans, Dr. E. B. Petrie, the Rev. Dr. Newton, John O. Raymond, Franklin E. Reese, Mrs. H. P. Orendorff, Irving S. Josephs, A. P. Bourgsardes, A. C. Fredericks, Dr. Lillian Farrar and J. J. Henneblque.

The Hendrik Hudson was sold by the Norman Real Estate Corporation, Max Natanson, President, which also owns the Hendrik Hudson Annex.

A $350,000 Broadway Deal.

Byrne & Bowman have resold for the Realty Managers, Inc., Frank Begrisch, President, the six-story modern apartment house at the northwest corner of Broadway and 180th Street, on plot 97 by 150. The building is arranged for ten apartments on each floor, and is at present producing an income of about $42,000 per annum. The property was held at $350,000, and this was a cash transaction. The Realty Managers, Inc., purchased the property about a year ago. The present purchaser is Dr. Charles Levin and he will hold the building as an investment.

Acquires Apartment Site.

Harry Goodstein has purchased from Major Arthur S. Luria the vacant lot on the south side of 116th Street, 100 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue, 25 by 100, for immediate improvement. Mr. Goodstein will erect a studio apartment, plans for which have been drawn by George and Edward Blum, architects.

REFEREE FAVORS LEASING.

Three Properties in Financial District Involved.

A report was filed with the Supreme Court yesterday by James L. Clare, referee, favoring the leasing of the Orient Building and annex, 79 to 80 Wall Street, and the adjoining property, 114 Water Street, to the Broadway-John Street Corporation for a period of twenty-one years, with renewal privilege, at an annual rental of $50,000.

The property was purchased by John G. Agar and his wife, Agnes M., trustees of the estate of the late Joseph MacDonough, who died in San Francisco June 21, 1895, leaving a large estate.

The three properties were purchased for $811,425. Testimony before the referee given by real estate experts did not place the present value of the properties any higher than the purchase price.

The three properties are assessed at $675,000. A $300,000 blanket mortgage stands. According to the referee, the net return on the properties for the last ten years average 3½ per cent. The proposed rental will give a 5 per cent. return. The court has not acted on the report.

The Brooklyn Market.

The Burling Realty Company sold the northwest corner of Flatbush Avenue Extension and Johnson Street to the Texas Company. The property has a frontage of about 39 feet on Flatbush Avenue Extension, and will be used by the Texas Company as a gasoline filling station.

Realty Associates sold to Frank and Joseph Luzzi a four-story apartment house at 319 Twenty-ninth Street, 27.9 by 100.3. The broker in the transaction was Rose Chianese.

The Henry L. Nielsen offices sold the one-family dwelling at 838 Fifth Street for Joseph Gross to H. L. Talbot for occupancy; also the three-story dwelling at 466 Second Street for Mrs. A. Adamson to Miss C. Cain.

E. B. M. and H. Holding Company sold to Nellie Stephens a six-room residence at 1,930 Eighty-third Street.

Commercial Leases.

Albert H. Ashforth, Inc., leased to the Louis K. Liggett Company the store and basement on the northwest corner of Broadway, Audubon Place and 187th Street. L. J. Phillips & Co. represented the owners.

Bastine & Co. leased to the Hub Carpet Company of Philadelphia for a term of years the building recently completed at 18 West Twenty-fourth Street.

Westchester County.

Prince & Ripley sold for W. A. Siewers a new Colonial house at the corner of Walworth and Colden Avenues, White Plains, to M. A. MacIntire of New York City. It was held at $20,000.

Edward C. Griffin and P. H. Collins sold for Edward F. Campbell of Pelham his cottage on Cedar Avenue to Mrs. Margaret M. Leamy.

Auction Result.

AT 16 VESEY STREET.

By Jacob H. Mayers.

97th St., 419 E., s of 3d Av, 20x100.5; 3-story bk tnt; Corinne Rocho vs Peter Duffy et al; Jos. T. Ryan, attorney; John H. Regan, referee; due on judgment, $20,376.33; taxes, etc., $8,589.05. Sold to the plaintiff for $25,000.

BIG LOT SALES TODAY.

2,646 Parcels Will Go to Highest Auction Bidders.

Four big auction sales of suburban property are scheduled today, at which a total of 2,646 lots will be offered in Jamaica, Westchester and New Jersey.

Sale of the remaining unsold 2,000 lots at Jamaica Estates, City of New York, will begin by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, on the premises, opposite the Lodge, at 1 o'clock. The lots extend north from Hillside Avenue to Union Turnpike and are at a high elevation. On the west the lots begin at Midland Parkway, extending east to Hillside Avenue and having the facilities of the Hillside (Jamaica) and Hollis Stations on the L. I. Railroad, and a 5-cent fare via the Jamaica Avenue extension of the B. R. T. Rapid Transit system, the terminus station of which is at Grand Avenue, Jamaica.

The I. Lincoln Seide Company will offer 115 lots at Jamaica Junction, Fourth Ward, Borough of Queens. The sale will take place under a tent, which has been erected on the corner of Southern Boulevard and New York Avenue, Jamaica Junction, where the Far Rockaway and Rosedale car lines cross. This sale will liquidate the original development of 450 lots, 325 of which have been sold and on which 76 homes have been erected and are now occupied.

At 1:30 P. M., on the premises at Ridge Road and Rutherford Avenue, Rutherford, N. J., the real estate holdings of Cosmo Farquhar will be sold at auction, by Arthur C. Sheridan. There are eighteen plots, size 50 by 100 each.

Immediately after this sale Mr. Sheridan will go to Bernardsville where more than 200 villa plots and twenty acreage plots will be sold to partition the interests of Charles A. Moran and Charles C. Marshall.

Considerable interest is being shown in the latter sale, as the property adjoins numerous country estates of well-known New Yorkers, including Richard V. Lindabury, John Sloane, Haley Fiske and James Cox Brady.

A large auction sale of Westchester property is scheduled by Knapp & Wakefield, auctioneers. Involved in the sale are 313 lots, situated in the residential section known as Longview Ridge, fronting on Long Island Sound. They are the property of the estates of Sarah H. Bush and Andrew Bush.

BUSINESS BUILDINGS SOLD.

Delevan House, a Bowery Landmark, Changes Ownership.

The Delevan House, a Bowery landmark, has just changed hands for the first time in several decades. It is a five-story structure, on a lot 25 by 104.9, at 143 Bowery, near Broome Street, and has been purchased by Nathaniel H. Lyons from Mary H. Delafield. According to the ownership records the last conveyance was made in 1888.

Wm. H. Whiting & Co. have sold for Grace E. Rupp and Agnes A. Lauben the six-story warehouse property at 31 Leonard Street, located 24.10 feet west of Varick Street and covering a plot 25 by 91.

The Charles F. Noyes Company sold for the Wickham estate the five-story building, 55 Beekman Street, extending through to 35 Ann, on plot about 25 by 120.

Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, sold the converted four-story dwelling, 41.8 by 98.9, at 62 and 64 West Thirty-eighth Street, to the West Thirty-eighth Street Realty Company.

Sales in the Bronx.

Edward Polak, Inc., sold 2,344 Hughes Avenue, a three-family frame dwelling, on a lot 18 by 100, for M. Marburg to Louis Glass; for H. A. Linton to Meyer Goldstein 1,883 Marmion Avenue, a three-story dwelling and garage on a plot 46 by 120; for Lethe Hallett to Mrs. E. M. Linton, 736 East 220th Street, a one-family frame dwelling and garage, on a plot 50 by 100; for I. Albert to Philip Feinberg and others 871 East 180th Street, a five-story apartment, with stores.

Scott & Martin sold to a client for William A. Cox 2 604 University Avenue, near Kingsbridge Road, a two-and-a-half-story dwelling and garage on a plot 50 by 250, held at $20,000.

The I. & H. Construction Company sold to G. Oberndorf 871 East 162d Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 25 by 95. Clarence Davies and Alexander Selkin negotiated the sale.

$1,000,000 L. I. City Factory.

A contract has been awarded to the White Construction Company to erect a six-story and basement manufacturing plant for the Atlantic Macaroni Company, Inc., at Vernon Avenue and Fourteenth Street, Long Island City.

The building will be 93 by 400 feet, of reinforced concrete construction. One of the unusual features of the building is that it contains wide light courts on each side, thus assuring the owners the maximum amount of light and fresh air at all times. The contractor has undertaken to erect the building in 130 working days. The cost of the completed structure will be close to $1,000,000.

Senator Calder Leases House.

The Lewis H. May Company, in conjunction with William K. Macdonald, leased for William Rosenbaum his country estate on Broadway, Woodmere, L. I., consisting of two acres of ground, fully furnishing a residence and outbuildings, to Senator William M. Calder for the Summer season.

PRIVATE DWELLING SALES.

Supreme Court Justice John V. McAvoy has purchased from Annie K. Schoen, the four-story dwelling at 455 West 140th Street, on lot 20 by 99.11, held at $25,000. Moore, Schutte & Co. were the brokers.

J. K. Byard resold 234 West Fourth Street, southeast corner of Eleventh Street, a three-story dwelling, 21.1 by 53.6, which the buyer will alter for his own occupancy. Mr. Byard recently purchased five houses at this point from Harris & Maurice Mandelbaum.

Mrs. Charles Westbrook resold 213 East Forty-eighth Street, a three-story and basement dwelling, 16.3 by 100, which she purchased recently from Maurice V. Freund.

William S. Baker sold for Martha C. Holly to Dr. Leo Mandelstam 306 West 103d Street, a four-story dwelling, 20 by 100.

George H. Ingalls purchased 154 East Seventy-eighth Street, a three-story and basement dwelling, 16.9 by 100, from Diego De Suares. Douglas Gibbons & Co. were the brokers.

The Real Estate Management Company has sold for $25,000 for W. W. Shaw, attorney for Shaw estate, 20 West Ninetieth Street, to Mrs. Vierack, who will improve and occupy. The same broker sold the northeast corner of 141st Street and Lenox Avenue for the Pinkney estate to the Anthony Rubber Company.

William S. Steinmetz sold 1,863 Madison Avenue, a four-story dwelling, 22 by 80, for Paul S. Bolger to Mrs. Harriet Williams for occupancy; also the three-story house at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and 126th Street, 20 by 82, for Miss Alida Purdy to Owen T. Muldoon, who will occupy. The latter property has not changed ownership in the last forty years.

Staten Island.

The Cornell Real Estate and Auction Company sold for Holt & Gaillard a dwelling on Anderson and Washington Places, Port Richmond.

W. S. E. Hall sold to a Staten Island investor for John H. Madden two double houses at 80 to 82 and 84 to 86 State Street, West New Brighton.

Plans were filed yesterday for a twenty-three-story office building, with stores, to be erected on the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, to occupy a site 83.6 by 45 by irregular by 102, and to cost $1,500,000, according to the estimate of Buchman & Fox, architects.

The owners are given as the Borden Company, the Oceanic Investing Company, and Mrs. Clara E. Stetson. A large part of the site was sold recently by Thomas B. Hidden and was acquired subject to a mortgage of $200,000.

West Side Resale.

The George Dose Engineering Company, John R. Alteri, President, purchased from the C. I. Building Corporation, Louis Gold, President, the seven lots which were recently purchased from the Chandler estate, located at 527-533 West Fifty-fifth Street, extending to 528-532 West Fifty-sixth Street. The plot contains 17,500 square feet.

The buyer will immediately improve all or part of the site with a modern fireproof garage or service station. Edward M. Simmonds negotiated the transaction.

WHY IS IT

that Bronx and Manhattan lots in residential districts reach a value of $7,500 to $50,000 each, while lots in residential districts of Brooklyn and Queens reach a value of $2,500 to $7,500 each.

BECAUSE

on an average 40 foot plot in Brooklyn or Queens one or two families live and pay rent of only $750 to $2,500 a year. While on an average 40 foot plot in the Bronx or Manhattan 20 to 40 families live and pay yearly rentals of $7,500 to $25,000.

EXPERIENCE

has shown that residential lots in the Bronx bought for $300 to $500, when the section is built up become worth $5,000 to $7,500 each.

While residential lots in Brooklyn or Queens bought for $300 to $500, when the section is built up seldom become more valuable than $2,500 to $3,500 each

THE BRONX IS DEVELOPING

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Pressure remains moderately high in the South and low throughout the West. It is also low in the Northeast. There were local showers and numerous thunderstorms during the last twenty-four hours over the northern tier of States from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and also in the Middle Atlantic States, New Mexico and extreme Western Texas. Elsewhere the weather was fair.

High temperatures continue east of the Rocky Mountains except in the Upper Lake and eastern Lower Lake regions, and Northern New England, the maximum temperatures averaging above 80 degrees. West of the Rocky Mountains the temperatures were moderate.

There is no present prospect of decided temperature changes east of the Mississippi River during the next forty-eight hours, and the weather will be generally fair except from the lake region eastward, where local showers are probable Saturday.

FORECAST FOR TODAY AND SATURDAY.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Generally fair and continued warm Saturday and probably Sunday.

Southern New England—Probably local showers. Sunday fair; little change in temperature.

Northern New England—Local showers Saturday; warm on east Maine coast. Sunday fair.

6 A. M.	63	66	7 P. M.	90	75
12 M.	84	77	11 P. M.	86	68

This thermometer in 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 78; for the corresponding date last year it was 71; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 68.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 65; at 8 P. M. it was 85. Maximum temperature, 90 degrees at 4 P. M.; minimum, 62 degrees at 4 A. M. Humidity, 73 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 44 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.98 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.87 inches.

ROCKEFELLER AID FOR BRITISH HEALTH

Foundation Gives Endowment of £30,000 a Year to London University College.

TO HELP MEDICAL STUDY

The following statement was issued last Friday night by Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation:

"The Rockefeller Foundation is interested in the control and prevention of disease throughout the world. The need of men prepared to undertake the solution of the problems of preventive medicine has impressed the Foundation with the importance of sound medical training as a preparation for public health activities, and as a means of giving the medical profession as a whole the right attitude toward them.

"Since the Rockefeller Foundation is co-operating with governments in many parts of the British Empire it recognizes the importance of aiding medical education in London, where the training of personnel and the setting of standards for health work throughout the empire are so largely centred.

"The University College and Hospital School have been selected because of the physical unity of the hospital and medical school buildings and the close relationship existing between the University College, which provides the laboratory courses, and the University College Hospital and Medical School, which furnishes clinical teaching.

Pays Tribute to Scientists.

"The college and school are fortunate in having assembled a group of able men who are deeply interested in teaching and research. E. H. Starling and William Bayliss, physiologists, and G. Elliott Smith, anatomist, are scientists of distinction, while T. R. Elliott, G. Blanker Thomas Lewis, Sir John Bradford, C. C. Choyce, H. R. Kenwood, H. Betty Shaw and Sydney Martin are clinicians of recognized standing.

"The authorities of the schools, supported heartily by the faculty, have organized full-time clinical units in such a way as to combine the care of patients and research with the teaching of students. This feature of the work especially influenced the Foundation to decide to assist in furthering a plan which it is believed will have an important effect upon the development of British medicine.

"The building program for which £500,000 has been appropriated will include an institute of anatomy comparable with any in the United States. A new home for nurses, new quarters for resident physicians, a bio-chemical building, laboratory facilities in close connection with hospital wards, the remodeling of a hospital with the addition of twenty beds, and a new obstetrical unit with a capacity of sixty patients. These additions will provide a total of 500 beds.

Increases Outlay £50,000 Yearly.

"It is proposed to increase the annual expenditures by approximately £50,000, of which the Foundation will provide endowment to produce an income of £30,000. This additional maintenance will be expended upon a new staff in anatomy, an increase in the staff of physiology, the provision of a full-time unit in obstetrics and various items of increased laboratory and clinical service throughout the institutions considered. It is believed that the obstetrical unit plan offers prospects of a success which will be of value to the entire world. The subject now in England, as elsewhere, is poorly taught and needs reorganization under improved conditions.

"The Foundation has a special interest in the proposed Institute of Anatomy because thus far under British auspices a true university department which combines both teaching and research in the fields of anatomy, histology and embryology has not been developed. It is believed that such an institute, by unified efforts in these three branches of anatomy, is of prime importance not only to the teaching of the medical student but also for the progress of anatomy, particularly on its research side.

Negotiations Began in December.

"Negotiations which had resulted in this gift by the Rockefeller Foundation began last December, when Dr. Richard M. Pearce, Director of the Medical Education Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Dr. Wickliffe Rose, General Director of the International Health Board, visited London for the purpose of studying the newer developments in medical education and research in the British capital. These representatives of the Foundation were so impressed with the plans and personnel of the University College Hospital that they took the initiative in opening negotiations and made a report at the February meeting of the board of the Foundation.

"The trustees were favorably impressed. At their invitation Sir Gregory Foster, Provost of the University College; Dean George Blacker, of the University College Medical School; Dr. T. R. Elliott, Director of the Medical Unit, and Dr. G. Elliott Smith, Professor of Anatomy at University College, were invited to visit the United States. These British representatives reached New York the latter part of April and spent three weeks in visiting medical centres and in conference with the officers of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"As a result of these conferences the proposed plans of the London institutions were fully discussed and a basis for co-operation on the part of the Rockefeller Foundation was reached. It is hoped that work upon the new buildings will be begun within the next few months and that early in 1923 the new lant will be occupied and the enlarged program fully under way."

INQUIRY INTO AIR FUND.

Aero Club Officials Testify That Accounts Were Audited.

Assistant District Attorney Kilroe was aided by officials of the Aero Club of America in his inquiry yesterday concerning the receipts and disbursements of the club's National Aeroplane Fund. Their testimony showed that the moneys of the fund are on deposit and that the accounts had been audited by Charles H. Cox, a certified public accountant, who also testified to the details of the books.

The officials present were Alan R. Hawley, a former President of the club; Henry A. Wise Wood and Henry Woodhouse, composing the committee in charge of the fund.

ARNSTEIN WITNESS IS ILL.

Bankruptcy Hearing Postponed When Strong Fails to Appear.

The quest for assets in the involuntary bankruptcy proceeding instituted in the Federal Court against "Nicky" Arnstein by the National Surety Company took on added zest yesterday when Edward P. Strong, a Cleveland lawyer, failed to appear before Referee Seaman Miller to continue his testimony, begun last week.

When Eugene F. McGee, counsel for Strong, announced that his client was ill at his home in Cleveland, Saul S. Myers, counsel for the petitioner, charged that Strong's alleged illness was subterfuge. Referee Miller, however, adjourned the examination until June 21.

BLAME 'STAR GAZING' FOR SUBWAY WRECK

OPAQUE WINDOWS A REMEDY

Test Train So Equipped to See If Device Will Keep Motorman's Eyes from Roaming.

Testimony given yesterday before Deputy Public Service Commissioners Alfred M. Barrett, Morgan T. Donnelly and Charles V. Halley, Jr., tended to show that all the safety devices functioned properly Thursday when an Interborough Rapid Transit train crashed into a train standing in the Freeman Street station in the Bronx, killing the motorman and injuring nine passengers.

Joseph G. Conner, one of the commission's equipment experts who examined the wrecked cars, gave it as his opinion that the accident was a case of manfailure. The hearing also developed that "star gazing" on the part of motormen had become a menace to travel and that the company contemplated putting in opaque glass to prevent motormen from watching what was going on in windows along the route instead of keeping their eyes on the track ahead.

District Attorney Francis Martin of the Bronx made the statement that unless the Interborough took immediate steps to put in opaque glass windows he would take steps to have the Grand Jury in his county take action.

R. H. Nexsen, electrical engineer of the commission, said the approach to the Freeman Street station is on a 2 per cent down grade, with a clear view for about a thousand feet. A train under control and with brakes working and motorman alert could run into the station safely at from eight to ten miles an hour. The fact that the train skidded about forty feet showed, he said, that it was approaching at a fairly high rate of speed. He felt that the motorman must have looked away from the tracks and so failed to keep proper control of his train.

"There is a good deal of 'star gazing' on the part of motormen on the elevated lines," said Mr. Nexsen. "The commission has considered having the side windows of cars equipped with opaque glass. A test train has been so equipped by the Interborough Company and the experiment is to be made to determine whether this expedient will help to hold the motorman's attention on the tracks ahead."

Mr. Conner found that there is a signal and tripping device located about seventy feet from the south end of the Freeman Street station platform. The tripper shuts off power from an approaching train whenever the signal is set at danger. Mr. Conner said that he had found that this signal-trip had worked and that the brakes of the colliding train had been in good shape. The position of the controller lever and of the air brake handle in the cab of the dead motorman, he said, indicated that he had realized too late the danger and had reversed his power and applied the emergency air brakes.

Similar testimony was given by W. H. Freeman of the commission's staff and J. S. Doyle, in charge of equipment and transportation of the Interborough Company. Mr. Doyle said that, owing to heavy traffic and the relative closeness of stations on local tracks, it was impracticable to operate a signal control system such as exists on the express tracks of the subway. Such a system, he said, would slow down traffic to a point where the trains would be an interminable period going over the line.

The conductor of the colliding train, Anthony Scorchill, testified that the dead motorman had applied the air brakes before the trains came together.

The inquiry was adjourned, subject to call, to give the engineers an opportunity to determine what new safety devices, if any, can be set up.
